SPRING IN ALL HER SPLENDOUR
AT FARMER'S ON MONDAY.

Our windows to-day are harbingers of the glories that await the fair votaries of Fashion. On Monday next will be the topic of the hour. No pen, however gifted, could do justice to a display like this. It must, indeed, be seen to be appreciated. We therefore invite our patrons and admirers not only to inspect our Windows this morning, but to be present at our

FARMER'S

on Monday, to which all departments will contribute. It will be an Exhibition day—a day when our patrons are expected to admire rather than to buy—a day when the critics will admit that Farmer's have excelled even their best achievements in the DOMAIN OF DRESS. As an expression of the correct Modes of the Season, this Exhibition may be looked upon as the last word. Our buyers this season have visited the accredited Fashion Centres of the World, including and no effort has been spared on their part or on ours to uphold the reputation of this House as the Fashion Centre of Australia.

THE NEW SPRING COSTUMES

will prove a source of great attraction on Monday. There is probably no display in the Commonwealth to equal it. The Buyer and Manager of this department has just returned from the Continent, and America, and the result of his tour is an Exhibition of the most refined taste, representative of La Mode in the leading cities of the world.

Another attraction of Monday's Opening will be a

SPECIAL EXHIBITION OF

"OH, WON'T YOU COME AND WALTZ WITH ME."

Also gowns worn at other plays in London.

ANTHONY HORDERNS' SALE.
RECORD-MAKING BUSINESS.

To QUOTE the WORDS of an EMINENT poet, it may be said in regard to YESTERDAY'S TRADE that "the HAVOC did not SLACK," and the BUSINESS YESTERDAY was CHARACTERISTIC of the RUSH EVERY day since the SALE COMMENCED.
THERE is a REASON for this CONSISTENT CROWDING of Australia's mammoth store—GOODS that are NEW, COMMODITIES that are FRESH, seasonable, and of the HIGHEST QUALITY, are RIGOROUSLY REDUCED IN PRICE, and present VALUE that COMPLETELY OVERSHADOWS all COMPETITIVE EFFORT.
Let us SUGGEST an EARLY VISIT this morning. There are WONDERFUL BARGAINS all over the NEW PALACE EMPORIUM; INSPECTION OF THESE SALE SACRIFICES will DEMONSTRATE that

THE STANDARD ENGINE, usually operating on benzine, is supplied in both stationary and marine patterns, and there are hundreds of these engines at work in the Commonwealth, both on land and sea. At sea, where life and property are at stake, nearly all the best boats are fitted with "Standard" Engines; in fact, timid persons might naturally be excused if they thought twice before going out to sea in a boat which was not equipped with a "Standard" Engine. The "Standard" engines are largely used by our various Governments, public bodies, and companies throughout Australia, and the Pacific Islands. Fishermen, whose calling is at times necessarily precarious and uncertain, reduce their risks and minimise their discomfort very considerably by installing "Standard" Engines.
We are experts in the PREPARING of Oil Engines, and also keep a large stock of Edison Batteries, Magnetos, Spark Coils, and other Oil Engine Sundries.

THE ALLINSON HONOUR.

BY HAROLD BINDLOSS.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

They strolled back to the party beneath the beech, which soon afterwards broke up, for although Hilda begged them to wait for dinner nobody seemed anxious to meet Andrew. When they had gone, Hilda turned to Leonard with a smile.

"Had an interesting talk?" she asked. "You all looked so serious that I was afraid to join you."

Leonard glanced at her sharply. "As you grow older you'll find that there are matters which can't be treated humorously."

"It's possible," Hilda agreed. "Still, that remark is too much in Robert's style. Improving conversation is apt to get tiresome."

She moved away, and Leonard watched her with thoughtful eyes. He believed he enjoyed her sisters' confidence, but he was doubtful of Hilda.

Three weeks later Andrew sailed, and soon after he had done so Wannop called one afternoon at The Firs, where he was received by Mrs. Olcott in the garden. He thought she looked harassed, but he had expected this.

"I believe you have met my wife," he said, taking the canvas chair she indicated.

"I have," said Mrs. Olcott. "She called on me, and if I remember right, stayed five minutes."

This was not encouraging, but Wannop smiled. "You know my sister-in-law, Hilda, better?"

Mrs. Olcott's expression softened. "That is true; I have reason to be grateful to her."

"Hilda is a very nice girl. I venture to say that we are fond of one another, and as I am more than double her age, she now and then favours me with her confidence. In fact, she suggested that I might be able to help you out of a difficulty."

His hostess studied him carefully. He was burly and looked hot after his walk, but he had a reassuring smile, and his red face seemed to indicate good nature. She thought he could be trusted and she was in trouble.

"It's about the house," she said. "I don't know where else to go and it looks as if I might be turned out."

That this should distress her hinted at some degree of poverty, and Wannop felt compassionate. She was young and inexperienced, and had been coldly treated by her neighbours.

"How is that?" he asked.

After a moment of irresolution Mrs. Olcott decided to tell him. "Mr. Allinson arranged about the house. Perhaps I shouldn't have allowed this, but when he was wounded in the war my husband carried him out of reach of the Boer fire."

"Ah," said Wannop. "Andrew ought to have made that clear. But won't you go on with the explanation?"

"Mr. Allinson told me no papers were needed; I was to pay the rent to a man called Judson. He came here and said there had been some mistake. The rent was ten pounds more, and I must share the cost of the alterations, while the field adjoining, which must go with The Firs would be another extra. When I declared I couldn't pay all this he said I was undoubtedly liable, but he could find another tenant who would take the house off my hands."

"I see a clerical finger in this pie," said Wannop half aloud, and smiled at his hostess. "I beg your pardon, I suppose you didn't know that this is Andrew Allinson's house."

Mrs. Olcott started and coloured. "I did not know. But if it is, I can't understand why his agent——"

"He has been got at. Now we had better be quite candid. I venture to believe you can confide in me."

"What proof can I have of that? You are a connection of the Allinsons, who seem bent on persecuting me. Have they sent you here?"

"Hilda did," Wannop replied with quiet good-humour. "Perhaps I had better say that on some points neither she nor I are quite in accord with the rest of the family. Now I suppose Andrew promised your husband to look after you until his return?"

Mrs. Olcott agreed, for her suspicions about his errand had vanished, and Wannop mused for a few moments.

"I think you should stay here and fight it out until he comes back," he said. "After all, your neighbours are honest, as far as they see, and you'll find them ready to make amends."

Mrs. Olcott's eyes sparkled, but she hesitated. "I'm afraid I can't hold out. They have attacked me where I'm weakest."

"Will you leave the matter of the house to me? It can be put right."

"Why are you willing to take the trouble?"

Wannop laughed. "For one thing, I enjoy putting a spoke in the parson's wheel; for another, Andrew made you a promise, and the Allinsons like to keep their word."

He got up and held out his hand. "I'll have a talk with Mr. Judson. Show your courage and hold your ground. You'll be glad you did so by and by."

Mrs. Olcott felt comforted when he went away, and next morning he called at an estate agent's office in a neighbouring town. He was shown into a dingy room, where an elderly man with spectacles received him with deference.

"I've been looking into accounts, Judson," said Wannop. "After deducting your commission and the cost of the repairs you agreed to, I find that the return on my property for the past year is small. Now I met Maxwell the other day and he hinted that it might be managed to better advantage."

The agent looked alarmed. "I understood you didn't wish me to put the screw on your tenants, and it isn't good policy."

"No," said Wannop; "I want to be fair. I don't think Andrew Allinson would wish any undue pressure put on his tenants either. As we talk over things now and then, I know his views."

Judson pondered this without answering, and Wannop resumed:—

"My business and Andrew's should be worth a good deal to you, though Maxwell seemed to think that both could be improved."

"Maxwell couldn't get you a penny more than I have done," Judson declared. "I should be very sorry if you contemplated a change."

"I shouldn't do so without a strong reason. You look after the Reverend Robert Allinson's property, but your commission on it can't be large."

"It is not," said Judson, who began to understand where the other's remarks led.

"Well," said Wannop, "I saw Mrs. Olcott yesterday, and she mentioned the misunderstanding about her lease. I may tell you that Mrs. Wannop and Miss Allinson are friends of hers."

Judson was surprised, but decided that if he must offend either Wannop or the clergyman, it had better be the latter.

"Mr. Andrew called here in a hurry and said he had got a tenant for The Firs, and I was to have some alterations made. He was driving, and as his horse was restive he ran out before we could talk over details."

Wannop thought this was correct, for Andrew was sometimes careless.

"Atkinson will take the field off your hands. It's not usual to charge a tenant with needful repairs, and you mustn't be hard on Mrs. Olcott about the rent. Perhaps you had better go over and put things straight with her."

Judson promised to do so, and Wannop took out some papers. "Here's a more important matter. I've decided to buy Bell's place, and you can see his agent and the architect as soon as convenient."

He rode away, knowing that his hints would be attended to, and met Hilda during the evening.

"I've seen Mrs. Olcott and Judson," he told her. "It's very unlikely that she'll have any more trouble about The Firs."

"That's splendid," cried Hilda. "But how did you manage it?"

Wannop chuckled. "My dear, an explanation isn't always desirable. When you know how a thing's done it spoils the trick."

"Oh, well," said Hilda, "it doesn't matter; but you have a suspiciously complacent look. One would imagine that you felt satisfied with yourself."

"There's some truth in that," Wannop confessed. "I feel that we have held our own against the more brilliant members of the family. But here's Robert."

The clergyman who appeared round a corner of the road, joined them, and noticed Hilda's smile.

"You seem amused," he remarked. "May I share the joke?"

"The point's involved," said Wannop. "However, I expect you'll agree that the wisest people's plans sometimes fail."

"I can't deny it," said Robert, who looked puzzled. "Still, I fail to understand what the failure of wise people's plans has to do with us."

"As a modest man," said Wannop, "I'll own that it doesn't seem to have much to do with me."

CHAPTER IV.

THE NEW BOSS.

The evening was gloomy, and there was a boisterous onshore wind when Jake Carnally stood on a sawmill dump, looking out across the Lake of Shadows. Its troubled waters reflected the colour of the leaden clouds above, though they were laced with tumbling foam, and short, white-topped waves broke angrily upon the sweating sawdust at Carnally's feet. The tall pines that rolled back from the beach had faded to a deep sombre hue; the distance, where he could see it, was blurred and grey. The lake is a large one, stretching many leagues to the south, but it is strewn with forest-clad islets, and those inshore obstructed Carnally's view. On the nearest of them wisps of smoke drifted out from among the shadowy trunks, and an aromatic smell of burning cedar reached him across the spray-swept sound. Holiday-makers from Winnipeg had pitched a summer camp there.

Seeing nothing out on the lake, he turned and glanced past the tall iron chimney stacks towards a row of pretty wooden houses beside the river mouth. A moving cloud of sooty smoke floated above them, and he knew that a west-bound train was pulling out of the depot. Then a man came up to him.

"Why, Jake!" he cried, "you look as if you'd been up against it. When did you come down?"

Carnally smiled. He was tall, and sparely but strongly made; his knee-boots were dilapidated, his brown overalls badly torn.

"This afternoon," he answered. "Took the river for it with two of the boys, and a mighty tough time we had in getting through. Water was on the rock portages, and we had to shove round through the bush. It didn't seem worth while getting out my glad rags, as I have to take the new boss up early to-morrow."

"Looks as if he'd got lost," said the other. "I guess you heard he left for Duck Island with two of the company's rouseabouts day before yesterday. They hadn't much grub with them, but he allowed he'd be back this morning."

"What did he go to Duck Island for?"

"To prospect the fireclay bed. Seemed to think the company might put up a shelter."

"Its' early for that," said Carnally with a grin. "They've got to raise milling ore and pack it down first. I suppose you've seen him; what's he like? I don't even know his name."

"Big man; about your age. Kind of slow, thinks before he speaks; but for an English sucker he shows some sense. It's my notion he's a stayer."

"Were they river-jacks he took along?"

"Struck me as more like railroad shovellers, though they could paddle in smooth water. As there's a nasty sea running in the open, you had better look for him. If those fellows wreck his canoe and he has to spend the night on an island with nothing to eat, while you sit in the hotel, it's steep chances he fires you."

"I don't care two bits whether I get fired or no. The Red Butte Mining Company is the meanest business proposition I've ever run up against, except the Mappin Transport, which is worse. All the same, I guess I'll have to go. If you're going back to the hotel you might tell the boys to bring my canoe and blankets."

The man promised to do so, and Carnally sat down out of the wind to smoke until the craft arrived. He was tired by an arduous journey down a river swollen by heavy rain, which, throughout a good deal of its course, poured over ledges and ran furiously between fangs of rock. It had needed nerve and skill to shoot the rapids; and to force a passage over the rugged portages had taxed the party's strength. Now he must launch out again and paddle, perhaps all night, in search of his missing chief. By and by the canoe came lurching to the foot of the dump, and as there was a chance of swamping her alongside it, Carnally ran out upon a treacherous drift-log and sprang on board. A man untrained to river work would have upset the craft or gone through her bottom, but Carnally came down safely and seized the steering paddle.

"This is rough on us, boys, but it has to be done," he said. "Shove her straight out for the gap."

His companions were wiry, dark-faced, and dark-haired men whose French-Canadian blood had in it a strain of the Indian's—hard to beat at river work and travel through the wilds. Toiling strenuously, they drove the light craft over the short seas, with the spray whipping their faces and the foam washing in at the bows. Now and then they made nothing for a minute or two against a savage gust, but when it lulled they slowly forged ahead again, though they knew that to find a canoe among the maze of islands ahead was as difficult a task as could be set them. Carnally, who had quietly plied his paddle, roused himself to keen alertness when they laboured out into the more open spaces of the lake as dusk was closing in. Here the waves were dangerously high, and an error of judgment might involve a capsize.

THE FRENCH BIRTH RATE, 1912.

The statistics of births and deaths in France for the year 1912 have just been published, and an excellent analysis of them which appears in "L'Opinion" permits those curious concerning this all-important problem for modern France to understand clearly the present state of affairs. The general situation is a little better than it was at the end of 1911, since, instead of an excess of deaths over births (amounting in 1911 to 34,869), there were in 1912 750,651 births and 692,740 deaths. This excess of births over deaths was, however, due rather to a remarkable decrease in the death-date than to an increase in the birth-rate. The deaths diminished by 84,243, while the births increased only by 8537. The proportionate result is that a decrease of .9 per thousand has changed into an increase of 1.5 per thousand. The new figures, though not as discouraging as those for 1911, are far from satisfactory when compared with the increase of 14.1 per thousand to Germany, the Italian figure of 11.5, or the English figure of 11.6.

The analysis of the local statistics yields the following general conclusions:—The process of depopulation is most serious in the Midi and the basin of the Garonne, whose 10 departments have lost 7840 inhabitants (emigration and immigration excluded) in 1912. Since 1896 the population of this extensive district has fallen from 4,190,200 to 3,769,836, a loss of 420,364 inhabitants, which is equivalent to that of an ordinary department. Normandy is the other large division in which depopulation continues. Since 1896 the four Normandy departments of Eure, Calvados, Manche, and Orne have lost 100,000 inhabitants. The districts which record a considerable increase in population are the manufacturing departments of Pas de Calais and Nord, and the western industrial district round Belfort and Nancy. Yet it is Brittany which heads the list of the fertile provinces of France, for its excess of births over deaths in the five departments amounted in 1912 to over 17,000. Of the total excess of births over deaths, 57,911, no less than 43,023 come from nine departments. Brest, Flanders, and Nancy are the "centres of repopulation," the valleys of the Garonne and the Rhone are the centres of depopulation.

ARTISTIC IMPORTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The importation of works of art into the United States yearly assumes more astounding proportions. The French "Moniteur Officiel du Commerce" gives the total value of such imports into the U.S.A. for 1912 as 60,739,776 dols., well over 12 million pounds. The corresponding figures for 1911 were only 27,443,374 dols., and for 1910 only 19½ million dollars. Thus in less than three years the importations have trebled in amount. Examination of the figures shows that they have remained practically stationary for modern works of art. Americans have a decided preference for old masters and ancient objects d'art in general, and the amount of these imported has risen in one year from 17 to 58 million dollars. As to the countries from which the works of art were imported to America, France, which in 1911 headed the list with nine million dollars, is now second with 20 millions, England having increased her export in the same time from 8½ millions to nearly 36 million dollars. Germany takes third place, at a long interval, with 1,838,000 dollars. Next comes Italy, whose stringent laws concerning the exportation of works of art doubtless account for the figure of 801,000 dollars; and last come Belgium and Holland with a total of 173,000 dollars. In the case of France and England, whose exports form nineteen-twentieths of the total, the increase is chiefly in exports of antique furniture and books.

THE RAND GOLD OUTPUT.

The gold mines of the Rand, where the strike of miners is now causing much anxiety, contribute more than a third of the total annual output of gold in the world. In 1885, when the Witwatersrand reef was discovered, the value of the year's output of gold was just over £6000. Last year the total value, including a few mines outside the Rand area, was £38,757,560. A few of the "outcrop" mines are now nearing the end of their life, but the deep-level mines have many years of life before them. Some of these mines are now working more than 4000ft deep, and the extraordinary regularity of the reef is still maintained. The largest mill on the Rand is on the Randfontein Central property, where a thousand-stamp battery has been erected. Practically all the unskilled labour on a Rand mine is done by natives, the white miners supervising the loading of the trucks and managing the rock-drills. But the work is exhausting, and although wages are high as compared with England, the cost of living goes far to neutralise this. Married and single quarters are provided for the miners, and they get their meals at the mine boarding-house. On the more central mines the men can easily get into Johannesburg in the evenings; the famous Robinson mine is only a few minutes' walk or tram ride from the town. But on the outer mines on the East and West Rand, the miners' life is often a very quiet and monotonous one. Football is the miners' favourite recreation.

FLAGSHIPS THREE.

The spirit which led to the establishment of an Australian navy has found its latest and ablest interpreter to the world in Mr. C. E. W. Bean, whose "Flagships Three" should dispel any lingering doubts that may exist elsewhere about our motives and aspirations in this regard. Not that Mr. Bean's book is a kind of political tract; far from it, indeed. Its primary purpose is to give a very graphic account of certain phases of naval life, but through it all runs the moral that the Australian navy is the logical outcome of a development which has lasted more than a thousand years, and whose end is not yet. The "Flagships Three" are an old Viking galley dug up on the Norwegian shore; H.M.S. Powerful, formerly of the Australian station, on which the author was a passenger when it sailed to meet the American fleet; and H.M.A.S. Australia, the first flagship of the Royal Australian navy. The connection between the three is perhaps not very obvious until we read Mr. Bean's book. Then we see.

First for the nameless flagship which now lies in Christiania Museum after being buried for ten centuries near Gokstad. She is a ship in which some of the Vikings once sailed to harry the coast of England; she was only preserved because some forgotten chief was buried in her, and now she lies there to help the author to point a moral and adorn a tale. "We were expecting," he writes, "to find something rough-hewn, awkwardly shaped, bulky, clumsily fitted with a few rough expedients. What we saw was a long, lightly-built galley, as graceful as a swan, shaped to lines as delicate as those of the P. and O. liner at Circular Quay. The thin bow curved away at a delicate angle, bluffed out gradually above, and curved in lightly beneath, until the bottom amidships was almost as flat as that of a modern steamship. There was no clumsy, blunt-ended stern; the same delicate lines as those at the bow swept up to the point of the stern as clearly as in the ferries that ply from Sydney to Manly."

And the men who manned this old fighting ship—who were they? They were our ancestors. To this very day the resemblance between their descendants on either side of the North Sea is striking. In appearance, voice, way of speaking, names, and everything else the common stock is to be seen. And the way in which British blood received the infusion affords a curious parallel to an experience that might very easily befall Australia in time to come. "It was after more than three hundred and fifty years of rule in Britain that the Romans were faced with a formidable danger nearer home. The Goths were threatening Italy itself. To meet the danger the scattered forces of the Empire had to be concentrated, and the garrison in Britain was temporarily recalled. It was to be sent back, as a matter of course, when the danger at home was over. I suppose not one in a thousand amongst those that went and those that saw them go realised that they would never see Britain again. But that day of return never came. It was not long before that there appeared off the British coasts wicked-looking ships carrying down the seas our ancestors." For Britain read Australia; for Rome Britain, and the lesson is obvious.

The second flagship is our old friend the Powerful. The author was aboard on her cruise to greet the American fleet, and this portion of the book is devoted to a very interesting account of the works and days of a modern man-of-war. Mr. Bean has the faculty of vivid description developed to an extraordinary degree. Even where he writes of such matter-of-fact things as the steam properties of coal or the intricacies of machinery he contrives to introduce an intimate and personal touch, which invests them with an unexpected appeal. The comparison with Kipling is obvious, but misleading. The method and the effect are different; the one point in common is that both are aware of the rhythmic romance of discipline whether in men or machinery.

The third section of the book has for its central motif the launch of H.M.A.S. Australia, but it is much more than that. It explains the whole significance of a local Australian navy, and contains the most satisfactory statement of the "White Australia" policy we have yet read. The maintenance of the latter is inseparably bound up in the existence of the former. "Australia has realised within the last six years that if she is to maintain the White Australia policy she must take steps to bolster it by immigration; and, secondly, to support it by defence. The White Australia policy from the first day of its enunciation has, of course, always depended really on defence. Although it is an Australian Parliament that passed the laws against the Asiatic immigration, and Australian Custom-house officers and policemen that discover Chinamen stowed in ships' holds where tea-chests ought to be, and send them back to China again, the only thing that has stood between Australia and immediate protest from the countries to which these immigrants belong is the navy defending Australia. That navy . . . was wholly English. The Australian has since realised that it must be, at least in part, his own. And that is the meaning of the third flagship."

So Mr. Bean explains why the Australian ships are being built; he also describes how and where, and on the once much-debated question as to whether the Australian is of the stuff of which sailors are made he quotes the opinion of a British officer: "You want to know if the Australian seaman is like the American? I should say not. I should rather say that whenever he gets alongside a British seaman his one object is to show himself a smarter man. I should say that, so far from resembling the Americans, the Australian seamen are at the opposite pole in many ways. Those I have known would, if anything, set an example in smartness to our own men. The Australian seamen are wonderfully quick to learn. They are better educated, to start with; and the result is that it does not take so long to train them into skilled and responsible work as it does with the average man in the Royal Navy. That, of course, solves one difficulty in the manning of ships. So far from the Australians showing any disinclination to remain in the service, the thing I have chiefly noticed in them is that they are so constantly anxious to remain in the service. . . . The Australians I have come across, if they have a fault, suffer from over-keenness. I mean a man is apt to think as soon as he has passed an examination and qualified that he ought to be promoted at once. They are quick in getting through the theory, and the Australian doesn't seem to believe in the value of experience. He cannot understand why it is, when he is qualified, that he does not immediately get a step. But if that is a fault it is a fault on the right side. I do not think that in discipline the Australian seaman shows any fault at all. So long as an officer knows his job, and shows that he knows it, he will have no trouble at all in the matter of discipline. I do not think it would do to put in charge of them a man who does not know his job; but after all there is nothing wrong in that. It is the officer's business to be competent; and given competent officers the discipline of the Royal Australian Navy will not leave any thing to be desired." All of which is a comforting testimonial after some of the less-informed but gloomier forebodings we have heard.

And thus "it is no accident that the people of Australia are the descendants of Danes the Norse and Frisians and Jutes and Englishmen; it is no accident that the people who came to the greatest island in the world were an island people; it is no accident that there exists the Royal Navy, or that it managed to keep Australia safe during the long one hundred and twenty-five years of its infancy, or that Australia has at last made a start with a navy of her own, with which she will help to defend herself, and these other sea lands in which the old sea-people during a thousand years has made its home. . . . The first flagship was the reason for the second, and the second was the reason for the third, and there's the sum of it." (Published by Alston Rivers.)

LITTLE TRAVELS.

Besides being a politician, a publicist, a poet, a novelist, an essayist, and a writer on military subjects, Mr. Hilaire Belloc is also a topographer of parts, and an ardent worshipper of pedestrian exercise on the countryside. In "The Stane Street" he has turned the latter qualities to good account. It is a kind of detective story, in which the object of his search was not a criminal or a hidden treasure, but the route of an old Roman road.

"The Stane Street" was one of those great Roman arteries of traffic whose course has for great intervals been lost. It ran from the southern end of London Bridge to Chichester, in Sussex. Where did it go in the meanwhile? This is the problem Mr. Belloc set himself, and its solution is a masterpiece of inductive reasoning. He first examines the general objects of Roman roadmaking, and applies them to the principles of modern engineering. In the light of these facts he is able to forecast with a fair degree of certainty where the Stane street would be likely to go, remembering always that, unlike most Roman roads in Britain, it was built for military, and not for commercial, purposes. It is extraordinary how often his conjectures were borne out by a visit to the locality where in the fields and byways remains would be found to correspond to the link required. It is a fascinating inquiry, which Mr. Belloc's experienced pen invests with a redoubled interest. (Constable and Co.)

The Moselle, which Mr. Charles Tower describes in a pleasant book, repays the attentions of historian, antiquarian, and pleasure-seeker alike. "Woman-like, she is a succession of contrasts and changes." From her source in the Vosges to where she pours her waters into the ampler flood of the Rhine her valley is rich in stories of the past, and the smiling vineyards and sunny slopes have been the scene of some of the most bloodthirsty encounters on European soil. The chronicle of the Moselle includes "the horrible history of the Thirty Years' War and all the records of massacre and pillage down to the day when Frederick Charles swept with his guns westward to the siege of Metz. All the storms of all the wars from Caesar's to Moltke's have swept over Moselle: she has not come scathless through nineteen hundred years of tempest, but she has preserved her individuality, and added to her beauty the tender grace of a day that is dead." Mr. Tower's letterpress and the pictures of Mr. Lionel Edwards show that she has not failed of worthy interpreters. (Constable and Co.)

"The Loire," by Douglas Goldring, with illustrations by A. L. Collins, is a companion volume with an interesting account of France's greatest river. Its geographical and commercial importance is great. Its valley was the scene of the exploits of Joan of Arc, and of the heroic hopeless struggle which marked the close of the Franco-Prussian war. "He who follows the Loire's course from the source to the mouth has the experience of travelling right up and through the heart of France, of seeing some of its finest mountain scenery, some of its most desolate plains, and finally some of its richest territories in that district which has so often been called 'The Garden of France.' The Loire Valley is an epitome of the whole country. Beginning where Provencal is a language more widely spoken than French, it flows to within a two hours' railway journey of Paris, then turns westward towards the ancient and powerful capital city of Brittany—Nantes—passing meanwhile through a country rich in those wonderful chateaux which have made Touraine famous throughout Europe. Certainly, more than any other river in France, the Loire justifies the appellation of 'the national river.'" (Constable and Co.)

SEX ANTAGONISM.

The latest to essay the formidable task of analysing the causes and the consequences of modern sex-warfare is Mr. Walter Heape, F.R.S., whose "Sex Antagonism" traces its development, and touches upon its present-day manifestations. The author points out that to-day all society is permeated by a spirit of unrest, whose origin can be attributed to three sources—racial antagonism, class antagonism, and sex antagonism—and of these three the last named is the most dangerous.

"Sex antagonism," he writes, "is a family war, and as family strife leads to the most bitter of all quarrels, so this war threatens to lead to enmity which may last for many years, and work untold evil on the nation. For that reason it is the most hateful of all the three forms of antagonism I have mentioned. . . . To most of us a sex war appears to be an entirely new thing. For fifty years we may have noted the gradual growth of opinions which have led to a more or less indefinite alteration in the tone of the sexes to each other; for the last twenty-five years we may have recognised just cause for that alteration, and some of the advantages to be derived from it; but of late we have been face to face with strife as selfish, as brutal, as bitter, and as unrestrained as that shown in any class war between man alone, and man's opinion of woman has been definitely modified—his attitude towards her as an integral part of society can never be the same again." In this Mr. Heape is clearly right, but woman will doubtless add to his conclusion, "and a very good thing too!" However, apparently the author believes that this sex antagonism is deeply involved in the question of "the superfluous female." Militant suffragism and similar manifestations are simply the outlet for energies which in a natural state would find expression in other ways. In the sex-war the standard-bearers are the spinsters. "Although," he declares, "there are many married women enrolled amongst the suffragist party, women who would embrace the cause of any who are unhappy or needing help, the bulk of those who take an active part in the movement are undoubtedly spinsters; a dissatisfied, and, we may assume, an unsatisfied class of women." Many will object alike to Mr. Heape's premises and to his conclusion.

However, Mr. Heape is not merely concerned with suffragism; the greater part of the book is in effect a criticism of Dr. Frazer's "Totemism and Exogamy," and he questions many of the latter's views. In particular he cannot agree with Dr. Frazer's contention that savage races are ignorant of the physical causes of parentage, although, in Australia, at any rate, local observers support Dr. Frazer's theory. Mr. Heape longs for a lady anthropologist who could find out what savage women really believe on certain matters, and it is curious that while women have successfully interested themselves in most professions and sciences, they should altogether have neglected that of anthropology. (Constable.)

HISTORY FOR THE YOUNG.

The path of learning is made easy for the child of to-day. Most of us can remember when the history lesson consisted of a string of dates, and geography resolved itself into the memorising of innumerable names. Each subject was a weariness to the flesh, and apparently it never entered the heads of those responsible for text-books that they might be made a source of pleasure as well as of profit. Now all that has changed, and the modern history book combines amusement with instruction, to the greater advantage of its reader.

Typical instances of this are "Georgian England," by S. Cunnington, and "In Federal Times," by E. M. Tappan. In each of these dates and lists of Kings and hard unpalatable facts are conspicuous by their absence. Each rather tries to give a general account of the age with which it deals. Each devotes much space to pictures of contemporary life, with its manners, customs, amusements, and so forth, and clothes the dry-bones of bygone years with a living appeal. In each there are numerous illustrations, and Mr. Tappan has had the happy idea of reproducing old woodcuts and illuminations, which both point the moral and adorn the tale. (Harrap and Co.).

"Stories of the British Empire," by A. M. Machan, proceeds on rather a different principle. The author here does not attempt to give any comprehensive picture of a single epoch, but takes a number of outstanding incidents in the chronicle of Britain, and describes them in a simple yet graphic fashion. Beginning with the tale of Boadicea, he goes on through the centuries up to the death of Edward VII., treating of about fifty salient events, and the child who reads these will form a better idea of his country's past than he could glean from many a more pretentious manual. (Elliott, Stock, and Co.)

SOME NEW NOVELS.

Some years ago, in "The Yellow Peril," Mr. M. P. Shiel wrote a book, in which he described the last great fight for world supremacy between West and East. Since then he has had many imitators, and now in "The Dragon" he himself joins their number. The plot of "The Dragon" is in all essentials the same as that of "The Yellow Peril," with the difference that the scientific inventions of recent years have enabled Mr. Shiel to paint his Armageddon in more lurid colours. There are two supermen representing East and West, Li Yu Ku and "Teddy," Prince of Wales. These have been rivals at school, and later their rivalry displays itself on a wider stage. Li Yu Ku secretly organises China, and while doing so cunningly embroils Europe. First, England and Germany declare war, and later the rest of the civilised world join in the fray. In the end England is victorious, and when all are exhausted, bankrupt and decimated from the struggle, Li Yu Ku begins his tremendous invasion. His yellow hordes overrun Europe, and the very existence of western civilisation is threatened. Fortunately a wonderful airship, and an invention—"The Red-like Ray," which strikes blind all whom it reaches—enables the Prince to save the world and stem the Chinese tide. There are, moreover, two superwomen, Eulalia Bayley and Oyone, the Prince's good and evil genii respectively, who are deeply involved in the history of these stirring years. Mr. Shiel has evolved rather a mannered style, and he refuses to be trammelled by any prosaic considerations of probability, but he has written a very exciting book, which is almost as good as its predecessor. (Grant Richards and Co.)

The latest production of the local "Bookstall" series is "The Calling Voice," by E. F. Christie. The theme is the time-honoured triumph of Nature over the more sophisticated pleasures of the city. A young farmer marries a town-bred girl, and takes her to live with him out back. However, the delights of rusticity pall before very long, and the pair shift their quarters to the metropolis, where the lady's craving for society and excitement can be indulged. Gradually she becomes even more tired of the giddy round of pleasure than she was of the monotony of the bush, and they shake the dust of cities off their feet to return to the once despised life in the country. The moral is an excellent one, and will be welcomed by advocates of decentralisation. The humorous element is supplied by various society folk, who are seen to greater advantage in the ballroom than on the land. (The N.S.W. Bookstall Co.)

"Jewels in Brass," by Jittie Horlick, is a curious story, which starts in a promising vein, but develops into the usual triangular situation of the husband, the wife, and the lover. In bygone ages, before the continent of Atlantis was swallowed by the sea, a prince loved a dancing girl, and lost her before she could become his bride. Throughout the centuries their reincarnated souls seek for each other and sometimes meet, but the fulness of love is ever denied them. At last, in the prosaic twentieth century they recognise each other in the bodies of a young Englishman and Antonia Hext, the offspring of a romantic union. Antonia is married, but her marriage is only in name, and her starved soul is torn between love and duty. In the end the latter triumphs, but we are told that her mating with her predestined lover will not be long delayed. It is an unequal novel, which suffers from superabundance of material. There are two distinct themes, which have not been interwoven with any great harmony, and had Miss Horlick made two books out of them instead of one the result would have been better. (Duckworth's: G. Robertson.)

Two or three years ago everyone was talking of "Marie Claire," the plain unvarnished tale in which a Parisian dressmaker had set down the story of her life. "Rue and Roses," by Angela Langer, is a somewhat similar production by a German. The author is the daughter of an unsuccessful shopkeeper, and her youth is spent amidst scenes of poverty and distress. She goes out into the world, first as nurserymaid, and then as governess, sometimes bullied by her mistress, sometimes insulted by the master, sometimes finding a measure of happiness. She writes poetry and learns English, and falls in with a sort of guide, philosopher, and friend, who, apparently without meaning it, wins her love. She is prepared to give up all for him, but he will not accept the sacrifice, and they part. All this and more Miss Langer tells, all the chronicle of a life devoid of incident in the ordinary sense, but full of spiritual development. We may think the book sentimental, and unduly introspective, or even dull in the complete absence of anything out of the ordinary, but its merit is that it is real, the faithful picture of an actual existence, and this sincerity gives it a value which a more ambitious effort might not possess. (Heinemann.)

In "Concert Pitch" Frank Danby pursues her researches into the manners and customs of the "smart set," and introduces us to the Wagners, a precious pair of nouveaux riches, who are trying to make their way into society. The most obvious weapon of attack is their pretty daughter, whom they seek to marry to a title. The first attempt is a failure; the second, though the parti is quite a decent fellow, also is broken off through a silly misunderstanding. Harston Migetti, an ambitious but obscure composer, catches her affections on the rebound, and together they elope. But the marriage is far from being made in heaven. Migetti soon shows the colossal selfishness of genius, and his wife has a hard time of it—which, though it strengthened her character, scarcely added to her happiness. In the end, of course, Migetti is removed from the scene, thanks to the jealousy of his prima donna's husband, and young Lord Lyssons, who has long loved in silence, claims his widow. Much of the book is unconvincing; but, as usual, Frank Danby is thoroughly at home in the semi-Bohemian scenes. (Stanley Paul and Co.)

Two-thirds of "Unquenched Fires," by Alice Gurstenberg, are very good reading, and if the last third has less appeal it is because the author ceases to tell a story and devotes herself to an analysis of her heroine's psychological processes, which is rather difficult to follow. The book tells of a Chicago society belle who is successful in amateur theatricals, and, wearying of the hollowness and futility of her life, yearns to win a name for herself on the stage. When her family tries to force her to marry an utterly antipathetic person she finally revolts and cuts herself adrift. Then follows a period of haunting theatrical agencies and occasional small engagements, from which she emerges a wiser, if not a wealthier, girl. She marries a young playwright, and makes a hit in one of his plays. Henceforth the ball is at her feet, and she travels over America in a blaze of glory. But success has its penalties; the glare of the footlights has become part of her life, and the sweets of applause almost turn her head. It seems as if she had won a kingdom only to lose the heart of her husband, but in the end the pair come together again, and all is well. Most novels of the stage are unreal, but Miss Gurstenberg has managed to avoid making hers too highly coloured, and what it loses in sensationalism it gains in verisimilitude. (John Long, Ltd.).

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

The Shakespeare festival of June-July at Her Majesty's Theatre has gilded the end of a London theatrical season which has proved otherwise sunless to many out-of-pocket managers. "Julius Caesar," with Sir Herbert Tree as Marcus Antonius and Mr. Basil Gill as Brutus, was warmly praised, and then the newspaper limelight of special cross-headings was turned upon Tree's Mercutio. It was the actor-manager's first appearance in the part (June 30), and he seems to have played the gallant with the merry wit and ready sword in a more tragic vein than other artists. "He looked into Romeo's eyes and spoke the Queen Mab speech as though he were foretelling trouble instead of making fun." The critic of the "St. James's Gazette," who devotes half a column to the actor-manager and the production, does not trouble to review such unimportant characters as Romeo and Juliet! The "Pall Mall Gazette" found the new Romeo, Mr. Philip Merivale, "a jocular and high-spirited gentleman." "No doubt, it was all very breezy, but, after all, Romeo is not a breezy person, but a haunted man dreading consequences." Miss Neilson-Terry's Juliet was summed up as "a showily effective performance." Sir Herbert Tree "will no doubt quicken and brighten his impersonation of Mercutio when he has become more certain of his lines." The part of the Nurse was played by Miss Rose Edouin, most of whose life was passed in Melbourne as Mrs. G. B. W. Lewis. The Edouin family toured for three years here in their youth, after which Willie Edouin passed half a century as a comedian on the London stage, whilst his sister, Mrs. Lewis, acted and taught in Melbourne. She was an accomplished actress of the old school, with a fine broad style, as was shown at the Sydney Theatre Royal, when she supported Pattie Browne in "The Dovecote" in 1898, after an absence of 20 years; and she did not appear here again until her more recent return to England. Many of the dailies do not review the Nurse, which, no doubt, she would play perfectly. The "Daily Telegraph" omits the character from an otherwise extremely favourable notice. But the "Morning Post" remarks: "Miss Rose Edouin is as natural, racy, and amusing a Nurse as one has met for a long time." Generally, however, it is possible to gather that the "Romeo and Juliet" revival was second-rate. The week's doings also included an all-star performance of "London Assurance" before the King and Queen in aid of the Actors' Pension Fund. The cast was truly wonderful—Henry Ainley as old Max. Harkaway, H. B. Irving "reduced his tragic manner to the light and airy buoyancy of the gladsome Dazzle," Arthur Bourchier as Meddle, James Welch as Dolly Spanker, Irene Vanbrugh "rattled off Lady Gay Spanker's hunting speech," Miss Marie Tempest demurely impudent as Pert, Miss Neilson-Terry handsome as Grace Harkaway; Tree as the affected Sir Harcourt Courtly, Godfrey Tearle as the scapegrace Charles Courtley, Weedon Grossmith as Isaacs, Charles Hawtrey as Cool.

The principal musical societies are now nearing the close of their year, and the Sydney Symphony Orchestra accordingly announces its final matinee for to-day. As on previous occasions, more than one novelty will testify to the enterprise of the committee. Mr. Joseph Bradley will conduct for the first time Elgar's Cockaigne overture. Although the work is in sonata form, the overture presents not a general view of the city, but a succession of scenes in what Carlyle termed "that monstrous tuberosity of civilised life, the capital of England." The composer has himself labelled these scenes, in which he imagines a pair of lovers strolling through street and park, watching the passage of a military band, peeping into a quiet church where the organ is playing, and so into the sunny streets again. The composer's headings read "Cheerful Aspect of London, Strong and Sincere Character of Londoners, the Lover's Romance, Young London's Interruptions, the Military Band, In the Church, and, finally, In the Streets." The second orchestral number, Alfred Hill's "Maori Rhapsody in three Scenes," is also new, and will be conducted by the composer. The first will represent the Death Chant of the tribe for their chief, whose soul has been taken by the green lizard, that harbinger of Death, to the under-world ("Te Reinga"), or leaping-place of souls. This brings in the second scene in allusion to the temporary resting-place for the soul before it mounts to where Rangi, the father of Man, awaits in the tenth Heaven its coming. The third scene musically depicts the festival dances and songs of welcome to the new chief, who is greeted by the maidens with the waving of green branches, whilst the Poi dancers form in two rows, and illustrate the joys "of this fascinating thing, tiny ball on end of string." Visitors will find a long, elaborate, and instructive account of Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic Symphony," which will be heard once more; and besides the songs by Miss Bertha Dickens, there will be the brilliant Concerto No. 4" of Rubinstein, with Mr. Lawrence Godfrey Smith as solo pianist of the fine work.

Mr. Harry Lauder, in a letter from London to a friend on the staff of the "Herald," writes by the last mail:—"I open my American-Australasian tour at New York on January 5, and on my way across the States to San Francisco am booked to appear at the big centres. During my journey across the Pacific I may stop at Honolulu and shake hands with a bunch of Scots there, and sing them a sang or twa. I am due to open in Sydney under Messrs. J. and N. Tait on Saturday, April 11. That is, I believe, your autumn, and should just suit me nice, as I dinna want it ower hot to begin wi'. The London managers are quite against my long stay away, but I have promised mysel' a trip to Australia, and am stickin' to it. I shall sing my oldest songs and my newest songs as I proceed wi' my engagement. I have had quite a lot of Australians who have heard me in town when here on visits telling me that Australia is anxiously awaiting my arrival, and that Scots by the dozen are getting ready to grip my hand and say, 'Welcome, laddie, welcome.' Scots are scattered all ower the face o' the globe, but aye sincere to the memory o' 'Dear auld Scotland, Scotland ower the sea, My heart's in bonnie Scotland, That's where I'd like to dee.'"

Miss Clare Scarr, a light contralto of refined musical taste, who used to appear frequently in public six or seven years ago, has returned from Europe to settle once more in this city, where she will give a concert on August 21. After leaving Neutral Bay, Miss Scarr resumed study in Paris, under Mme. Renee Richard, a one-time grand opera singer of renown as a teacher. This artist possesses a completely equipped little theatre of her own in the Rue Pigalle, where her students give concerts, and perform operatic scenes under conditions approximating to the real thing. After visiting London, where she sang at many aristocratic "at homes," Miss Scarr travelled about Europe for pleasure, and in her career as a singer met with one adventure of interest—an appearance before three crowned heads! It was whilst she was at a fashionable hotel at St. Moritz, Switzerland, that a connoisseur who had heard her sing besought the assistance of her voice in the cause of charity. At the concert there were present the Crown Prince of Germany, the present King of Denmark, and the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria, as well as a glittering throng of princes and noble ladies. Miss Scarr ultimately decided to study the German school, and resided for some time at Dresden, where she heard innumerable operas. She found the soloists as a rule inferior to those at the Paris Opera, but there was always a superb orchestra and a well-balanced ensemble, whilst the repertoire was much more comprehensive than was the case in the French capital.

On Thursday next "Within the Law" will complete a run of 12½ weeks at the Melbourne Theatre Royal, and will open at Adelaide next Saturday. The J. C. Williamson management cites this American play as their most pronounced success in drama since "The Silver King," and they are watching with interest the newly opened season in London at the Haymarket Theatre, where, however, the dialogue has been considerably altered and anglicised. Bayard Veiller, the author of the new melodrama, recently confessed that when he wrote the play he was absolutely at the lowest ebb of his funds. Things had not gone well with him, and he hawked the play from manager to manager, but without success. It gathered a good deal of dust in office pigeon-holes, until a play-producing syndicate decided to give it a trial. Veiller is now drawing royalties from the piece amounting to about £500 per week, and is "made for life." Seven companies are playing the drama in the United States. It is soon to be translated into French for production in Paris.

THE CHURCHES.

LIVINGSTONE'S CENTENARY.

The London Missionary Society proposes to establish a new memorial mission in Central Africa, to mark the centenary of David Livingstone, who was born in Blantyre, Scotland, on March 19, 1813. The movement is a world-wide one, and the branch of the society in Sydney is doing its share in the matter by promoting an exhibition to be held in the Concordia Hall next week, commencing on Tuesday. It is not entirely the aim of this exhibition, to raise money, but any surplus will be devoted to the memorial mission. The idea is mainly to focus attention on the work being done by the London Missionary Society, with special reference to Africa. The exhibition will be a pretentious one, and at it will be seen curios of all sorts, which will interest people in the work being carried on in the six fields where the L.M.S. is operating.

Africa, Madagascar, the South Sea Islands, New Guinea, China, and India will be represented, and the Concordia Hall is to be divided into six courts, each court being devoted to one field. Exhibitions of a similar character have already been held in Melbourne and Brisbane, and have proved very successful.

Judging by the enthusiasm at a meeting held on Tuesday in the Pitt-street Congregational Church to further the movement, the Sydney exhibition should be a great success, and there ought to be a good surplus to assist in the movement for honouring the weaver boy who penetrated the heart of the Dark Continent.

"It was Livingstone who struck the first blow at the slavery which cursed and well-nigh depopulated the interior," says the "Livingstonian," a weekly publication, which is being issued locally during the life of this movement. In support of the mission stirring addresses were delivered on Tuesday night by the Rev. C. White, Rev. N. J. Cocks, Rev. W. Cunliffe Jones, Rev. A. H. Austin, Rev. F. P. Joseland, and Rev. W. Morley.

A feature of the exhibition will be the rendering of "The Livingstone Episode," which formed one of the great features of the great pageant "From Darkness to Light" held at the missionary exhibition in London in conection with the Livingstone centennary.

PAROCHIAL CONFERENCES.

Parochial conferences have been held at St. Andrew's Church, Summer Hill, during the week, the subjects discussed each evening being "Progressive Revelation." The speakers included the Archdeacon of Cumberland, the Revs. Canon Archdall, Principal Davies, G. A. Chambers, G. C. Glanville, S. E. Maxted, A. A. Yeates, S. M. Johnstone, and Dr. La Touche. The subject was treated by the speakers from the points of view of philosophy and history, and it is claimed that such conferences should be of interest to the great number of men who have doubts and difficulties with regard to the Christian view of things. It is the earnest desire of the promoters of the conferences that contributions should be made to the discussions by Rationalists, and some light shed upon the great problems of human existence.

Another parochial conference on "Man: His Nature and Destiny," will be held in St. Philip's Church, York-street, under the presidency of Canon Bellingham, commencing to-morrow evening, and continuing every evening during next week. On Monday there will be the conference service and sermon; on Tuesday the Bishop of Newcastle will answer the question, "What is Man?" and the Rev. G. A. Chambers will speak of "Man is Sinful." On Wednesday Dr. Radford will deal with "Man, the Object of Divine Love," and the Rev. S. M. Johnstone will speak on "Redemption." On Thursday, the Rev. E. N. Baker and Rev. E. Digges La Touche will speak on "The Meaning of Life." At the Friday meeting the Rev. Principal Davies and Canon Martin will deal with "God and Human Life."

Archbishop Wright, in his monthly letter, says:—"My interview with his Majesty the King took place at Buckingham Palace on the very morning of the day on which I set out from London on my long homeward journey. It was a great privilege to be allowed to express to him the loyalty of all the members of the Church as Primate; it was also an inspiration to witness personally, the keenly enthusiastic interest that he evidently takes in the welfare of our great Commonwealth as a whole."

The Rev. W. Martin, rector of Marrickville, who has been appointed by the Archbishop to the canonry in the Cathedral, vacant by the death of the late Canon Hough, entered the Sydney diocese 24 years ago. With the exception of six years, spent in the diocese of Goulburn as canon of the Cathedral, and in other parts, he has worked in this diocese, holding important charges, and making himself known as an effective administrator.

On the anniversary of the death of the late Rev. Wilfrid Mailler, on Sunday, July 20, a memorial service was held at St. James' Church, Wilcannia, by the Rev. W. Dallimore, followed by a short service in the afternoon at the graveside. Both services were largely attended. At Broken Hill St. Peter's, at the close of the service, conducted by Archdeacon Pritchard, a special memorial hymn was sung, and the archdeacon made a special reference to the deceased minister.

At the last meeting of the Council of the Church of England Temperance Society for the Diocese of Sydney, held at the chapter-house, St. Andrew's Cathedral, it was resolved on the motion of Archdeacon Gunther, seconded by Archdeacon Boyce,—"That, in view of the departure of his Excellency Sir George King-Hall from the State, this council places on record its warm appreciation of the noble and constant efforts put forth by his Excellency to promote the cause of temperance reform, and respectfully offers him its best wishes for the future, with the assurance of its prayers that God's richest blessing may rest upon Lady King-Hall and himself and their family."

The Rev. W. Langley, of St. Stephen's, Newtown, Sydney, has been invited to visit England in order to act as an Australian deputation for the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

The Bishop of Labuan and Sarawak (Dr. Mounsey) is expected to reach Sydney by the Montoro on the 18th instant.

On the retirement of Mr. H. R. Waring from the position of choirmaster at St. Clement's Church, Marrickville, he was presented by the rector, the Rev. Canon Martin, on behalf of the choir, with a handsome clock. In making the presentation Mr. Martin regretted Mr. Waring's decision, and expressed approval of the good work that he had accomplished.

The new head of the Deaconess House, Miss Pallister, will soon arrive in Sydney. She was for some time head of the Deaconess House in Liverpool, and won the warmest appreciation of the Bishop of Liverpool.

The Rev. Principal Fraser, M.A., of Trinity College, Kandy, Ceylon, hopes to visit Australia during the early part of 1915, at the invitation of the Church Missionery Association. Principal Fraser, who is the son of Sir Andrew Fraser, formerly Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, is a brilliant speaker, with a splendid missionary appeal.

The Rev. T. Law, of Benares, India, will arrive in Sydney on August 19, and leave again on the 31st.

The Rev. H. K. Archdall, formerly of St. Paul's College, Sydney, and now Fellow and Lecturer of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, was ordained to the priesthood last Trinity Sunday in Canterbury Cathedral by the Bishop of Dover, acting for the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The aim of the mission study movement in all parts of the world has been to promote that zeal among home workers of which Edinburgh Conference voiced the need. In New South Wales this is taking a new direction. A united missionary committee has been formed, representative of all the missionary boards, to stir up the churches and home officers. Its first work is to be a conference in October. Commissions are being formed to investigate missionary problems and bring the material collected to be discussed at the conference.

The conference will be held largely on study circle lines, and will meet every afternoon and evening for a week. The membership of the conference, which will probably be limited to about 150, is to be nominated by the missionary boards. It is believed that this move will mark an epoch in the history of home base organisation for missions.

To-day, August 9, is the tenth anniversary of the crowning of Pope Pius X., and Roman Catholics throughout the world are making the event an occasion for special rejoicings.

Special services were held at St. Mary's Church, North Sydney, on Sunday morning, to commemorate the feast day of St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Jesuit Order. The parish priest, Father Corish, S.J., was the celebrant at high mass, and Fathers Sydes and Murphy were deacon and sub-deacon respectively. A panegyric of the saint was preached by the Very Rev. M. Chatelet, S.M., of St. Patrick's Church. Palestrina's "Missa Brevis" was rendered by the choir. In the evening Father Sydes also referred to the life and works of the saint.

To mark the silver jubilee of S. Martha's Home, Leichhardt, a garden fete was held on Wednesday, and Archbishop Kelly presided at the function. The opening ceremony was performed by Miss Strickland.

The Rev. Brother Barrett of the Christian Brothers College, Nudgee, Q., celebrated his golden jubilee last week, and tributes were paid to his work by the Governor, Sir William Macgregor and Archbishop Dubig.

Archbishop Kelly will bless and open the additions to St. Fiacre's Church, Leichhardt, to-morrow afternoon.

August 20 being the anniversary of the death of Cardinal Moran a special requiem office and high mass will be held at St. Mary's Cathedral.

Cardinal Bourne, presiding at a special meeting of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul in London, commended the society for its work in connection with immigrants.

Summing up the position of the Nonconformist churches in England for the past year, a writer in the "Westminster Gazette" notes an improvement in Methodism, a decrease in Congregationalism and in the Baptist Church, and a decided advance in the Society of Friends and the Moravians. Summed up, the Free Churches have passed through another year of difficulty, but this testing time is proving most valuable in stimulating attention to defects in organisation and to departures from generally accepted standards. Many evidences are forthcoming that the leaders of the Free Churches desire to promote in a wise and zealous way the revival of religion in our towns and villages. Money does not seem wanting, but Nonconformity is at present requiring a larger percentage of its sons, who have been educated at the public schools for the Christian ministry at home and abroad in the mission field.

The Rev. John Flynn, who is touring the State in the interests of the Australian Inland Mission, had successful meetings in the Hunter River Presbytery.

At the Haberfield Presbyterian Church a branch of the Presbyterian Men's League was formed, with 40 enthusiastic members.

Miss Holt, who did excellent work in the Jinghur Mission, India, has been speaking in a number of Presbyterian churches in aid of the Indian Mission. A very successful meeting was held at Deniliquin.

The last meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society in London was interrupted by the entrance of a deputation of the South Nigerian chiefs who were visiting England in connection with the land tenure question. The chiefs, who included Christians, Mohammedans, and pagans, were welcomed by the chairman and presented with Bibles as mementoes of the occasion. Two of the chiefs replied in excellent English, and testified to the value of the Bible in building up national life.

The Rev. C. and Mrs. Schwob have arrived in Sydney on furlough after service at the Methodist Mission in New Britain.

The Rev. Dr. Brown, president of the Methodist Church of Australia, was welcomed at Melbourne on his way to London.

The Rev. J. F. Goldie, Methodist Missionary in the Solomon Islands, returned to Sydney from a visit to New Zealand by the Wimmera, which arrived from Auckland yesterday.

The Rev. P. J. Stephen, of the Central Methodist Mission, preached at the anniversary services of the Methodist Church, Orange, on Sunday, and lectured on missions at a meeting on Monday.

Great regret is expressed in church circles in England at the death of the Marquis of Northampton, for many years president of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

The Rev. A. S. Devenish, chairman of the Victorian Congregational Union, is considering a call to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Chatswood.

The Rev. W. T. Kench, who for the last 18 years has been pastor of Trinity Congregational Church, Perth, W.A., has resigned his charge, and intends to visit England.

The Rev. Samuel Harrison, who was until recently pastor of the Baptist Church, Hornsby, has accepted a call given him by the Christian Mission Church at Launceston, Tasmania, better known throughout Australia as "The Reed Memorial Church." It has had the services of such men as Dr. Harry Guinness and the Rev. George Soltau. It has a seating capacity for 1200 persons, and is the centre of a great deal of aggressive Christian work.

Mr. J. P. Harrison (son of the Rev. Samuel Harrison), who had been for some years at Messrs. Searl and Sons, Sydney, has been accepted as a student at Spurgeon's Pastors' College, London, where he intends to take a four-years' course of study for the Ministry.

A letter has been received by the British and Foreign Bible Society for the Servian Minister for War gratefully acknowledging the gift of 36,000 copies of the Scriptures which were distributed amongst the soldiers.

Mr. C. E. Bowen has returned from a successful tour of the Western line from Blayney to Forbes, and reports that great interest is being evinced in the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society. In order to link up the work on the North Shore line from Roseville to Hornsby, a drawing-room meeting was held at the residence of Mr. W. Roberts, Killard, the speakers being Miss Harper, of the Church Missionary Association, and Mr. Bowen. A ladies' committee was formed to help in the work of the auxiliary.

In a letter received by Mr. David Walker (for many years general secretary of the Sydney Y.M.C.A.) from the general secretary of the Chicago Association it is noted that the farewell hall building has given place to a modern association building costing two million dollars. In addition, there are six fine modern city buildings, five railroad buildings, and work for students and other types of men in rented rooms. There is a total membership of 18,000 men and boys, while the membership supports 12 secretaries in the foreign field. The business men of Chicago largely support the work because of its influence in the lives of young men.

Attendances at the Sunday Afternoon Bible Class of the Sydney Y.M.C.A. for the half-year were 3087, as against 2836 for the corresponding period of 1912.

The membership receipts for the past six months of 1913 are the largest in the history of the Sydney Y.M.C.A. for any corresponding period.

In connection with the Congress on Union of the Churches to be held in Melbourne on September 1, the first subjects to be discussed are:—Union control of Home Missions, standardisation of college curricula and possibility of combined theological education; the difficulties and possibilities of organisation. On Sunday, September 7, a general exchange of pulpits throughout Victoria is suggested.

It has been decided to hold the fifty-ninth annual festival of the Y.M.C.A. in the Sydney Town Hall on Thursday, August 21. The Lord Mayor has consented to preside, and an address will be delivered by Professor David.

Mr. W. B. Sloan, of the China Inland Mission, will arrive from Melbourne to-day, and a number of missionary meetings have been arranged in the city and suburbs. He will give his first address in Sydney at the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon. In 1888 Mr. Sloan went to China as a missionary, but soon afterwards was asked to join the Home staff in London, where for many years he held the responsible position as assistant director of the mission.

Mrs. Lee Cowie, after six months' work in the interests of no-license, was tendered a farewell by the N.S.W. Alliance, Archdeacon Boyce presiding. Mrs. Lee Cowie will visit Goulburn and Broken Hill before returning to New Zealand.

Commissioner Hay, chief of the Salvation Army in Australia, passed through Sydney last week on his return to Melbourne from a six weeks' tour through Queensland. He went as far north as Thursday Island.

General Bramwell Booth will visit Australia in 1915. In October and November of the present year he will tour Canada and the United States, and had intended making the Australasian tour next year, but the decennial congress of the army is to take place in London then, and the business in connection with it will keep him at headquarters practically the whole year. It is probable that Commissioner Lamb will accompany the General on his Australasian visit.

Mr. N. Paterson, a member of the board of the Dunedin Y.M.C.A., has been ill in Sydney for the last three weeks. He reports progressive work in the fine new building in the southern city.

The Rev. W. G. Sands, acting pastor of the Redfern Congregational Church, has received a unanimous call from the church at Cracknell-road, South Brisbane.

HOW TO PREPARE A SPEECH.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, M.A., the well-known actor-manager, has an article on "How to Prepare and Deliver a Speech" in "The Book of Public Speaking." It is in everyday life according to this authority, that the foundations of success in the art of speaking must be laid:—"Set your ideas, your impressions, your feelings in order. Think of certain facts, and weave them into a story. Imagine situations, and think how they can be told to an audience. Mental work is not enough. You must speak aloud when you are alone in your house or in your garden. You must forge a mass of phrases for yourself, rehearse them, keep some, discard others, and always go on manufacturing new ones. Speak aloud, think aloud—these are two golden rules." The would-be orator must, Mr. Bourchier adds, extend his vocabulary, and this can only be done by reading the works of the masters of literature.

The METZ "22" — £185

Sydney to Melbourne.

FULL points for Reliability! That's what the Metz "22" scored in the recent Sydney-to-Melbourne Reliability Trial. There were 24 entries—21 starters, but only 9 secured full points for Reliability, and the Metz "22" was one—the lightest and lowest-priced car in the competition.

The car was a standard model—owned and driven by a Sydney doctor, and ran right through without a single adjustment. The Melbourne "Age," in reporting the trial, said:

> "The outstanding feature of the trials was the performance of the little Metz Car, weighing less than any other (about 11cwt), which ran through the four days without losing a mark or having a puncture."

The average petrol consumption was 31.4 miles per gallon—a most excellent performance considering the heavy weather and bad roads encountered.

The car's hill-climbing capacity was brought out on the Razorback. This famous hill—smothered in greasy mud—was negotiated in 163 seconds.

This is the car you want. It is economical to purchase and to run. It is handsome in appearance, and reliable to the last degree. Remember the price—£185, complete with full equipment. Write for literature and photographs. Tel., City 4352.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Rumours About the Premiership.—The True Story.—Eight-mile Petition.—A Great Hospital.

WESTMINSTER, July 4.

A striking and instructive example of how political rumour has birth and finds growth is provided in connection with the dinner to "Loulu" Harcourt, given at the Reform Club last Friday by the Political Committee. On resumption of the sittings of Parliament this week the lobbies were alive with the rumour of happenings. It was said that in the course of his speech the Prime Minister spoke with ominous annoyance of the conduct of some Radicals (variously named), who had defied the injunctions of the Ministerial Whip. Another story, equally circumstantial, and as absolutely unfounded on fact, was that Mr. Asquith had sung what was regarded by his audience as the Swan song of the Prime Minister. He had, so it was confidently asserted, intimated that at the close of eight years he was hopelessly wearied of office, desiring nothing more devoutly than deliverance from its toils. Some authorities, going a step further, whispered that he had definitely mentioned the passage of the Home Rule Bill and the others under the wing of the Parliament Act as a convenient and appropriate period for withdrawing from the leadership. Others, less circumstantial, agreed that he had intimated to this inner circle of the Liberal party that on a day rapidly approaching, they must be prepared to find another leader.

The proceedings at this dinner, over which, as chairman of the Political Committee, the Prime Minister appropriately presided, were private, and as far as affirmative statement of details goes, will remain so. In the circumstances, however, it may be permissible, even proper, that one of the hosts of the Colonial Secretary should say that there is not the remotest foundation for a fantastic story eagerly taken up and exploited by the morning and evening Opposition papers. In the impression designedly conveyed it is indeed directly contrary to fact. The Prime Minister and his colleagues, after eight years' hard labour, in their offices, and in the House, naturally feel a little wearied. During this time they have lacked the ordinary opportunity of rest and recreation forbidden by a succession of autumn sessions. Should the result of the general election in the spring of 1915 be to dismiss them from office, they will, as far as personal predilection is concerned, go gratefully. As long as they retain the confidence of the House of Commons, reiterated this week in a succession of divisions in which their majorities varied from 110 to 127, they will peg along, completing a programme which, in respect of extent and national importance, exceeds even the programme of Mr. Gladstone in his prime.

An ancient Parliamentary custom steadily dying out is that of the presentation of petitions. It is true that this year it was temporarily and spasmodically revived by opponents to the Welsh Church Disestablishment Bill. The languor, disturbed only by signs of merriment, with which the outbreak was received was not encouraging. Supporters of the bill, a considerable majority made up of Nonconformists and Welsh people, did not think it worth while to make a counter demonstration. The heyday of the petition declined a quarter of a century ago. Previous to that time it shone brightly. I remember a petition from the Protestant Alliance, compiled in support of dear old Newdegate's annual motion for the inspection of monastic and conventual institutions. It was declared, on the faith and honour of good Protestants, that if laid out end to end the petition would run seven and a half miles, the sheets containing three-quarters of a million signatures. This was beaten by another petition presented against the compensation clauses of the Local Taxation Bill. It was alleged to be eight miles long, twice the limit of London cab fares. By the herculean efforts of elderly messengers it was trundled into the House in three huge cylinders, round which the petition was wound, as on board ship rope is wound round the capstan.

In a familiar line Burns bemoans a state of existence in which "man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." Had he lived to this day, and visited the London Hospital, conveniently set in the centre of the teeming, in the main poverty-stricken, population of Whitechapel, he would have found a correlative instance of man's humanity to man, easing the hard lot of thousands. The London Hospital, which owes so much to the indefatigable energy of its chairman, Mr. Sydney Holland, is a masterpiece of organisation, under which works the perfection of medical and surgical science, and, not least, of capable and kindly nurses. Its doors are open day and night, the only password needed being that, owing to accident or disease, the applicant is in distress, and has not the means to command medical or surgical attendance. Up to a comparatively recent date the house surgeons went to bed like ordinary folk at the end of a hard day's work, and urgent cases arriving from midnight to morn had to await their appearance on the scene after being roused from their slumbers and re-dressed. Amongst improvements in the system always going forward there is now established a night shift of doctors ready for business instantly on arrival of a patient.

Radium, the latest curative power science has placed in the doctors' hands, is in constant use. On the day of my visit I saw through the glass window of a cubicle a young girl lying on the bed with what looked like the end of a gas pipe in her opened mouth. This was the tube directing the radium rays to play upon her throat, where cancer was developed. The operating doctor spoke hopefully of the ultimate cure of what, lacking this beneficent agency, would have been a hopeless case. When radium first became a powerful equipment of a well-appointed surgery the doctor administering it habitually suffered from devotion to his work. There is a well-known case where one of the first and most famous practitioners sacrificed his life in the pursuit of his noble task. At the London Hospital danger is averted by an ingenious but simple arrangement of the cubicle in which the patient is operated upon. Formerly the doctor was shut up with him or her, and became impregnated with the powerful influence of the rays. Now he stands outside, and carefully, with equal effect, supervises the operation.

The pleasantest quarter in the huge building whose roof covers much misery and physical suffering, howsoever well-attended, is the children's ward. This, roomy, well-lighted, abundantly-ventilated ward looks at first sight more like a spacious home nursery than a place whither are carried children upon whose early days has fallen the blight of dread disease. When we entered we ran a narrow risk of being qualified for the accident ward by being run over, a sturdy convalescent riding at headlong speed a horse on lever-driven wheels. Each child has a cot to itself, with nurses in attendance, whose motherly kindness could not be tenderer or more unwearied if the little one were actually her own. These children in shining white garments and bed-clothes, with hair tidily brushed, and hands of almost uncanny whiteness, come from surrounding slums where neglect, occasionally unappeased hunger, share with them and half a dozen others the conveniences of single rooms. One thinks sadly of the changes when, as must happen when they grow better, they will have to go back to what is called their "home." The chairman tells me that in order to keep this great work going he, since O'Donnell, "the biggest beggarman" of his day, will have to raise £100,000 before the close of the year. A recent donation of £1000 was but a drop in this mighty bucket. I understand that no reasonable offer will be refused in the direction of making up the remaining ninety and nine.

TRIED A SAMPLE.

"Some years ago I was subject to biliousness from which I could get no relief," says Mr. W. G. Miller, Grocer, Lindfield, N.S.W. "I was given a sample of Chamberlain's Tablets, and in a few hours after taking them all traces of biliousness were completely gone. Whenever there has been a recurrence of the trouble I have got immediate relief from Chamberlain's Tablets."—Advt.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

In the Isle of Wight.

QUARR COURT, RYDE, July 3.

I have been in luck's way this year. I have been out of London in May and in June, which means I have seen England at her best. You who have been in the old country know what this means. At the moment I am writing, from a house which looks right across the Solent to Southampton, thus over the foreground of a terraced garden, full of choice roses, roses that one only sees at shows, in magnificent profusion of bloom, with creeping roses pressing themselves against my window, interlacing with honeysuckle, which is in great blossom this year. Scented verbena at their feet, and borders of fine specimens of scarlet and crimson geraniums, beds of begonias, and below all this a rather wilder garden, full also of roses—ramblers. Canterbury bells and campanulas, delphiniums, in blue, mauves, and whites, backed by old limes, yews, oaks, all at their finest phase of foliage, and you can picture my delightful surroundings. The streak of sea shines blue, or grey, and towards sunset a blaze of reflected glow like a diamond necklace, and flash-light buoys dance to the movement of the water. These were introduced as a matter of safety in the Solent after the collision of H.M.S. Hawke and the Olympic. No big ships are now allowed to enter from the Needles end of the island. You must come up via St. Catherine's Point, signalling your number, and passing Ventnor, Shanklin, and the other places on the south of the island come round from the eastward.

The "island," as its residents call it, has become increasingly popular amongst foreigners, since the state of religious politics in France obliged so many religious orders to leave their old homes and flee to us for protection. Benedictine monks and nuns have bought large properties here. I sit writing with Quarr Abbey abreast of me, as the crow flies. A curious red brick building, with a square end to its choir with four turrets, looking like a mosque rather than a Christian church—a pseudo-Byzantine kind of building, with a long straight choir, entirely built of fine Bruges bricks. The arches which span the choir are broad and low, with long slits in the tops, which lighten what would otherwise be a heavy style of architecture. It is a very plain church, with handsome wrought iron brackets, with incandescent gas lamps in cluster at close intervals over the stalles. The monks have their old carven stalls, which did duty so long at their old home at Solemes. Their particular work is the teaching of their own form of Gregorian chant—a peculiarly soft method of singing in unison, so wonderfully even that it sounds as one voice. The modulations are exquisite. Priests, nuns, laymen from choirs come here from all parts to study the chant under the monks' direction. And in addition to this the Benedictine nuns at Appley-de-Combe teach a great many French girls. Hence the attraction of the Isle of Wight for people of many races.

Modes of the Moment.

The summer has been so splendid that we have been able to enjoy the light, dainty raiment which is so becoming to girls and all young women.

It is a delightful time for the young. All over the country tennis nets are spread, and cricket fields full of flannelled men and boys, as if the business of the nation had suddenly stopped, and nothing else mattered. This brings about for girls that delightful time when white dresses and pretty summer frocks are in full season. This year they are quite charming. The lovely printed voiles, muslins, chiffons, ninons, and the soft cool silks and satins are now worn with much comfort.

We are in the middle of Henley week, for which preparations have been going on for some time. It is a girls' carnival pure and simple. In addition to the white skirt and blouse, which is the style imperative for girls who manage their own boats, punt, or skiff, there are lovely gowns of cotton voile or ninon, a pale pink with a deep red spot, made like a long tunic opening at the feet, over a plain pink skirt, with an open-fronted bodice and full bishop sleeves, set with a cuff of Bulgarian embroidery, edged with plain ninon, and a deep sailor collar to match, caught below the bust with a rosette. This costume is worn with a broad brimmed leghorn hat, trimmed with a wreath of poppies and tall grasses, lined with black velvet.

Many of the summer frocks, especially the washing species, are made short, and without draperies. A short straight tunic takes the place of drapery, often made of plain material if the gown has any figured pattern on it; in this case the figured material is used for collars, shoulder pieces, or cuffs, so as to pull the costume together.

I have seen a gown which carries out this idea. The skirt, which just comes to the ankles, is of figured crepe de Chine, with four gaugings round the edge on the side widths. With this is worn a plain kilted lawn tunic, open in front, with the usual white kilting going right round it, shoulder pieces of the printed crepe de Chine scalloped at the edges. Under the tunic, which is cut a Magyar and finished off above the elbow with kiltings like that which lines the tunic, a thin white blouse is worn underneath, which has full long sleeves set into a deep band edged with kilting. A parasol of crepe de Chine, matching the gown, was sent home with this costume. A broad black satin belt is worn at the waist.

Another smart summer gown, suitable for a garden party or river club frock, is made of chalk white voile, plain short tunic finished with deep frills, sash, and buttons of deep Indian blue. The sash goes round the waist, and finishes in a deep loop at one side, with a broad soft bow. The neck is quite open in V shape, the deep blue frill falling away from it on the shoulders.

I have seen some exquisite evening gowns for a well-known Australian lady who returns to Sydney in September. One was of thick soft white satin charmeuse, made with a train draped wrapped round the figure, slightly open at the feet, showing a touch of lace. The bodice was of fine lace, cream in colour, built over an under-bodice of flesh-pink charmeuse and chiffon. The drapery of the lace was lovely, and suited the fine lines of this handsome woman's tall figure. A touch of rose colour at the waist in the shape of a swathed ceinture, fastened by a paste buckle, completed a most graceful toilette. These draped black charmeuse skirts are very much worn, and indeed if I were ordering a useful evening gown I would have several corsages to wear with the skirt. You could ring the changes upon it by having a fine black Chantilly bodice with a touch of orange, a gold lace done with rich purple, and one of moonlight blue net with oxidised silver. And if you wished jupons could be sent with the touch of colour repeated where the skirt opening needed it. It is curious how the French dressmakers like a touch of colour on a black gown.

Another gown from Paris was of satin mixed with chiffon moire. Its bodice was of black Chantilly lace, with a swathe and bow of pale green shot glace. The neck opened with a double frill of fine cream lace and small diamanti buttons. The coat sent with this costume was of the chiffon moire, with sleeves of the plain stuff. Altogether an exceedingly handsome costume.

This lady also showed me some hats she had ordered from Paris. One was of the faintest lilac Tagal, a round shape with a double brim; the crown, also of straw, encircled with feathers dyed to match, with one handsome purple rose as the clou of the hat. This was intended to be worn with a lingerie frock. Another hat had a velvet crown and some magnificent white feathers standing very high. I liked a black hat with black feathers equally well. The curious thing is that these very smart hats were all less expensive, though one of the first French milliners had made them, than they would have been in London. The style was unimpeachable. They were rich in appearance, but graceful and more becoming than the curious grotesque models shown in even the best of our shops.

Hats get much larger, and will continue so until the fall of the leaf. The white Panama, with shady brim and band of black velvet, worn with a coloured sports coat and white skirt in the dress, is the dress of the hour for yachting, golf, or boating. You cannot get away from this style of dress. It is the girls' hour, and one wonders how such pretty girls as one sees are not at once snapped up. Certainly the country presents greater advantages than London, and in this simple style of dress young men feel them more approachable, while the mere man is never more attractive than in his flannels, either on the cricket ground or playing a fast set at tennis. Taking it all in all, the summer of 1913 is proving a most delightful one, and we shall only be too sorry when the last roses have gone the scented way of the others, and summer is at an end.

H.M.A.S. AUSTRALIA.

THE FLAGSHIP AT PORTSMOUTH.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

The battle-cruiser Australia is at Portsmouth, and is the subject of much Australian interest. On Monday of the week in which I write the King visited her, and honoured the Admiral of the Australian fleet upon her quarter-deck. On Tuesday some hundreds of Australians made the two-hours' journey from London, went aboard and up and down and in and out of the great ship, emerging with privilege heavy upon them as the first Australians to see in the fashion of a living force the flagship of Australia's first fleet unit.

There is a well-established way of going over a battleship. We have all followed it at one time and another. It depends largely for its success upon the patience under adversity of the officers who act as escort. Their business, on such occasions, it will be remembered, is to take visitors to the unfathomable secrets of a ship of war, and to lead them therefrom persuaded that they have plucked the heart of its mystery. Their function, that is to say, is to satisfy curiosity, and they are expected to enjoy that curiosity from its most reasonable to its most tiresome. The Australia's officers are true to type. They went upon a skilful way on Tuesday, from one end of the ship to the other, explaining this and answering that. They expounded its bulk of steel in the mass, and they displayed it, or seemed to display it, in each several detail of its thousandfold minutiae. Diving within its tremendous depths, they manoeuvred their guests into undreams of holes and corners, and nosed a way for them into all sorts of unsuspected labyrinths of peculiar equipment. Then, after long exploration of that mysterious abyss which is the inner substance of a modern battleship, they came forth again, and on to the decks, and the free air of heaven, and with them their wives and weirder attendants, obviously well content to have won through.

But this is always the case of the landsman who breasts that most wonderful of the wonders of the deep, a battleship. He has been taken up and down within it, and has had its marvels unfolded to his more or less comprehending ear. His curiosity is satisfied, maybe, but his mental grip of the great machine is a tangled confusion, and he comes away whirling under the bewilderment of its many inventions, his sea-dog spirit chastened, his pride of knowledge tempered by the conviction that after all he knows but little of it. That was the way of their leaving the Australia on Tuesday. The hundreds of visitors came out of her breathless. They had travelled, or seemed to have travelled miles of strange tracks, and they were weighted with unfamiliar naval lore. In truth, and despite the appearance of instruction so skilfully achieved by her officers, there was—and there is—far too much in the Australia for easy assimilation in Portsmouth Bay on a summer afternoon. For she is a treasure-house of naval skill, a modern of the moderns, with every inch of her from keel to mast-head an expression of the last word. There is romance—superb romance—in this resultant mass of her, but it is romance that is wrought of the unromantic wonder-workers' patience and experiment, and fashioned by the stern subjection of that which was to that which must be. Flung out upon her decks, and hidden within her secret places, are giant marvels of heaped-up magic of detail, wonderful enough in themselves, but at their most wonderful in that they are the harvest of all that has been. How might such things be assimilated in Portsmouth Harbour on a summer afternoon?

But if she was beyond technical grasp there were other aspects of the Australia easy to come by there and then. She looked her part. She lay in regal grace of line. She was the flagship of the Australian navy well enough—and it were a poor sort of Australian mind that could not have seen visions and dreamed dreams in the light of her. Portsmouth Harbour in itself is a place to inspire imaginative flights of the kind. It is a central core of the huge activities of the British fleets. Ships of war are for ever coming and going there, and ships of war ride at anchor upon the open waters and lie within the docks. Shoreward the whole business of life is the unceasing tireless business of ships of war and the equipment of ships of war.

And in Portsmouth Harbour, too, lies the most tremendous incentive and inspiration the British Navy has ever had, and for myself, as I stood upon the deck of the Australia, the whole grim array of warships tethered there in Portsmouth Harbour faded away into a background for the little wooden ship a few yards away. Chiefly that was because she was once a flagship and I was aboard the latest of the flagships, and her direct descendant in a noble line. A curious juxtaposition that of the Victory and the Australia. Nelson's ship is harmless enough now, but once she saved England, and, saving England, she made Australia possible. She sits there in mid-stream, and the great ships of war that preserve an Empire she had not dreamed of, pass and repass her, have their year or two, come out of the line, and are scrapped. Still she rests there, welcoming and farewelling, and never a ship comes or goes, whatever her splendour of pride in herself as the latest last word of all—never a ship goes by the Victory vacant of pride in her.

But the Victory has never greeted or farewelled any such ship as that which will presently ride out to sea in full face of her, southward-bound. And one's thought turns naturally thus to the wonder of the Australia, and the marvel of an Australian battle-cruiser, flagship of an Australian navy. On the deck of the Australia that marvel of it, the unsubstantial texture of the dream fabric of which it once was woven, takes shape in the sober colours of reality. It is no longer dream, but living truth. On the deck of the Australia the new Australian national ideal of national defence looms into solid significance. The ship is there, the men are there—English and Australians, half and half—the white ensign and the Australian flag are there. Signs and symbols, these, of great things. Australians who like it least have reason to respect the new defence, if for nothing else, at any rate for the fact that it has done more than any other thing to stir Australians to an imaginative outlook upon the future of their country, and to prove the need of imaginative outlook Australians have only to look around. When, in a few weeks hence, this great ship, which is to stand in the forefront of the naval scheme, sweeps into Sydney Harbour, she will have, no doubt, fit welcome. She will deserve it in her own right. But, above all else, she will deserve it as splendid witness to the fact that the Australian Navy is in being, and that the difficulties of its growth and maintenance are no more than a privilege of nationhood. At least that is how it seemed to an Australian in England as he stood upon the Australian battle-cruiser in Porthmouth Harbour, with Nelson's wooden wall of defence filling his eye, and the armoured steel of British ships of war about him.

SKIN DISEASE LIKE WATER BLISTERS.

5 Vincent-st., Balmain, Sydney, N.S.W.—"I had a young baby left in my care about two years ago, and the child caught a very severe form of skin disease. The skin disease first appeared on her body just like little water blisters under the skin, and it used to irritate the child that much that she could not sleep night or day, and she used to scratch herself to pieces. Even in her sleep, she would scratch.

"Then I saw one of the Cuticura advertisements, and I at once sent for a sample and applied it. I found that it seemed to cool the affected parts at once, so I procured a pot of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. She had always been in such a burning heat, and the nasty sores that used to come after it, and it used to swell so, and through scratching herself she got it under her finger nails; in fact, her fingers and thumb were so bad that I thought she would lose the first joint. The whole of her body and even her head was affected. It is six months since I left off using the Cuticura Remedies, and she hasn't had a sign of the trouble since. Nothing seemed to ease or cure it till I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Ethel Christian, May 14, 1911."

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of each, with 32-page Skin Book, will be mailed free on application to R. Towns and Co., Dept. M., Sydney, N.S.W.—Advt.

GRANADA.

THE HILL OF THE ALHAMBRA.

(BY A. B. PIDDINGTON.)

I.

The exhilarating fertility of the district around Granada, globed over as it is by a sky such as the lucid dome of the earthly paradise may perhaps have been, runs up to its genial crown of richness and fascination in the "Red Hill" of Al-Hambra. The Sierra Nevada drops from nearly 12,000 feet of height by a swiftly-descending spur at the end of which the olive-covered hill known as the Silla del Moro leads by one sharp step to the Alhambra; and this stands out as a round boss or promontory at the base of which lie the plain and the glories of the plain. The Calle de Gomeres climbs suddenly up from Granada itself till the Gate of the Granadas (so called from the three great pomegranates in stone which surmount it) admits the stranger to the Alameda or park, and in this he gets the first taste of the noble growth which covers every part of the hill, and the first sight and sound of the snow-fed waters running everywhere under the shades they nourish, or scattering their coolness and their music in the open courts or the secluded chambers of the great Arabian Palace. Beyond the park, the road (which now becomes the Camino del Cementerio) opens out on the higher slopes, and still climbing over the backbone of the hill, is skirted by gardens and orchards where the vine and the olive, the pomegranate and the orange, fill in upon the red background of a soil unexhausted by generations of tillage the rich pictures which visiting painters have for so many years carried away with them to bleaker climes. For in the colder countries of Europe a starker climate has always bred in the inhabitants, that longing of the stern north for the tenderer and more fruitful south, expressed by Heine in the two inimitable verses in which is fabled the dream of the pine tree for the palm. A sharp turn in the road to the right near the top of the hill leads almost abruptly to a patch of plateau, bare and open except for a single farmhouse, and a posada withdrawn a little as if to leave by a kind of deferential courtesy the whole unbroken field of vision to the spectator. From this plateau a view is given of part of the white city lying to the right, and of a ring of grey hills far off to the west, while, at the eastern side of the great circle, the very range of vision is closed by the eternal snow on the saw-like ridge named the Sierra Nevada. Below lie distant clusters of towns or villages dotted sparsely over a wide expanse of opaque grey-green, and in the near foreground are the country seats or almenas, where around the homestead and fruitful orchard of each proprietor a retinue of dependent dwellings stand in a fashion which itself suggests a patriarchal system. Seen from above these groups of buildings spring out of the plain with that definition of line combined with softness of effect which is the proper quality of the finest of etchings.

But the cor cordium of the beauty of this famous hill is seen by the visitor who, untutored by any guide, saunters down the road called the Cuesta del Rey Chico, or Slope of the Boy King, which circles the north-eastern side of the palace and its grounds. In the early morning there is not even an Alguacil at his post near the outer gateway of the Generalife, even if there were the Spanish Government has conferred the freedom of the Palace and its surroundings on all who care to roam there. On the right is another sharp fold in the surface of the earth, making a hill, terraced and planted from its base to the luxurious gardens of the Generalife, where myrtles and palms and century-old cypresses crowd in with roses and oleanders and every kind of shrub and flower to maintain the secure fame of this summer residence of kings. The hillside of the Alhambra drops to the Darro (now drained by irrigation till it is little more than a threat of water), and is richly clothed in elms, poplars, and oranges all down its sheltered breadth, while on the left the herbage runs riot under the fostering touch of the channel that skirts the very foot of the Alhambra wall. Here and there figs or larger trees have seized upon a patch of soil intervening between road and wall, and spring up with the sure growth of things that can never know starvation. And such is the amazing productiveness of this country that I have seen a fair-sized fig tree with fruit on it sprouting from the wall itself 30ft up from the grounds. Its seed had found a cranny big enough for a foothold, and its roots had either forged a passage through to the gardens behind the wall, or else must have been able to tap pockets of soil within the wall itself. There this freelance of the orchard rode at ease, flaunting its luscious fruit and succulent leaves like the tufts and tassels of a waving banner, hardily careless as to the future, seeing that the present held both nourishment for its own life and the ripening promise of a progeny to succeed it. At the foot of the wall below this tree rose creepers, shrubs, and herbage, splashed upon the red surface like the irregular flotsam of a sea of verdure on a rock of vermilion; and above, over the coping of the rampart, poplars and fruit trees of an old garden pushed their vigorous growth into the liquid sunshine and up towards the sky. The air of Granada is indeed of extraordinary lightness and delicacy. The smiling earth seems here to impregnate its encompassing atmosphere with something of its own fragrance and buoyancy; neither cloud nor mist blur the sun-swept transparency that melts and falls like an ethereal veil from the kindred blue of the Andalusian sky, while a softness bred of fertility and stillness can be palpably inhaled, which is yet redeemed from languor and enervation by the useful contagion of the neighbouring snows. Little wonder that the Alhambra hill is the frequent haunt of minor artists for whom nature furnishes so many ready patterns, and of great painters who come here to throw aside the muddy vesture of decay which grossly closes in their daily professional toil, and to feel in all its fulness that delight in the enjoyment of form dissolved into colour which is the right communicable rapture of their most fortunate hours.

All down the Cuesta del Rey Chico the traveller who in October enjoys what Sir Philip Sidney quaintly calls "the delicacy of a walk," has as an ever-present escort the strange phenomenon of those autumnal tints that are such a beauty of European foliage. We see them in our own country, not gregarious and universal, but only in isolated manifestations, while in Europe a whole hillside will be aflame with the splendid efflorescence of varied colours, which is Nature's compensation to those countries for winter's long melancholy of barren stems and skeleton frames in the park or the forest. In Granada this attraction takes on an added power from the exact definition of outline acquired by every individual leaf through the remarkable clearness of the air, which, while it makes distant objects seem near, separates those that are near to one another with the precision of things standing in vacuo, such as is familiar in stereoscopic views. It may well be a question whether there is any other spot of earth so filled with multifarious pleasure for the eye as this half-circuit of the Alhambra walls, ending at the ancient Puerta del Hierro, which gives access to the wonders of the palace within.

It was after I had come down, later on, from the Alhambra Hill that I saw a sight such as could hardly nowadays be seen in any part of Europe but in Spain, or even in Spain except in some far-off corner, such as Granada. A long cortege was headed by some 40 or 50 acolytes, preceded by the cross, and dressed in the scarlet frocks and lace albs of a cathedral choir. A few laymen, looking like the hired mourners of old-time funerals, followed them, and behind, borne on the shoulders of four men, whom I took to be laycanons (being something between priest and parishioners) came an open bier, and in it, completely hidden by flowers, except for her face and hands crossed over her breast, the dead body of young nun. Her complexion had been of so deep and rich a brown that even the recession of the blood when the spring of its visitation was released had not wholly quenched the outward glow and colour of life, though the settled content and dignity of the clear-cut features were such as only death, when it brings absolution to the face from the human passions and anxieties which in life make war upon its divinity, is wont to impart by its one sovereign touch of consecration. The surprise of this singular spectacle brought at once to the mind this great line of sudden pathos which flames out of one of Webster's darkest pages:—

but yet whatever tragedy may have there been carried to oblivion, greater and other than the common tragedy of a light of human felicity wasted in life and too soon extinguished, there seemed little notice taken or even curiosity shown by the townsfolk. The twin lines of scarlet-clad acolytes moved on with the half-careless gait of boys in a perfunctory march; the mourners and the bevy of priests behind the dead advanced more steadily but with a like indifference; and at a dip in the road, the bier itself sank slowly from sight with its strange freight of a dual loveliness, culled from many gardens and one home. And, thus disappearing, it attracted little more attention in the busy street than the passengers of a great liner give to the vanishing glances of some vagrant sail which is seen hulling down on the horizon, and so one either knows, or cares to know, its name or its story, or the port of its endeavour.

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social Column" in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning, and be fully endorsed.

Socially speaking the past week has not been a particularly busy one, although there has been plenty to do, and to see. The meeting of the National Council of women at State Government House on Thursday, and the opening of the Society of Women Painters' Exhibition at Lawson House on Wednesday morning, both attracted many women interested in these important movements. Members of the social world are rather glad that the days have not been crowded with engagements, as the warm spring weather we have experienced during the week has apparently come to stay, and a little spare time allows them time to select and think out their dresses for the coming spring race festivities. Everyone is choosing hats or dresses, and the mornings are mostly devoted to "shopping." There is a wide range of choice in the present styles, and happily one is able to consult her own individuality in a great measure, and already the tailors and dressmakers are as busy as can be. The large shops are bright with spring novelties, and the florists' windows gay with beautiful stocks and sweet peas, and other sweet smelling blossoms.

Last Thursday afternoon Lady Edeline Strickland presided at a general meeting of the National Council of Women, held at State Government House. The business of the afternoon was termed "international," and most interesting accounts were read of the recent International Conference of the National Council of Women, recently held at the Hague and in Paris. The Australian delegate, Mrs. Henry Dobson (who has just returned from the congress), was unavoidably prevented, through the quarantine restrictions, from being present, and her valuable and interesting paper of the general proceedings was read by Miss Rose Scott, a vote of thanks to Mrs. Dobson being carried unanimously. The paper on "Emigration," from the New South Wales convener, Mrs. Vickery, was read by Mrs. H. E. Barff, and listened to with much attention, as so many women here are interested in the Act. Mrs. Goldschmidt read a report of the press committee, also sent by Mrs. Vickery. Both ladies spoke most warmly of the great hospitality and the kindness shown to them in Holland and in France. A most delicate little attention to the women at the conference held in Paris was shown by the National Anthem of the speaker's country being played and sung before the delegate or member read her paper. In Paris a grand banquet was given in honour of the members of the council, at which there were 1000 guests present, and the members of the International Council were also entertained by the French President, M. Poincaire, at the Elysee. Thursday's meeting was one of the most interesting held by the council for some time. About 70 or 80 ladies were present at Government House, amongst whom were Mrs. E. Jenkins (who is about to take six months' leave of absence, and whose work will be taken by Miss Ruby Board), Miss Rose Scott, Mrs. Barff, Mrs. MacCallum, Mrs. Goldschmidt, Mrs. M'Anderson, Mrs. A. Lassetter, Mrs. T. Hughes, Mrs. A. J. Riley, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. L. Dodds, Mrs. Rich, Mrs. F. L. Cohen, Mrs. B. F. Marks, Mrs. Eyres, Mrs. Lyster, Mrs. Asher, Mrs. Mosely, Mrs. Huxtable, Mrs. Nolan, Miss Fidler, Mrs. W. E. Shaw, Mrs. Thornett, Miss Sutherland, Mrs. A. N. Thompson, Mrs. E. C. V. Broughton, Mrs. Hugh Dennison, Dr. Marion Thornett, Mrs. Penty, Mrs. Zlotkowski, Mrs. Lord, Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Baruch (National Council, Victoria), Mrs. Finn, Miss Drewe, Miss Golding, and many others. At the conclusion of the meeting the visitors were entertained at tea by Lady Edeline Strickland, the Misses Strickland, Colonel Campbell, and Captain Talbot, A.D.C., being assiduous in their attention to all.

Much interest is still being taken in the Lady Mayoress' appeal for the Crown-street Women's Hospital, and two balls are to be shortly held in aid of the fund. One is to take place next Wednesday evening, August 13, in the Willoughby Town Hall, and is under the patronage of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress (Alderman and Mrs. A. C. Cocks). The second ball is to be held in the Paddington Town Hall on Monday, September 1. Both promise to be most successful. The Lady Mayoress' fund has mounted up to £2186, not including the very large sums realised by the two matinees, so that the hospital will greatly benefit by the Lady Mayoress' appeal.

A large number of visitors assembled at Lawson House, 49 Clarence-street (near Petty's Hotel) on Wednesday morning, when Lady Cullen formally opened the annual exhibition of the Society of Women Painters, being introduced to those present by Sir Francis Suttor. Lady Cullen said she heartily congratulated the members on their work, and had the greatest pleasure in declaring the exhibition open. Lady Cullen advised all the young artists to travel if they could possibly do so, to see for themselves the best and highest art in the old world, and to receive the impressions first-hand, and to study the different schools of art. The exhibition shows a marked improvement as a whole, and many charming pictures were on view. Amongst the numerous visitors at the opening were Lady Graham, Mrs. Wilfred Docker, Mrs. Langer Owen, Mrs. Barff, Mrs. Jenkins, Miss Macdonald, Mrs. Lyster, Mrs. Fawitt, Miss Suttor, Mrs. Gladstone Hawke, Mrs. Sly, Mrs. Willoughby Flower, Miss Fairfax, Mrs. Garland, Mrs. A. Lee, Mrs. Dodds, Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. and Miss Mackenie, Mrs. Headley, Mrs. Tunbridge, Mrs. M'Masters, Mrs. S. Kearney, Mrs. T. Hughes, Miss Ward, Miss Allison, Miss Hayes, Miss Ethel Stephens, Miss Gladys Owen, Miss Cowan, Miss Russell, Miss Miller, Mr. Du Faur, Dr. Kennedy, Mrs. Kelty, Mrs. Bowker, Mrs. Shute, Miss Cusack, Miss Rodway, Miss M. Campbell, Miss Pring, Miss L. Chauvel, and Miss Palmer.

Lady Cullen was "at home" at her residence, Tregoyd, Mosman, on Wednesday afternoon, when a drawing-room exhibition of women's handicrafts was held. Lady Cullen received the visitors in the drawing-room, which was charmingly decorated with flowers, and in which the work of the members of the Handicrafts Association was displayed. After inspecting the different exhibits Lady Cullen entertained those present at afternoon tea served in the dining-room. Amongst the visitors were: Lady Hay, Lady MacMillan, Mrs. Christian, Mrs. White, Mrs. Leahy, Mrs. R. Arthur, Mrs. Curlewis, Mrs. C. Perry, Mrs. S. Kearney, and many members of the Women's Handicrafts Association.

Miss Fairfax will be "at home" at the Women Painters' Exhibition, at Lawson Hou[se] on Monday afternoon, and a large number of friends have been invited to be present.

A largely-attended meeting of the committee in connection with St. Vincent's Hospital Ball, which is to take place on Tuesday, August 26, was held at the hospital last Tuesday morning. His Excellency the Governor has signified his intention of being present, and already 14 fancy poudre sets have been arranged, including a Watteau set by Mrs. Ronald Forbes. The Misses O'Connor are arranging the tableaux vivants, with many well-known people in them. The tableaux should prove a great attraction for those who patronise the galleries. Three prizes are to be given for the best fancy sets, and each occupant of a seat in the gallery will have the privilege of a vote.

Madame Clara Butt and Mr. Kennerley Rumford returned to Sydney from their trip to Queensland, on Wednesday morning, having much enjoyed their visit to the northern State. They spent some days on a station at Rockhampton, the life being full of delightful interest and pleasure to them both. Madame Butt and Mr. Rumford, with the members of their company, will give a farewell concert in the Town Hall this evening, which promises to be very largely attended.

In commemoration of the 21st year of the Women's College, an entertainment is to be given in the college grounds (weather permitting) on Friday evening, August 22, for which the Principal and Councillors of the Women's College have issued invitations. "A Mask," the work of Mr. J. Le Gay Brereton, and Mr. C. Brennan, and written specially for the occasion, is to be performed, and the students of the college, past and present, are taking part.

The committee of the recent Children's Matinee Ball, held in the Paddington Town Hall, in aid of the Woolloomooloo Day Nursery, handed over a cheque for £172 0s 6d during the week, being the proceeds of the ball, a most gratifying result, for which the committee were warmly congratulated, and heartily thanked by those in charge of the Day Nursery.

The members of the Alliance Francaise of Sydney will hold the third and last soiree of the season on Tuesday week, August 19, at St. James' Hall. His Excellency the Governor and Lady Adeline Strickland have accepted the invitation of the committee to be present. The hostess for the evening will be Mrs. C. Shard.

Miss Margaret Hodge will speak on "Social Hygiene in connection with the Modern Drama," and Miss Harriett C. Newcomb will give a short address on "The Multiplication of the Unfit," at the lecture to be given at the Town Hall on Monday afternoon next, August 11, in connection with the Health Society of N.S.W. winter course of lectures.

Mrs. Anthony Hordern is thoroughly enjoying her visit to England, and is staying at the Hyde Park Hotel, writes an English correspondent. She had a box at the Royal Horse Show, and entertained a party of friends there the day the King and the French President were present; and she also attended the State ball at Buckingham Palace on June 26, and is frequently seen in her box at the opera.

A most successful meeting of the Women and Children's Hospital Ball Committee was held at the Mosman Town Hall on August 6. There was a record attendance. In the absence of the president (the Lady Mayoress of Sydney) the Mayoress of Mosman (Mrs. W. Piggott) presided. Numerous donations were received, also offers of assistance, and several prizes to be awarded to the successful competitors in the fancy sets and fancy costumes. The hon. organiser (Mrs. P. Leahy) reported that 12 fancy sets were already registered, and that there promised to be a number in individual costumes. The gallery tickets are selling well, and it is anticipated that every seat will be occupied. A special musical programme, commencing at 7.30, will be provided, and a number of young ladies will sell sweets in the galleries. The president of the ball committee is the Lady Mayoress of Sydney (Mrs. A. A. Cocks; the hon. treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Phipps; the hon. secretaries, Mesdames A. Cambage, S. Maguire, J. M. Maclean; and hon organiser, Mrs. P. Leahy. The ball will take place at the Sydney Town Hall next Thursday evening, August 14.

The jubilee fete and art union in aid of St. Mark's Industrial Home, Leichhardt, was opened on Wednesday afternoon in the presence of the Misses Strickland, who were accompanied by Miss Birch, and a large number of visitors. The stalls were most effectively draped with yellow and white and were presided over by Mesdames Dynon, Deery, O'Gorman, Hughes, Phillipson, Cook, Moloney, Fritsch, Glary, Turner, Fitzgerald, O'Connor, Britton, Parter, and the Misses Brown, Staunton, O'Brien, O'Loughlin, and Oxenham. During the past week Quirindi has been quite en fete with many gaieties connected with the polo carnival, which began last Monday. Perfect weather prevailed, and a large number of visitors from Sydney, and many of the surrounding districts were present to take part in the festivities. The polo ball was a great success, the hall being decorated with white and green, with trails of pink roses, and the lights shaded with rose pink. Amongst those present were Mrs. Allison (Coomoo Coomoo) and Miss Allison (a debutante), Mrs. and Miss Borthwick (Walcha), Mr. and Mrs. R. White (Merton), Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. Harold White (Martindale), Mr. and Mrs. Percy Willsallen, Mr. and Mrs. H. Osborne (Muswellbrook), Mrs. F. Payne (Nundle), Mr. and Mrs. H. Willsallen, Mrs. K. Richards, Mrs. Fenwick (Walcha), Mrs. Ronald (Trinkie), Mrs. A. Gill (Walcha), Miss Dorothy White (Belltrees), Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Willsallen, Mrs. J. Davies (Scone), Mrs. Simpson (Melbourne), the Misses Olive King, Laidley, S. Ch'holm, Crocker, Ross, Hazel Sly, Irving Keys, M. Bell, Merson, M. Hardy, and Ruth White. In the "Dancing Mistress," a bright musical comedy, now being played at the Criterion Theatre, the dresses are of the ultra-fashionable order, and are attracting much attention amongst the women in the audience. Miss Grace Palotta still upholds her reputation for good dressing. The black toilette in which she makes her entry is of the softest fabric possible, the material gathered into the waist and then falling with pannier effect half-way down the skirt, the material forming a wispy train. The hem is quite uneven, and one side is opened up to allow the necessary freedom of movement. The bodice shows the new pleated basque effect, and is closed with large crystal buttons. Later she wears a golden brown velvet skirt draped according to fashion, with a deep cord fastening to a long basqued bodice of the new Bulgarian colouring—a golden background patterned thickly over with shades of crimson to purple and blue. In the last act her evening dress is a combination of fuchsia, cherry, and pink, the swathed draping effect of diaphanous fabric partly veiling a lace underdress embroidered in golden bugles. Miss Blanche Browne chose an emerald green silk dance dress, which is accordeon pleated and most becoming. In the second act her toilette is more elaborate. As the scene is laid in Switzerland it gives an opportunity of displaying the very latest in skiing toilettes. The narrow skirts with their fur borders look well, with bright-hued coats of the new brocaded material, and with fur hats to match. Miss Browne's all-white costume is fur-trimmed, her white hat having a little touch of black. In the final act Miss Browne looks well in black ninon effectively sewn with diamante over a glittering underdress of jewelled lace, a stole-like front of brilliants adding to the general good effect. Miss Olive Godwin has also some handsome dresses, perhaps the newest being a white skirt, striped with gold worn with a red brocaded coat. Later she appears in an evening toilette of shadow lace with a cut-away overdress of the new broche, this being golden colour and having a very pointed train. As a whole the dresses are most effective, but many of them are so tight about the ankles that unless they were opened some inches up the movement of the wearers would be greatly hampered.

The annual ball, under the auspices of the Prince Leopold Lodge of Freemasons, Grafton, was held on Wednesday evening, and was a great success. There were visitors from the various parts of the district, including many of the fraternity from the Lower Clarence. The Grand Masonic march through an arch of steel was a prominent feature of the ball. There were 74 couples present. The arrangements were in charge of Messrs. C. Strauss, H. M. Baldock, and H. Miller, and the Criterion Hall and supper-room were profusely decorated, the sprays of golden wattle figuring prominently everywhere.

Last Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Wallace Fraser entertained a number of young people at her residence, Beaufort, Point Piper. A small theatre was arranged in the drawing-room, when some dancing dolls caused great amusement. Tea was served in the dining-room, the tables being decorated with white stocks, intermixed with red, white, and blue ribbons, and each small guest received a souvenir in the shape of a beautiful toy. Amongst the guests who helped to amuse the young people were Lady Barton, Lady Simpson, Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. Oscar Backhouse, Mrs. Marks, Mrs. Prichett Bassett, Mrs. and Miss Gore, Miss Annie Barber, and Miss Fraser.

The third annual dance in aid of the Hospital Saturday funds (Leichhardt branch) was held in the Dispensary Hall, Parramatta-road, Petersham, on Wednesday, July 30. The success of the dance was due to the efforts of the committee, which included Mrs. Connelly (president), Mrs. E. Jansen (hon. sec.), Mrs. Hancock (hon. treasurer), Mesdames Hastings, Westbrook, Childs, Rall, Baldock, and Treadgold. Messrs. Hastings and Westbrook were masters of ceremonies.

On June 7, at the Methodist Church, Manly, the marriage of Mildred, daughter of Mrs. Finn, of Manly, to Otto, third son of Heinrich Raz, of Schopfheim, Eichen, Germany, was solemnised by the Rev. L. H. Kelynack, B.A., the church being tastefully decorated by friends for the occasion. The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother and was given away by her mother, wore soft Oriental satin, with an overdress of silk Marquisette and Honiton lace; she also wore a trail of orange blossom over a tulle veil, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and bouvardia, which, with a diamond cluster ring, was the gift of the bridegroom. She was attended by Miss Ethel Finn, her sister, as bridesmaid, who was in white charmeuse, with an overdress of ninon, trimmed with white fur and pearls; the bridesmaid's gifts from the bridegroom were a shower bouquet of purple sweet pea and violets, with heliotrope streamers, and a gold "Nellie Stewart" bracelet. The best man was Mr. H. F. Baker, brother-in-law of the bride. A reception was afterwards held at the Hotel Pacific, Manly. Later, the bride and bridegroom left for Melbourne for their honeymoon, the bride's travelling dress being of grey cloth, and a black panne velvet hat and lancer plume.

A wedding was celebrated at the Osborne Memorial Church, of St. Luke Brounsville, on Wednesday, July 23, when Mr. George Oyston, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Oyston, of Dapto, was married to Miss Emileen Arthur, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Arthur, of Junee, and Mrs. Arthur, of Dapto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. O'Neill, rector of the parish, and the service was full choral. The church was prettily decorated by the members of the choir. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. W. H. Arthur, wore white crepe-de-chine, veiled in ninon and embroidered with silk and orange blossoms. She also wore an embroidered veil over a coronet of orange blossoms, and a diamond ring, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Annie Arthur (sister) was chief bridesmaid, and wore satin striped crystalline voile over cream satin, trimmed with lace, and a white hat with ostrich plumes. Her gold brooch was the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Martha Oyston, sister of the bridegroom, was dressed in cream silk voile, trimmed with lace and cream satin, and a white hat with white feathers. She carried a posy of violets, and wore a gold brooch, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. W. Oyston acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Oyston left by the afternoon train for Picton where the honeymoon was spent, the bride travelling in a nattier blue coat and skirt, with a hat to match. Miss Saker-Jones gave a most enjoyable at home to a large number of friends at Trevonner, Glebe Point, on Wednesday, July 30. Miss James played delightfully on the violin, to the accompaniment of Miss Duesbury and Mrs. Jordan's singing, to the accompaniment of Miss James, was also much appreciated. Miss Hodge gave an address upon the "History of the Suffrage Movement in the British Isles," and explained the causes which made the present crisis so acute. After light refreshments had been served, Miss Newcomb spoke on the universal character of the woman's movement, which was as extensive as it was intensive. She described the International Women's Suffrage Alliance and the great meeting of this society at Stockholm in June, 1911, where she and Miss Hodge were so highly honoured by women representatives from all the civilised countries of the world because they were delegates from Australia, the land that had inaugurated its existence as a nation with the acceptance of the great principle of equal suffrage. The speaker referred to the meeting of the International Women's Suffrage Alliance this year in the wonderfully interesting, historic town of Buda-Pesth, and congratulated the women of Australia on the fact that the late Premier had sent Miss Burke (now Mrs. Spencer) as a Government delegate. The choice was an excellent one, as Miss Burke is an able speaker and writer, and has a wide knowledge of Australian life, both political and social. She is also an excellent linguist. The audience was much interested, and heartily thanked both speakers and performers. Among those who accepted invitations to the reception were Mrs. Bradshaw, Canon and Mrs. Cranswick, Rev. Clive and Mrs. Stathan, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. and Miss Henderson, Mrs. and Miss Usher, Mrs. Holburn, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Halcomb, Mrs. Kretschmer, Mrs. Smith, Miss F. Smith, Dr. Little and Dr. Latham.

Hackett, and the ladies of the committee provided the supper. Amongst those present were Dr. and Mrs. J. Kain, Mrs. and Miss Finn, Mr. and Mrs. Roche, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bull and Miss Bull, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hackett, Mrs. C. Horan, Mrs. J. W. Dwyer, Mrs. N. Soutar, the Misses E. Hogan, Brennan (2), Molloy, Nolan, Duff, M'Grath, Devitt (2), Fell, F. Collins, E. The Freemasons of the State have arranged for their annual ball to be held in the Sydney Town Hall on Tuesday, August 19. This fixture has for years held a permanent place in the social events of the city, and this year will be no exception to the rule. Although it provides an annual meeting place for members of the craft throughout the State, its main object is to provide funds for the Freemasons' Benevolent Institution, whose special care is to provide homes for the aged and distressed. In carrying out this work the institution has spent over £16,000, and now has 120 old people in its care. This year special attention has been given by the committee to the providing of attractions for the patrons of the gallery, and, in addition to an organ recital by the city organist, Captain Bentley will preside over the State Military Band in a specially selected programme. As the installation of the newly-elected grand master will take place the evening before, it will be the first appearance of Dr. Carruthers in his new position. The function is under the patronage of his Excellency the Governor, his Honor the Chief Justice, and the Right Worshipful the Lord Mayor.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Chappell and Co., Ltd., publish new music. "The Port of Au Revoir" is one of Hermann Lohr's most captivating efforts, and though artistically it is inferior to his best work, the song is highly attractive from a popular standpoint. Dorothy Forster's "Were I Some Star" is in a somewhat more elevated vein, and, with its beautiful harmonies and effective change into the minor key, may be fairly described as an excellent song. "My Hidden Rose," by Alfred Harris, possesses a simple, taking voice-theme, that is buoyantly lifted by the rhythmic swing of the accompaniment, whilst at the same time the tenderly poetic idea of Edward Teschemacher's lyrics duly makes its appeal. "The Moon of Omar" is a reverie for pianoforte by Clarence Lucas, suitable as a melodious after-dinner piece for an advanced juvenile player. The "Passion Flower" valse, by Pedro de Zulueta, is a ballroom composition, presenting well-defined melodies characterised by a rhythm well accentuated for dancers, whilst the design for the title-page is decidedly alluring. "Jemima," by C. Finucane Draper, is a seriocomic song with a suggestion of rag-time (verses by D. Eardley-Wilmot), depending almost entirely upon the humorous abilities of the singer. From the same collaborators comes "Poor Jane," the song of a plain child who takes her situation humorously. This number is probably intended for an adult artist, or amateur, drolly made up as a little girl in a pinafore and ribbons. "The Wonderful Wise Man o' Tawton" is a capital ballad in "Zummerset" dialect, set to rollicking rustic music by Kennedy Russell, and may be cordially recommended.

Mr. George S. Titheradge, the ever popular English and Australian Dramatic Actor, writes the following Testimony to Clements Tonic, the Standard Nerve Medicine.

The centres of Australian dramatic art have rarely seen any more popular actor than Mr. G. S. Titheradge. Wherever he may appear upon any local stage he is assured of an earnest welcome, and one that has been extended to him through the many long years in which he has appeared in productions almost innumerable.

Those people who take an interest in dramatic interpretation of a very fine order will remember that on the last return of Mr. Titheradge from his English tour he was anything but well, suffering from the general weakness and depression only too often associated with the after-effects of appendicitis. On reaching convalescence, he was induced to try Clements Tonic, with the result that he improved so much in health that, to quote his own words, "I was often taken for my own son," so greatly did this wonderful nerve tonic benefit his enfeebled constitution. Mr. Titheradge's testimony is here published, and speaks for itself.

"CLEMENTS TONIC LTD.,

"I promised to let you know what good (if any) Clements Tonic did me. This is the result:

"Two or three times recently I have had occasion in the course of business to mention my name to people who were unacquainted with me off the stage.

"In each case the query has been put to me: 'How's your father's health?' Verb sap.

"Yours faithfully,

This tonic is of exceptional value in all cases of Insomnia, Nervous Breakdown, Weakness after Fever, Long Illness, or Operations, Anaemia, Indigestion, Constipation, Sick Headache or Debility. Send to your Chemist or Store for it to-day, because when you get it you get good health, too.

On CONTINENTALS.

The French Grand Prix is an annual event, and was this year held over a wedge-shaped course of 19.6 miles near Amiens. Formerly it was a straight-out speed contest; this year speed was combined with reliability, each car being allowed forty gallons of petrol for the contest, or an average of fourteen miles to the gallon. It will be easily understood how important a part the tyres would play in a matter of reliability. Last year's event was won by Boillot, also on Continental Tyres.

JULY REVIEWS.

THE REAWAKENING OF FRANCE.

In the July number of the "Nineteenth Century" Dr. Georges Chatterton-Hill (Doctor of Sociology at the University of Geneva) has an exhaustive article on "The Reawakening of France." It is a very real awakening, he says, and the German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, was speaking by the book when he said in the Reichstag on April 9 last "France no longer fears us, she believes herself to be equal, if not superior, to us." To what is this due? Largely, replies the writer of the article, to the part played by M. Briand in restoring confidence to a country bereft of all faith in Governments, and rent asunder by apparently hopeless moral anarchy, largely to the wise conduct of affairs by M. Raymond Poincare (now President of the Republic), and largely to the "jeunesse intellectuelle," the youth that is prepared for life by the Universities, or by the various Ecoles Superieures. The German Emperor, we are told, completed the work begun by M. Briand—completed it in such a way that all Europe and all France were astonished. The "coup d'Agadir," by which France was to be intimidated, produced the diametrically opposite effect. All of a sudden a new France has arisen. The young generation of to-day is as different from the young generation of 20 years ago as the poles asunder. The new generation is described as both religious and patriotic. There are evidences of a return to Roman Catholicism. Three of the writers who are exercising the greatest influence on the intellectual youth of present-day France, Paul Bourget, Maurice Barres (leader of the Parliamentary Nationalist party), and Henry Bordeaux, are all Catholics, and staunch defenders of the Church. Another is M. Romain Rolland, the author of "Jean Christophe," to whom the Grand Prize for literature has just been awarded.

THE MALAY BATTLESHIP.

Under the above heading Mr. A. MacCallum Scott, M.P., discusses in the "Contemporary Review" the recent gift to the Imperial Navy of a battleship, costing £2,850,000, from the Federated Malay States. He accuses the British Government of having by yielding to the financial pressure of the moment established a dangerous precedent. The "Singapore Free Press," an influential organ of British opinion, has opposed the whole transaction, declaring that "it will not do to pretend that the gift is voluntary," and charging the Imperial Government with "cadging upon its proteges." The Federated Malay States are not a self-governing colony, with complete autonomy in the giving or withholding of gifts of this kind. Neither are they a Crown colony. They are protected States, the rulers of which have entered into treaty relations with the British Empire, whose foreign relations are controlled by the Imperial Government, whose domestic legislation and financial affairs are in the hands of a council nominated by the Imperial Government, and whose native rulers are advised in their administration by officials appointed by the Imperial Government. "The offer came, not from the Malay rulers in their theoretical capacity as independent sovereigns, but from the Federal Council, of which every member besides themselves has been appointed by the Imperial Government, and over which the British High Commissioner presides."

THE POSITION IN EGYPT.

During the six years which have elapsed since he left Cairo, the Earl of Cromer has carefully abstained from taking any part in discussions on current Egyptian affairs, but he has now departed from this reticence, for the current number of the "Nineteenth Century" contains an article written by him on "The Capitulations in Egypt." No one is better equipped to speak on Egyptian affairs than Lord Cromer. A short time ago a Russian subject was, at the request of the Consular authorities, handed over to them for deportation to Russia. It has become clear, says Lord Cromer, that a country which is not, indeed, British territory, but which is held by a British garrison, and in which British influence is predominant, affords no safe asylum for a political refugee, and this and other anomalies afford ground for holding that the time has come for reforming the system hitherto known as that of the capitulations. There is only one method, he goes on to say, by which the evils of the existing system can be removed. The British Government should request the other Powers of Europe to vest in them the legislative power which each now exercises separately, and simultaneously with this request a legislative chamber should be created in Egypt for enacting laws to which Europeans will be amenable.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Sir Ramsdyke Fuller, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., writes in the "Nineteenth Century" about a recent visit to the Panama Canal. The canal is a triumph, he says, not of man's hands, but of machinery. How sharp is the contrast between the elaborate steam machinery here employed and the hand labour of the "fellahin" who patiently dug out the Suez Canal. But the machinery has to be controlled, and there is work to employ a staff of 50,000 men, some 4000 of whom are Americans. Of the other 26,000, the great majority are negroes, British subject from Jamaica and Trinidad. The expenditure throughout is on a lavish scale, and the canal will not cost much less than £60,000,000. Eighteen months have still to pass before the official opening of the Canal, but it is stated as possible that a vessel may be passed through it as soon as this summer's rain has filled the reservoir. The passage of both flights of locks is not expected to occupy more than three hours, and ships should complete the transit of the isthmus—a distance of about 43 miles—within 12 hours at most. Fortifications are being constructed at both entrances, and it is probable that the Canal zone will be garrisoned by a force of 25,000 men.

COUNT ARTHUR OF GOBINEAU.

In the "Contemporary Review" we have an account by Mr. J. M. Hone of Count Arthur of Gobineau, the race-mystic. Gobineau, a Frenchman, has only recently gained a worthy measure of reputation in France itself. It was left to Germany to "discover" him. This Frenchman was one of the principal architects of the Germanist theory. When the news reached Paris about 1898 that a society, composed chiefly of learned Germans, had been founded at Freiburg-im-Breisgau to publish, edit, and propagate the writings of a deceased French diplomat, it occasioned considerable surprise; but since then the ideas of Gobineau, as appearing in his "Essay on the Inequality of Human Races," the "Renaissance," and the "History of Persia," have been reviewed and expounded in many French critical studies and newspaper articles.

LABOUR LEGISLATION IN AUSTRALIA.

Mr. J. H. Harley writes in the "Contemporary Review" on "Labour Legislation and the Australian Elections." We read apropos of the recent Federal elections: "It was only in the pastoral districts of such an important State as New South Wales that the Liberals had any chance. There they had become the allies of the wealthier squatters, who were opposed to the graduated land tax of the Labour Administration, and who desired, ere the hour-glass ran out, to arrest the triumphant policy of breaking up their big estates." And then we are told that the Labour party has pursued the policy of eminently safe experiments, their leaders never having pretended to be able to realise the millennium all at once. We are cheerfully informed that "they have no cast-iron scheme of bureaucratic collectivism." Mr. Harley proceeds to discuss the Labour party's bent for the nationalisation of industries. But the greater part of the article is taken up with our arbitration and wages board systems. He is a little bit behind the times, however, as he refers to Mr. G. S. Beeby as "the present Minister of Labour in New South Wales." Mr. Harley concludes by describing the Arbitration Act of 1912 as a great stride in advance—the surest, most defensible kind of legislation—"and there is no doubt," he says, "that we see the results of this statesmanlike policy in the contentment of the industrial districts with the legislation of the Labour party at the recent general elections."

THE NEW HEBRIDES.

A NARRATIVE OF TRAVEL.

I.

A POLITICAL STORM CENTRE.

The necessity for the spread of information concerning this beautiful and interesting group of islands is growing with the passage of time. Whether viewed from the standpoint of international politics, ethnological science, commercial possibilities, or lastly that of Christian philanthropy, the New Hebrides have a special claim to the attention of Australians. The facilities offered by Messrs. Burns, Philp, and Co. for the inspection of this joint dependency of England and France are not availed of by the tourists to the extent its importance would suggest; but there is an undoubted awakening to the fact that we have at the distance of only a few days' travel a chain of lovely islands, of wonderful fertility, inhabited by a race of, people just emerging from barbarism—a race whose characteristics and customs are only known by the very few. The special reason for an appeal to Australians to take a keener interest in the New Hebrides at the present time lies in the fact that we are rapidly approaching a crisis in the history of these islands. This crisis will be reached when the Condominium Court deals with the land claims made by the various traders, planters, and others who are now in occupation of areas to which they may or may not be entitled, according to the authoritative decision of the Court. It is safe to say that if the Australian people had taken the same interest in the group, and had emulated in these later days the enterprise of the French of New Caledonia in the matter of the development of the islands, or if not their development, at any rate their occupation, there would now be overwhelming reason for the demand that British interests should be considered paramount. As the matter stands, it is most difficult to secure accurate information of the extent of the French claims, for these have not yet been lodged, and no one can say much as to what the nature of those claims may be. The New Hebrides may be considered as a national proposition, covering part of the great problem of the occupation of the Pacific by nations other than British. They form part of the great and almost unbroken chain of islands stretching from New Guinea on the north to Walpole Island to the south-east of New Caledonia—a thousand miles east of Rockhampton. They lie between Queensland and Fiji, and consist of about a score of habitable islands, some, such as Santo and Malekula, quite respectable in size, and others mere specks upon the ocean. Massed together, the whole group would represent about 5000 square miles of territory, most of which is available to the cultivator of the soil, whether he be native or foreigner. The New Hebrides would certainly carry a much larger population than the 65,000 said to be living in the group, if the land were put under the plough. The natives are a diminishing quantity; and if only a small part of the stories in circulation are true, and if the records of the courts of justice are accurate, there is but little doubt that the race is doomed to extinction, hurried thereto by the exploitation of the unscrupulous white man. The point, however, now to be made is whether Australia is willing that these possible outposts of empire should be handed over to an alien Power—a Power whose interests in the Pacific bear no proportion at all to the predominating claims of Australia as the country most vitally interested in the disposal of the islands encircling the Coral Sea. The destiny of the New Hebrides is of immense importance to the future of British interests in the southern hemisphere. Whatever may be their commercial capabilities—and they are by no means to be despised—their strategical value to the British Empire is unchallengeable. With the opening of the Panama Canal, many things may happen to threaten the peaceful development of Australia. The gradual spread south of the equator of Asiatic influences is also a factor in the problem. The Japanese cannot be left out, of count in any attempt to forecast the future of this part of the globe, and the Chinese will come to-morrow with grim possibilities of menace, so that Australia cannot afford to treat with indifference the question of the possession of any single group of islands contiguous to our coasts. We may return to the political side of things later on, and have only sounded this note, so to speak, to attract attention to a narration of personal experiences that may not be without interest to lovers of travel and students of human affairs.

LORD HOWE AND NORFOLK.

A journey to Vila, the capital of the New Hebrides, might be made from Sydney in four days if a modern 17-knot steamer were available for the trip. As it is, one has to be content with what is provided under the British flag by Messrs. Burns, Philp, and Co., or else journey by the French boat, in which case one would have to substitute a call at Noumea for a visit to these intere ting, lonely, surf-surrounded islands of Lord Howe and Norfolk. Messrs. Burns, Philp have been steadily developing the trade with the New Hebrides, and at the present time have two steamers, the Makalta and the Makambo, running in monthly trips. The company is shortly to replace the former vessel by one of more modern type, and when that is done there will be little to choose between the vessels dedicated to the requirements of the tourist. The outward journey started under conditions which put man and matter to the test. Westerly winds and seas following a rolling, lurching, straining vessel, just able to keep ahead of the "white horses" which threatened to overstep the bounds of courtesy and come unbidden aboard—these were the conditions which speeded the Malaita to Lord Howe, 420 miles north-east from Sydney Cove. The passenger list was full, and the accommodation of the little craft taxed to its utmost table capacity; but, strange to say, not until the anchor went down on the eastern side of the noble cliffs of Lord Howe was it necessary to have a second sitting. Still water has the power of working miracles, and refractory epigastric regions yield to the spell of a great calm. The stay at Lord Howe Island is just long enough to whet the appetite for the good things spread before the artist or man of science. Restricted in area, yet wonderfully diversified in scenery, from the impressive twin mountains rising over 2000ft from the ever-restless sea, to the quiet little cove, edged with glistening sand, and backed by a forest of Kentia palms, Lord Howe presents a restful picture to the wave-tossed voyager. Its people, some 150 in number, live the retired life. Its bonnie children are mannerly and remarkably healthy, and they are evidently being carefully taught by Mr. Kirby, who, fortunately for the community is in charge of the educational affairs of the island.

The 487 miles between here and Norfolk Island is covered in 60 hours, thus proving that our boat can live up to her reputation as an "eight-knotter." The Norfolk Island people are nothing if not leisurely, and why should they not be? Nature is exceedingly kind in this delightful region, apart and yet not remote from the busy working world. Getting to Norfolk is like getting home after nearly a thousand miles of sea trip, for is there not here the cable station, from whence one may communicate with one's friends. The arresting feature of Norfolk Island scenery is the ubiquity of the characteristic dark-branched tapering pine. Here in its native soil it is seen in perfection, and the stately avenue through which one passes on the road to the cable station is one of those impressive pictures of nature's majesty that are not soon to be erased from memory. As to the people, let those speak who have partaken of their lavish hospitality, who have listened to their quaintly accented English. They are an orderly folk, and wise legislation provides that they shall take their liquor moderately, for the country is practically "dry," the key of the cellar being, so to speak, in the hand of the Chief Magistrate, who can only turn it in the lock at the bidding of the medical man. What a responsibility lies with the gentleman whose prescriptions are of such a fascinating nature! There is obviously some Polynesian blood in these people, and I see cares to inquire the wherefore let him read the story of Pitcairn and the "Mutiny of the Bounty." One may put in the foreground of the present-day picture the humanitarian enterprise of the Melanesian Mission, which has a goodly heritage of fat acres, cared for by the dark "boys" from many islands and of many tongues, who have been brought here to be taught the best that the white man can teach, and to be sent back to become, it is hoped, centres of sweetness and light in their island homes. The mission, with its remarkable and beautiful church, built as a memorial to the great and good Bishop Patteson, is as much the moral feature of this charming little place as the pine is its physical.

DIRCK HARTOG'S PLATE.

A DUTCH CONUNDRUM.

(BY GEO. COLLINGRIDGE.)

II.

But we come now to the most mysterious part of this Dutch conundrum. "On the first of February (1697)"—I am quoting from Vlamingh's journal—"early in the morning, our little boat went to the coast to fish. Our chief pilot, with De Vlamingh's boat, again went into the gulf, and our skipper went on shore to fix up a commemorative tablet. . . ." The commemorative tablet was fixed up on February 1. I pass over the doings of February 2, which do not refer to the subject, and I arrive at the doings of the 3rd of the same month. "On the 3rd Vlamingh's chief pilot returned on board; he reported that he had explored eighteen leagues, and that it was an island. He brought with him a tin plate, which in the lapse of time had fallen from a post to which it had been attached, and on which was cut the name of the captain, Dirck Hartog, as well as the names of the first and second merchants, and of the chief pilot of the vessel, De Eendragt, which arrived here in the year 1616, on the 25th of October, and left for Bantam on the 27th of the same month." Then, how in the name of everything that is mysterious, could the first commemorative tablet, fixed up two days before, contain the information said to have been found on another tablet two days later? Did they go back to write that inscription on the plate? They do not say so, and presumably it would occur as an addition on the lower part of the plate, whereas it appears on top. The whole thing is inconceivable. Besides, there is something suggestive in Vlamingh's voyage to the coast of New Holland so soon after Dampier's visit and the publication of various voyages relating to Australia, such as "An Account of Several Late Voyages and Discoveries to the South and North, towards the Straits of Magellan, South Seas, the Vast Tracts of Land Beyond Hollandia Nova," etc. by Sir John Narborough, etc., which was published in 1694, the year before Vlamingh's expedition was first mooted. Were the Dutch afraid that the English would claim New Holland as having been discovered by them?

The avowed object of Vlamingh's expedition was to search for the Ridderschap Van Hollandt, lost between the Cape of Good Hope and Batavia, in 1655. This searching for a ship and survivors, lost eleven years before, looks very much like an excuse for the furtherance of some other object; one other object of the expedition being, apparently, the fixing-up of claims of discovery. The authenticity of one of these claims—the one founded on Dirck Hartog's discovery in 1616—was, according to the Dutch account, only obtained a couple of days after the erection of one of their memorials. Vlamingh's replica of Dirck Hartog's or Hatich's plate must be lying perdu in some corner of the French Institute. It must have been deposited there by Freycinet.

Some time ago, in the Sydney Free Library, I had occasion to go once more into this matter more thoroughly, as that institution now possesses Freycinet's magnificent work, Vlamingh's narrative in Dutch, and Blenzi's compilations. Referring to the plate, and to the chances of its being lost for ever if he did not take it away, Freycinet says, very clearly:—"Je la destinais en consequence au cabinet de l'Academie Royale des inscriptions et belles-lettres de l'Institut de France, et j'ai eu l'honneur d'en faire la remise ainsi que le constate le proces verbal de cette illustre societe, du 23 Mars, 1821."

A few years ago, owing to the researches that my inquiries gave rise to, the first plate, Dirck Hartog's, was at last found in Amsterdam, where, presumably, it had been sent in 1697 by Vlamingh. Then, seeing that two photographs, one of Dirck Hartog's plate, and the other of the inscription on the one lost in Paris, were published some time ago in the "Western Australian Year Book," I wrote to the Government Statistician of that State for more ample information in connection with these very interesting, but exceedingly puzzling, relics. Through the kindness of Mr. Malcolm Q. C. Fraser, I received the following most valuable reply:—

Government Statistician's Office,
Perth, February, 21, 1913.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 1st instant, which I was very pleased to receive, and have now to thank you for,

As regards the tin plate, or rather, perhaps, the two tin plates, Dutch and French (both Bo.es), I am forwarding herewith some photographs that may be of interest and service to you.

A. Copy of letter to me from J. J. L. De Pechan, Vernier.

B. and C. Two short synopses of the article of "Baron Heard" mentioned in his letter.

I have the honour, etc.,
MALCOLM Q. C. FRASER,
Government Statistician.

A. Amsterdam, February 1/13.

Dear Sir,—A friend of mine, Mr. Kruyswijk, librarian to the Colonial Museum at Haarlem, drew my attention to your valuable "Western Australian Year Book," pages 3 and 4. Mr. Kruyswijk knew that I was specially interested in the history of Zeelandt's Land and Dirck Hartog's Eiland, as will be proved by the following:—

Reading Professor Heeres' work, "The Part Born by the Dutch . . . etc.," I remembered to have seen a note as described on page 65 (Collingridge, p. 36?) in our States Museum in this town. I immediately went there, and you can easily imagine my satisfaction, seeing at once that this was the real, the only genuine plate. Of course, not de Vlamingh's, the plate found by the Heeres, but the original one, left behind by Dirck Hartog, in 1616, and afterwards brought here by de Vlamingh in 1697.

I failed in tracing the whole story of the tin plate, but I succeeded in proving that it came a century ago in the Royal Cabinet of Rarities at the Hague, and later on (about 1850), went over into the States Museum. All that time it was described as "A tin platter, according to a legend found in Magellan's Strait."

The plate was photographed, and I wrote an article in our well-known weekly. Since that date the inscription at the Museum was, of course, corrected.

I am very glad to send you my last copy of the photograph.

J. F. L. DE BALZIAN VERSTEIR, Journalist.

B. Refers to Vlaming's expedition already mentioned, and concludes with the following remarks:—"It is very probable that the latter part of the inscription was still clearly discernible in 1697, so that de Vlaming could read and copy it, but as time has made its impress on the metal, so that according to the description it is scarcely recognisable as such, and resembles paper or some other soft substance, it is most likely that the last part has to this time vanished to the effect that it does not show on the photograph. Dirck Hartog's plate is in the "Rijk's Museum" at Amsterdam, in the marine division.

C. There can be no doubt that the plate in the Rijk's Museum is the one left by Dirck Hartog on the shore of Eendracht's Land, and to the question how it was possible that so long a time elapsed before it was identified, the answer is that the description of it was: "A flattened tin platter found in the Strait of Magellan."

With reference to the Straits of Magellan as having been the locality where the plate was found, it is easy to understand how the mistake occurred, because in 1598 Admiral Olivier Van Noort passed through those straits; in 1616 Lemaire and Schouten discovered the Straits of Lemaire in the same locality, and in both expeditions there was a ship named Eendracht. Another curious coincidence is that might seem to exist about on Dirk Hartog's discovery is that the last-named expedition, Lemaire's, arrived at Jacatra, near Bantam, in Java, on the 25th of October, 1616, just one day after Dirk Hartog's departure from the coast of the Great South Land, in a vessel of the same name, on his way to Bantam. The two expeditions must have met, and yet there is no mention of their meeting in Lemaire's narrative.

But, after all, the best proof of discovery is always a chart, and I have in my possession a copy of the one that all those who have endeavoured to fathom the mystery of these matters would have liked to look at. It was not to be found in those days. The chart in question is by Esael Gerritez, of Amsterdam, and bears date 1627. It is so accurate that any navigator possessing it could hardly fail to find the exact position of Dirk Hartog's plate. This is no doubt what happened to Vlamingh, and he must also have had in his possession a copy of the inscription on Hartog's plate, and must have transcribed it on another before he found the original two days after getting up his post and memorial. This would account for his strange version, and, also, for the additional words that occur after "Bantum," which, in reality, could never have been all written, otherwise they would appear on the photograph. Then, again, Vlamingh's narrative may be wrong, as far as the dates are concerned; for, on the plate, or I should say on the copy of the plate, the date is shown as being the 4th of February. I have entered into all these details because this is an important historical matter in which it is not only necessary to consult original documents, but also to carefully compare their evidence in order to get at the truth.

IN THE GARDEN.

PALMS FOR SCENIC EFFECT.

No members of the vegetable kingdom add greater variety or produce a more strikingly tropical effect than palms. Their stately habit and ornamental foliage place them in the front rank as decorative plants. For a long time palms were regarded as too delicate for general planting, but since more attention has been devoted to them, and their requirements have been better understood, a greater number of species have been planted in New South Wales. Most of those indigenous to the warm and temperate parts of the earth thrive in the open in the more favoured districts, and several of the hardier kinds can be successfully grown in the cooler parts. Palms may be conveniently divided into two groups—(1) those having graceful pinnate fronds, like the native bangalow palm, Ptychosperma cunninghami, and (2) those with handsome fan-shaped leaves like the indigenous cabbage tree palm, Livistonia australis. Amongst the more hardy and easily cultivated of the former group may be included such species of Phoenix as P. canariensis, P. dactylifera, P. reclinata, P. rupicola, and P. sylvestris. The second is a palm of great commercial importance, in addition to its highly ornamental appearance, for it produces the date fruit of commerce, and can be successfully grown over a great part of the interior, where plenty of water can be applied during the hotter months. Caryota urens, sometimes called the maidenhair fern palm, on account of its leaves resembling gigantic maidenhair fern fronds, and Cocos australis, and C. plumosa, require a warm position. Diplothemium maritimum, the wine palm, grows near the sea and for some distance inland. Its large leaves are deep green above and silvery green beneath, and give quite a distinctive character to a well-grown plant. Jubaea spectabilis, the "coquito" palm of Chile, is a remarkable member of this family, and a well-grown specimen never fails to attract great attention. The Lord Howe Island species of Kentia are so well and favourably known to need no description here. Some handsome fan-leaved palms are: Chamaerops excelsa, C. humilis and C. macrocarpa. They are comparatively hardy and suitable for planting in the cooler as well as the warmer districts. Latania borbonica, which has leaves more than five feet in diameter, with pendent marginal segments, produces an exceptionally fine effect in a suitable position. The native Livistonia australis should not be omitted, for under cultivation it grows into very fine proportions. Rhapis flabelliformis and R. humilis are fairly hardy, slender-growing, graceful palms, and of similar character is the native Kentia monostachya, the "walking-stick" palm. A well-grown specimen of Sabal palmetto has leaves about eight feet long, with numerous deep divisions and threadlike filaments between them. Washingtonia (Brahea) filifera is a quick-growing, very handsome species, and one of the best of the group for planting as a single specimen on a lawn.

All these palms thrive in deep, fairly rich, sandy loam, but do well in any well-drained deeply-worked, good, friable soil, in a fairly sheltered position. It is a good time of the year to plant well-rooted, young palms in the open. They should be allowed plenty of room, so that when the foliage is fully developed it will be seen to the best advantage. Beyond keeping them clean of weeds, and the soil very lightly hoed occasionally during the early stages of their growth, very little attention is necessary. In dry, hot weather it will be necessary to water them occasionally, until they become thoroughly established in their new positions.

INDICATIONS OF AN EARLY SPRING.

At present there is every indication of an early spring. For the time of the year the weather generally is, and for the past month has been, mild, which, together with the occasional showers, has had a quickening effect upon vegetation. In addition to the ubiquitous wattle bloom, the almond trees have blossomed most profusely this season, and many gardens have been and are still quite gay with the charming pink and white flowers of this true harbinger of spring. Then there are quite a number of dwarf plants already in bloom; conspicuous amongst them are the various narcissi, anemones, daisies, hyacinths, primroses, snowflakes, and violets, all of which make the garden a delightful source of pleasure even at this early part of the season. Any contemplated improvements to the garden that may have been delayed by the excessive winter rains should be completed as soon as possible, especially the formation of new plantations of trees, shrubs, and hardy herbaceous plants, making walks, laying turf for lawns and edgings, with the exception of buffalo grass, the laying or planting of which must be deferred until warmer weather to make it a success. The pruning of shrubs requiring that attention at this season, and manuring and digging the borders and shrubberies should also be vigorously proceeded with when the weather and soil conditions are favourable. All natural manures should be well decomposed before they are applied to the borders, and for working them into the soil, especially amongst shallow-rooted plants, a fork is preferable to a spade. When dividing overgrown herbaceous plants preserve only the younger and more vigorous portions for replanting, and the exhausted older growths, if not required, should be placed on the rubbish heap to decay and form vegetable mould.

NOTES.

The earliest planted pansies are now beginning to flower freely in sheltered positions, and should receive liberal treatment. If the soil surrounding the plants has become crusted on the surface, it should be lightly loosened with a small hand fork. Top the ground should be mulched to the depth of about 1 inch with well decayed manure, and the plants watered occasionally if necessary. This little attention will assist the plants to prolong their flowering period, and to develop large blooms of good substance. The vigour of the plants will be maintained by removing the seed vessels as soon as they form on the flowering stems. If any seedling pansies are still in the seed bed or seed box, and are sufficiently forward to bear removal, they should be transplanted without delay to the positions where they are to flower.

Cineraria that were put out before grown as bedding plants give great promise in many places of abundant bloom a little later in the season. Where the drainage was good the heavy and almost continuous winter rains had no serious effect upon the health and vigour of the plants, but they should now occasionally be inspected. The leaf-mining caterpillar is particularly partial to the leaves of cinerarias, and sometimes does much injury by disfiguring them. This pest cannot be destroyed by insecticides, for it works between the upper and lower surfaces of the leaves, and is thus protected against outward applications. The simplest and most efficient way to destroy this insect is to press out its life between the finger and thumb.

A really very fine row of mignonette can be grown by digging out a narrow trench a foot deep and placing in the bottom 3 inches of well-decayed manure from the cowyard, or similar rich material, made rather firm, and covering it with 3 inches of light soil, and then sowing the seed very thinly and evenly on the concave surface, leaving it only slightly covered with leaf mould or fine soil. Should the seedlings come up too thickly, thin them liberally out, especially if extra large spikes of flowers are desired.

GLASSHOUSE.

There is now a visible increase of heat from the sun, and a light shade on the roof of the glasshouse will be necessary, for an hour or two in the middle of bright days, to protect tender plants from its influence. In calm, fine weather, more air should be admitted during the hotter part of the day, but it will be advisable to close the sashes early in the afternoon. The necessary watering and the syringing of foliage plants should be done early in the day.

The first batch of tubers of achimenes, begonias, and gloxinias may now be started if it is desired to have these plants in bloom early in the season. A few caladium tubers may also be started to provide an early supply of these fine foliage plants. Use well-drained pots, and a light, rich, open compost, and do not cover the tubers too deeply with soil. Water must be withheld until new growth develops from the tubers, and then only given with discretion.

The annual repotting of all vigorous-growing ornamental and flowering plants, not in bloom, palms and ferns, requiring that attention, may now be commenced, but the sooner it is completed the better. Over-potting must be avoided, for that often results in sour soil and unhealthy plants. Two sizes more pot-room will be ample for the more robust plants, and one size larger will suffice for the less vigorous ones. Use well-drained pots and a free, open compost, which should be richer for soft-wooded plants than for hard-wooded ones.

Plants in hanging baskets should also receive attention, and if necessary fresh soil should be added to that in which they are already growing. When new hanging baskets are being prepared for ferns and other suitable plants, each one should be well lined with moss, or rough, fibrous peat, or similar material, before the compost for the roots is placed in position, otherwise the soil will be washed away. [illegible]

A general collection of cuttings of soft-wooded plants, such as the scarlet-flowering salvia and double and single flowering petunias, may now be inserted.

AN EXILED GERM.

I am an unfortunate exile, without a home and out of work, and until I can get the home I cannot get the work, for in my line of life a suitable lodging is vital. Formerly, it was easy enough, but of late I and my comrades have been hunted from place to place and destroyed by the million. Let me introduce myself: I am the Bacillus of consumption—a member of the biggest union in the world, and at one time the most powerful. It is so no longer, for people have almost made a science of our destruction, and of all the means employed, the one most in favour is also the most fatal to ourselves, namely,

LIFEBUOY SOAP.

It is because of Lifebuoy Soap that I am condemned to wander about and find no place in which to live. Since Lifebuoy Soap was invented many years ago, Disease Germs have known neither safety nor peace. If it touches one of us it bites through our armour, reaches our vitals and kills us in a few minutes. Lifebuoy Soap is CERTAIN DEATH TO GERMS.

I myself am the strongest of the Disease germs. I was once regarded as too tough to kill, but Lifebuoy Soap has changed all that. I dare not risk contact with Lifebuoy Soap or venture where Lifebuoy Soap is used, for Lifebuoy Soap has been proved to be what these meddling scientists call a perfect disinfectant, and it is used everywhere. Every place reeks with it—all our old haunts have been invaded, and—how I hate the word "Disinfected," for as fast as we were driven from one refuge to another, we were followed up by Lifebuoy Soap. The worst blow of all came last. We had been hunted from Hospitals, Public Institutions, Churches, Schools, and Theatres—chased from every lurking place (save one) in private homes, and finally, to our dismay, we were deprived even of that and driven out by

LIFEBUOY SOAP IN THE LAUNDRY.

This was really too bad. Till then people had not used disinfecting soap in the laundry, and the clothes they wore, their table cloths, their bed linen, their handkerchiefs, towels and serviettes offered us our last and best resort. You see the waste fluids of the body (especially of sickly people), their expectoration and perspiration were our vehicles, and in many cases they carried us to lodge by the million in clothes and household fabrics. Thence we were able to spread disease wholesale and often fatal, thus fulfilling our mission. But Lifebuoy Soap in the laundry is

THE DOOM OF DISEASE GERMS.

It is not as if we could easily go elsewhere, because all over Australia this germ-killing Lifebuoy Soap is being used. Cooking utensils, tables and floors are scrubbed with it, sinks are scoured and drains flushed with its solution, which leaves a germicide deposit with which we dare not risk contact; it is everywhere, and always

LIFEBUOY SOAP.

It is easily realised that as its use in the laundry becomes universal we are doomed there, because the laundry is the family clearing house. All the clothing and all the household linen pass through its cleansing waters, and when these are impregnated with Lifebuoy Soap it becomes no place for us. The worst of it is that we have no hope of people discarding Lifebuoy Royal Disinfectant Soap because Lifebuoy Soap happens to be a perfect laundry soap as well. Lifebuoy Soap does not hurt the hands or discolor the nails. The most delicate fabrics can be washed in it, yet, whilst Lifebuoy Soap hurts nothing and nobody, and does its work well, it is

SUDDEN DEATH TO THE GERM.

I really don't know where I am to go, and until I find that out I can't tell what I am to do, for I must have a place in which to work. I hate idleness—my business is to spread disease, to kill and go on killing, so I must try to find some nice dirty nation; Australasians are too clean for my fancy. I really can't see why I should be persecuted in this way. If I have done nothing else I have taught people not to be careless about the health they think so much of; if I hadn't done it so thoroughly we might not have heard of

LIFEBUOY SOAP.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

Before Mr. Justice Barton (Acting Chief Justice), Mr. Justice Isaacs, Mr. Justice Duffy, Mr. Justice Powers, and Mr. Justice Rich).

AMALGAMATED ENGINEERS v SMITH.

The hearing of the appeal by special leave by the Amalgamated Society of Engineers and others from an order of the Queensland Supreme Court, dated March 12, discharging the judgment of Mr. Justice Chubb in favour of the appellants and John Smith, on December 11, 1912, was continued.

Argument was heard at length.

The case stands part heard.

SUPREME COURT.

IN BANCO.

(Before Mr. Justice Pring, Mr. Justice Street, and Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

DISPUTED CONTRACT.

T. M. Goodall and Co. v Diamanti.

Mr. Monahan and Mr. Norris, instructed by Messrs. Saywell and Saywell, appeared for the defendant, who appealed against the verdict; and Mr. Moriarty and Mr. Hodgson, instructed by Mr. H. E. MacIntosh, for the plaintiffs, in support of the verdict. The action, which was tried before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury of four, at the last sittings for the hearing of causes, was brought by T. M. Goodall and Co. against L. V. Diamanti, to recover compensation for loss sustained by plaintiffs, owing, as they alleged, to the refusal of the defendant to accept delivery of certain machinery sold to him by them. The defence was that plaintiffs were not ready and willing to deliver the goods within a reasonable time, or the time stipulated, namely, within two months of the agreement. He also pleaded, set off by way of cross-action, by reason of the breach of contract charged against plaintiffs. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, with damages £50, and defendant now appealed.

Mr. Justice Pring: Do you want a new trial Mr. Monahan, or defendant's plea of cross-action?

Mr. Monahan said he was prepared to withdraw that, if the Court was with him on the other points.

Mr. Justice Pring (Mr. Justice Street and Mr. Justice Ferguson concurring) said the contract between the parties was for the delivery by plaintiffs to defendant of certain machinery including an article called a dovetailer. It appeared that the dovetailer was to be procured from a firm at Leipsic, Germany. The defendant in his fifth plea said that plaintiffs were not ready and willing and did not tender or offer to the defendant to deliver to him the said machinery or any part thereof within a reasonable or proper time. On that plea the onus of proof was upon the plaintiffs to show that they were ready and willing and did as a matter of fact deliver the machinery within a reasonable time; but the evidence went to show that there had been a delay of about five months from the date when the cable was sent to Leipsic ordering the dovetailer. That being so, the defendant was entitled to succeed.

Verdict for plaintiffs set aside and entered for defendant, with costs.

A REAL PROPERTY QUESTION.

Macindoe v Wehrle and another.

Mr. Knox, K.C., and Mr. Delohery, instructed by Mr. Arthur Deery, appeared for the defendants in support of a motion to set aside the verdict for plaintiff, and enter it for defendants, or for a new trial. Mr. Rolin, K.C., and Mr. J. A. Browne, instructed by Messrs. Read and Read, appeared for the plaintiff, in support of the verdict. The action, which was tried before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury of four on June 18 last, was brought by Thomas Macindoe against Constantin Wehrle and Sydney Scott, to recover possession of a piece of land, one perch in area, situated in George-street, Brickfield Hill. A formal verdict for the plaintiff was returned by the jury, by consent, without any finding of fact, and defendant now appealed on various grounds. Mr. Knox, in explaining the nature of the case, said that plaintiff was the lessor of the land to a man named Simon Mayer, under a lease which was granted in September, 1906. It was a sublease, and contained a covenant against assigning or subletting without the consent of the lessor or Anthony Hordern, the superior landlord; and it appeared that by arrangement between Mayer and defendants, the latter went into possession and paid rent. In March, 1912, Mayer, who had been away from the State, returned and executed in favour of defendant Wehrle a document purporting to be an assignment of the lease; and one of the defences was that this document had not been registered under the Real Property Act, and was, in fact, not registerable. That being so, it was not a breach of the covenant in the lease, not being an assignment in law, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to a verdict.

Mr. Justice Pring (Mr. Justice Street and Mr. Justice Ferguson concurring) said that plaintiff was the registered proprietor under the Real Property Act of the land in question and had a lease from Anthony Hordern for a term of 14 years from 1906. He leased the land to Mayer for a term of 13 years 10 months from the 30th July 1906. That lease was assented to by Anthony Hordern, the superior landlord, but there was a covenant in the lease that Mayer should not without the consent of plaintiff and Hordern assign or sublet. On the 15th March, 1912, Mayer, by an instrument not in the form prescribed in the schedule to the Real Property Act, purported to assign the residue of the term of the lease to the present defendants. Plaintiff did not consent to that and he brought an action of ejectment against defendants, relying upon the document to which he had referred as being a breach of the covenant not to sublet without the consent of the lessor and Anthony Hordern. The question was whether there might be a transfer of any interest in land which effectually passed the legal estate other than by the form of transfer provided by the Act, and registration of that form of transfer. Sections 41 and 46 bore upon the point at issue, and he was of opinion that the Queensland decision in Naumberg v. executors of Albertson 3 Q.L.J., 125, and Funicane v. Registrar of Titles, 1902, Q.L. reports, page 75, particularly the latter case, were distinctly in favour of the contention raised in favour of the defendants.

Application granted, and verdict for plaintiff set aside, and entered for defendants, with costs.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge in Equity, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

QUEENSLAND WILL CASE.

James Gregg and Edward Compton Batt, trustees under the will of the late John Major, of Townsville, whose estate is now valued at £30,000, sought on an originating summons to secure the Court's decision on certain matters connected with the will, the defendants in the case being Catherine Kitt (wife of Alfred Kitt, of Dulwich Hill, Sydney), Edward Abraham Head, Frederick Chapman, William Miller, The Queensland Trustees, Ltd., Archer Alfred Castling, and Joseph Hodes (executors and trustees under the will of William Joseph Castling, deceased), Francis Gould Smith, and Beatrice Isabel Smith (an infant).

Mr. D. Maughan and Mr. C. Manning (instructed by Mr. James P. Jones, of Messrs. Jones and Jones) appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., with Mr. J. A. Browne (instructed by Mr. R. J. M. Foord), for the defendants, Francis Gould Smith and Beatrice Isabel Smith; Mr. E. M. Mitchell (instructed by Messrs. Fisher and Macansh) for the defendants, Head and Chapman; Mr. R. K. Manning (instructed by Messrs. Weaver and Allworth) for the defendant, Catherine Kitt; and Mr. H. S. Nicholas (instructed by Mr. F. W. Walker) for the trustees of the late William Joseph Castling's estate.

The principal questions before the Court were whether the trustees of the estate of the late John Major should pay to Catherine Kitt, the life tenant under the will, a portion of the capital of the estate, in consideration of her having out of her own private money paid for certain extensive improvements erected on the trust real estate at Townsville, and in satisfaction of her share as one of the next of kin; whether the plaintiffs were at liberty to put an estimated value upon the assets of the said estate at the present time for the purpose of determining the amount so to be paid; whether the plaintiffs were justified in agreeing with the trustees of the estate of William Joseph Castling to pay them the present value of the improvements on certain land in Walker-street, Townsville, which had been sold to William Joseph Castling, a former trustee of the Major estate, in breach of trust, upon their transferring the said land to the plaintiffs, as trustees of the Major estate; and what remuneration should be paid to the plaintiffs for administering the estate.

The case stands part heard.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

RAMSAY v LOWTHER.

His Honor gave his reserved judgment in the case of Alfred Ramsay and James Walles (executors of Lilly Aitken Ramsay, deceased) v Frances Lowther and others.

This was the further consideration of a suit, the decree in which was made by Mr. Justice Rich on December 21, 1911. The decree was varied by the High Court by its order dated October 9 and 21, 1912. The suit was brought for the administration of the estate of Edward Lowther, and the removal of Mrs. Lowther and John Booth from their position of trustees of Edward Lowther's will. As a result of the hearing before Mr. Justice Rich and the High Court, the will had been construed, and it had been found that the parties had for many years been acting upon an erroneous idea of their rights under the will. Certain accounts and inquiries were therefore taken for the purpose of adjusting the rights of the parties, and the suit had now come before his Honor upon the certificate of the Master in Equity as to the result of the inquiries taken by him.

His Honor did not think a sufficient case had been made out for the removal of Mrs. Lowther and Mr. Booth as trustees, and said there was no reason why the administration of the estate by the Court should be continued. He made an order declaring that Mrs. Lowther and Mr. Booth had in their hands the sums of £567 and £398, which sums he directed to be paid into a joint account in their names at some bank within 14 days, and that the said moneys be applied in part payment of the mortgage debt on Lonsdale Terrace. The receiver was to be discharged on passing his accounts, and was directed to pay Mrs. Lowther and Mr. Booth the amount shown to be in his hands, distinguishing the rents from the triangular piece of land mentioned in the will from the other rents and profits. The rents received from this piece of land were to be applied by the defendants in part payment of the mortgage left on Lonsdale Terrace, and the balance of the rents and profits received by the defendants from the receiver might be applied in recouping their pro tanto the sum of £567 and £398 when paid by them. There was also a declaration that the specific gifts should be valued for the purpose of contribution, after deduction of the debts charged on the properties.

MASONIC HALL COMPANY.

POWERS OF LIQUIDATION.

The Grand Lodge of New South Wales Masonic Hall Company, Ltd., and another, proceeded on an originating summons against George James Sly and others, in the matter of a contract for the sale of the Masonic Hall between Fred. Fullwood, liquidator of the plaintiff company, and the United Grand Lodge of New South Wales of Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons.

Mr. Innes (instructed by Mr. Neville W. Montagu) appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Clive Teece (instructed by Mr. Reginald Sullivan) for the defendants.

An affidavit by the solicitor of the plaintiff company set out that at an extraordinary general meeting on June 2 last, it was resolved to voluntarily wind up the company, the liquidators being instructed to carry into effect an agreement in writing with the United Grand Lodge of New South Wales for the sale and purchase of the Masonic Hall, Castlereagh-street, Sydney, for the sum of £25,000 cash. It was further resolved that, in the event of the Grand Lodge being unable or unwilling from any cause to complete the purchase, the liquidator should be directed to endeavour to sell the premises to the best advantage without prejudice to his rights, as against the Grand Lodge in respect to the agreement mentioned. A further extraordinary general meeting on June 18 unanimously confirmed the resolutions. At both meetings there was the requisite quorum, 4309 shares being represented at the first, and 5352 at the second. On July 14, Fred. Fullwood, secretary and liquidator of the company, entered into a contract, in writing, with the United Grand Lodge, agreeing to sell the premises for £25,000. The contract was extended by and on behalf of the purchasers by Arthur H. Bray, the grand secretary of the Grand Lodge, which was an unincorporated body, comprising over 19,000 members. It being impossible to make all the members of the lodge defendants without enormous expense and delay, it was submitted that the defendants should be appointed to represent the lodge for the purposes of the suit. All matters were satisfactorily adjusted in connection with the sale except that the solicitor for the purchaser took the objection that the special resolutions for the voluntary winding up of the company were invalid by reason of the fact that at the meeting of June 2 not less than three-fifths of the registered shares of the plaintiff company were not represented as appeared to be required by article 112 of the Articles of Association. The solicitor for the purchaser had declined to complete the purchase without an order from the Court, declaring that the objection raised had been sufficiently answered by the plaintiffs. Article 112 was quoted in the affidavit as follows:—"Two successive extraordinary general meetings, of which the second shall be held not less than seven days nor more than three months after the first, may, by a resolution passed by at least three-fourths of the votes of the members voting at the first meeting, either personally, or by attorney, and by a majority of the votes of the members so voting at the second meeting, resolve on the dissolution of the company, and the time, mode, terms and conditions, at in and upon which the dissolution shall take place, provided that not less than three-fifths of the registered shares shall be represented, either personally or by attorney at the first meeting." The nominal capital of the company, it was stated, was divided into 20,000 shares of £1 each, of which 16,455 had been issued.

Mr. Innes submitted that, if article 112 restricted the power of the company to go into liquidation, as it was suggested it did, it was invalid. The articles could not restrict the statutory right of members to wind up a company.

Mr. Teece argued that the article in question did not restrict any statutory right, as the statute left the matter of fixing a proper quorum to be decided by the company's regulations.

His Honor held that article 112 was not ultra vires, because it required three-fifths of the shareholders to be present in order to form a proper quorum in such a case as the present. Section 247 of the Companies Act, while prescribing the majority required to pass a special resolution, left it to the company itself by its articles to determine what quorum should be required at a meeting to authorise the winding-up of the company. He held that the first meeting was not a properly constituted one, and the proper steps had never been taken to wind up the company. The liquidator, therefore, had no title to sell the property.

IN CHAMBERS.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

MOTION TO RESCIND DECLARATION.

A CASE UNDER THE GAMING ACT.

Re W. G. Bean (T. Kelly respondent.)

Mr. Edwards, instructed by Mr. E. Frank Vickery, appeared for William George Bean, of Wentworthville, draper, and moved to rescind an order made under section 21 of the Gaming Act by Mr. Justice Sly on May 8 last, declaring premises known as 48 and 50 Campbell-street, to be a common gaming house. Mr Robinson, of the Crown Law Department, appeared for Sub-Inspector Thomas Kelly, the respondent. In support of the application, which was made under section 22 of the Act, Mr. Edwards read affidavits made by the applicant in which he said that he was only a trustee of the property, and during this year he executed a conveyance to the persons beneficially entitled to the property; but the same had not been completed, and was being held in escrow by his solicitor, Mr. Vickery, until a certain necessary application to the Equity Court had been made. Until he received notice on December 19 last from Sub-Inspector Kelly that the premises were being used as a common gaming house, he had no personal knowledge that such was the case. Upon receiving the notice referred to he personally saw the tenants, who were Chinese, and warned them, but they absolutely repudiated any knowledge of any gambling being carried on. Subsequently he inspected the premises with Sub-Inspector Kelly, and acting upon his advice, he had certain fixtures and fittings removed. Since the order of May 8, he had received no rent for the premises, and he had served upon the present tenants notice to quit.

Sub-Inspector Kelly, in his affidavit in reply, said that he had on various occasions prior to December 19, informed applicant that the premises in question were being used by Chinese for gambling purposes, and, on the date named, he served him with formal notice that the premises were being used in contravention of section 4 of the Act. He received a reply from applicant promising to make inquiry, and if necessary take steps to prevent any further breach of the Act. In January he also had conversations with applicant on the subject.

Mr. Robison said he was not there to oppose the application to rescind the order, but he asked his Honor to follow the usual practice of requiring applicant to enter into the usual recognisance or bond, with a surety, undertaking that the premises would not again be used as a common gaming house. Mr. Bean had stated in his affidavit that he had no personal knowledge that gambling had been carried on. That might be so, but under the circumstances he ought to have had knowledge of it.

Mr. Edwards said the difficulty about giving a bond was that Mr. Bean was only trustee of the property, and had executed the necessary document to pass the property over to the beneficiaries. It was, however, necessary to go to the Equity Court for authority to erect new buildings in the terms of the will. If it had not been for that, applicant would not now be the owner within the meaning of the Act.

Mr. Robison said that Mr. Bean was making the application as owner, and he objected to the responsibility in the matter being thrown upon the police. The police were compelled to obtain the order, and applicant apparently wished to get rid of it without having any further responsibility under the Act.

His Honor said the declaration would be rescinded upon applicant giving security by recognisance in £100, not to allow the premises to be used in contravention of the Act.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon).

ENGINE-DRIVERS' AWARD.

The Mine Owners' Association sought the consent of the Court to make application for the variation of the Engine-Drivers' (No. 2 Group) Wages Board's award.

Mr. A. W. Nathan (Messrs. Minter, Simpson and Co.), appeared for the association.

The application was out of time, but his Honor said that he would take it under section 28 of the Act, on condition that the applicants undertook to pay the costs in either case.

APPEAL AGAINST AWARD.

R. Saunders applied for variation of the Building Trades Group No. 2 Board's award.

Mr. Hammond and Mr. Davidson (instructed by Mr. J. C. Elphinstone) appeared for the appellant; and Mr. J. A. Ferguson (instructed by Messrs. Coghlan and Co.), for the Operative Stonemasons' Society of New South Wales, to oppose the application.

The applicant sought to have omitted from the award all reference to stone machinists, machinists and stone-cutting machines, or in the alternative asked for the variation of clause 4 of the award, providing that all machinists (excepting those operating stone saws), should be paid at the rate of 1/3 per hour, and that those operating stone-sawing machines, should be paid 1/1½ per hour.

The matter stands part heard.

POLICE COURTS.

A DYING CALF.

William Ward was the defendant in a case heard at the Central Police Court yesterday, when Mr. W. T. Moss, chief inspector for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, proceeded against him for cruelly illtreating a calf on July 23.

Mr. F. Donovan appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Allworth for the defence.

Mr. Moss stated that he saw the calf in a yard off Sussex-street lying on its side and struggling. The calf was evidently dying, and had been there a great number of hours. It had been raining, and the animal was lying on a concrete floor. No food or water had been given to it while it was in the yard. Eventually the calf was taken to the abattoirs, and when witness went there he saw the carcase. There were four ribs broken, it was emaciated, and in parts dropsical. He informed the health authorities of its condition, and it was condemned.

Ward said that he was a storeman employed at the Newcastle and Hunter River wharf. He saw that the calf was in a crippled condition when landed, so he put it in a pen by itself, being afterwards taken to the yard by some wharflabourers. He rang up the firm to which it was consigned, and they promised to send a cart down and have it removed. He had no authority to kill it, and it was not a part of his duty to feed or water such animals.

To Mr. Donovan: The calf was incapable of taking food when he put it in the yard.

The Magistrate: Ordinary humanity would prompt a man to put a dying animal out of its misery.

Mr. Allworth contended that Ward was not guilty of cruelty, as there was no contractual obligation on his part to attend to the animals.

The Magistrate: How a man could be so dead to all feelings of humanity I cannot understand. I find the case proved, and fine the defendant £2, with £1 4s costs, or 14 days' imprisonment.

ALLEGED STEALING.

A woman named Jessie M'Intyre went to the livery stables of Alfred Berryman, of Arthur-street, Marrickville on February 11 last, and engaged a sulky turnout for the day, saying that she wanted to go to Long Bay to get some pigeons, but as she did not return the matter was put in the hands of the police, who found the turnout in M'Intyre's yard at Upper Bankstown. M'Intyre appeared at the Newtown Police Court yesterday on a charge of stealing the turnout, and Mr. King, S.M., committed her for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

At the Newtown Court Stanley Humphries, 15, was committed for trial by Mr. King, S.M., on a charge of stealing a horse valued at £25, the property of Daniel Bouffler. It was alleged that the animal was stolen from a paddock at St. Peters, and that the accused attempted to sell it to a grocer at Ashfield. The accused reserved his defence.

STOLE AN OVERCOAT.

William Sullivan, 26, was charged, at the Glebe Police Court, before Mr. Barnett, S.M., with stealing an overcoat, valued at £1, the property of Joseph O'Connor, at Annandale, on July 31. O'Connor stated that on the night in question he went to the Coloniade Hall, and hung his overcoat up in the hall. He saw accused there. Later on he missed his coat. Constable James Mooney gave evidence of arrest and recovery of the overcoat at accused's premises. The accused pleaded intoxication. Mr. Barnett fined him £5, or one month's hard labour.

ATTACKED SUDDENLY.

"I was attacked with influenza, and got so ill that I had to go to bed," writes Mr. A. Mayall, Bootmaker, Taukau, N.Z. "My wife went to Green and Colebrook's store to get something for me; they told her to give me Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and she brought a bottle home. I am glad to say that it cured me, and in less than a week I was as well as ever, and back at work."—Advt.

REGISTERED OFFICE. 64, 66, 68 Castlereagh-street, Sydney.

The Company is being formed for the purpose of acquiring the Goodwill, License, Stock, and Furniture of USHER'S METROPOLITAN HOTEL, situate 68 Castlereagh-street, Sydney, together with the Freehold thereof, and that of adjoining premises, 64 and 66 Castlereagh-street, having a total frontage of 64 feet 9 inches by a depth of 78 feet 4 inches.

It is intended to demolish the present building and erect upon the site a modern Hotel of 11 stories.

The Land has an area of over 5000 square feet, and affords ample space for the erection of a First-class Hotel, capable of accommodating over 100 visitors.

Plans and specifications have been prepared by Messrs. H. E. Ross and Rowe, architects, Equitable-building, George-st, Sydney. They provide for an imposing and stately building, handsome and well arranged, modern in design and equipment.

The Hotel will be entered by two Main Entrances, one for the more general benefit of guests communicating by means of a roomy Vestibule into a Central Lounge, from which the Main Lift and Staircases are accessible. The other Main Entrance will be similarly roomy, and gives approach to the spacious Bar Lounges, so that the two sections of business in the house are kept separate.

The Public Rooms throughout will be bright, airy, spacious, and conveniently placed, and the Bedroom accommodation has been specially studied so as to be of the best class. All Bedrooms will be fitted with fixed Lavatory Basins for Hot and Cold Water, and a large number of them have, in addition, Private Bathrooms de luxe, in which the choicest appointments will be installed.

In all Bedrooms telephones, communicating either with any part of the Hotel or direct to the City Exchanges, will be placed, and generally the Hotel will be furnished with all the most modern ideas, such as are found in the best Continental and American hostelries. The Hotel will be furnished in the best style and endowed with every comfort available.

A very important feature in the building, the value of which will be apparent to the visitor to Sydney, is that the construction is sectionally fireproof. This fact alone will ensure a first demand for Rooms in the Hotel.

The "Metropolitan," when situated on the corner of King and Castlereagh streets, was carried on by Mr. Arthur J. Usher for a period of Seventeen Years with marked success. That site having been acquired by the "Daily Telegraph" Newspaper Company, Limited, Mr. Usher secured the above-mentioned premises, near by, and upon application to the Court was granted permission to remove his license to the Trocadero Cafe.

This Hotel is now situated immediately opposite the Theatre Royal and in close proximity to two other leading Theatres and the traffic in King-street, and in order to cater for the trade therefrom the plans of the new structure provide for two extensive Saloon Lounges. It is intended to make these Lounges as attractive as possible, and altogether in keeping with the high quality of the proposed Hotel and the good class of trade which has been enjoyed in the past in the old "Metropolitan."

Over 100 feet of Bar Counter and 2100 square feet of floor space will be provided in this section.

The extensive City, Country, Interstate, and Oversea patronage which the Hotel has so long enjoyed is being continued in the present premises, notwithstanding that the temporary available accommodation is now very limited; indeed, the volume of trade therein is ample proof that the popularity of the "Metropolitan" continues unabated.

In the past the accommodation of the Metropolitan Hotel was entirely inadequate to the demand for residential accommodation which was made by pastoralists and other country residents and visitors.

A special feature of the Hotel is the Dining-room appointments.

The reputation earned by the old "Metropolitan" for its dinners was so great that the seating was generally over-applied for, and every attempt is to be made to bring this part of the Hotel as near perfection as possible.

Three Dining Rooms will be available, which, with their Lounges, Vestibules, Cloak Rooms, and Lavatories, will secure a maximum comfort in this section. Large Lounge Smoking Rooms and Private Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing-room are part of the scheme.

The Cellars are specially large to meet the anticipated trade and to enable the Buying Department to take every advantage. Large Luggage Storing Space, Refrigerating Chambers, Larders, and Safety Strong Room, and complete Staff appointments comprise important parts of the whole.

Ventilating and heating systems on the most modern plan are to be installed, and the Lifts of the most modern fast-running type, bringing everything up to date.

The management will be continued under the direct supervision of Mr. Arthur J. Usher, who has agreed to act in the capacity of managing director for a period of seven years, at a remuneration of £1250 per annum.

The highly profitable nature of the business in the recently vacated premises is indicated by the report of Albert Borchard, Esq., F.C.P.A., Public Accountant, which reads as follows:—

ARTHUR RICKARD, Esq.,
84B Pitt-street, Sydney.

Dear Sir,—I beg to state that the profits from Usher's Metropolitan Hotel, corner of King and Castlereagh streets, for the period of 3 years, ended 31st October, 1912, after making adequate provision for depreciation of Furniture and Fittings and including all charges for current working, appear as follows:—

The average capital employed in the business during the period reviewed amounted to £5390 15s 3d.

In the above no provision has been made for the salary of Mr. Usher, in respect of the managerial services rendered to the business by him, nor for interest on capital.

And I certify accordingly. (Signed) ALBERT BORCHARD, F.C.P.A.

The premises in which these results were achieved were diminutive and out of date and possessed but meagre facilities compared with the building proposed to be erected. They contained 25 Bedrooms as against 85 proposed.

The increased accommodation, combined with the substantial connection already established and a continuity of successful management, are factors which the Directors believe augur well for the financial success of the Company.

The Company also acquires from the Vendors all their rights and interest in the "Old Special Liqueur Whisky" as registered under the Trade Mark "O.S.L." This is a whisky of standard excellence, for which a large demand, both in Sydney and elsewhere, has been created. The certified purchases during the year ended 31st March, 1913, amounted to 2693 gallons, of which 1597 gallons were sold in wholesale quantities in from 2 to 37 gallons.

It is intended to carry on business during the period of construction in a temporary bar, and the Company will thus be earning revenue throughout, while it is not anticipated that the whole of the Capital will be called up until after completion of the Hotel.

No time will be lost in calling for tenders for the erection of the new building, and it is confidently expected that it will be completed and ready for occupation in about fifteen months.

The consideration payable to the Vendors in respect of the undermentioned Assets is as follows:—

To A. J. USHER:
For his share of Goodwill, License, Stock, and Furniture of Usher's Metropolitan Hotel of which £6000 is payable in Cash and £5000 in fully-paid shares.	£11,000
For Agency of "O.S.L." Whisky	1,000	£12,000
To ARTHUR RICKARD:
For balance of Goodwill, License, etc., of Usher's Metropolitan Hotel, payable in fully-paid shares	5,000
		£17,000

The amount required by the Company is estimated as follows:—

To refund to A. J. Usher of amount of deposit paid to A. Hordern, in respect of the Freehold	3,000
Balance of Purchase Money of Freehold to A. Hordern	27,000
To refund to A. J. Usher of amount paid for lease of Trocadero Cafe, 68 Castlereagh-street, and for lease of premises 64 and 66 Castlereagh-street, and Furniture, Plant, and Goodwill of Trocadero Cafe	2,500
Estimated cost of Building	55,000
Estimated cost of Furnishing	10,000
Amount payable to Vendors in Cash	7,000
Balance for Contingencies, Flotation Expenses, and Working Capital	10,500
	£115,000

The Directors have made arrangements for the issue of first mortgage Debentures of £50,000, having a currency of 10 years and bearing interest at the rate of 5½ per cent. p.a., leaving the balance of £65,000 to be subscribed by Shareholders.

The terms on which this money has been secured must be regarded as being exceptionally favourable. The Company will have the right to reduce this mortgage during its currency under liberal conditions.

There can be no doubt that the Company, under the able direction of Mr. Usher, will prove as attractive an investment as other Hotel Companies in Sydney, which are making very large profits, and the shares of which command substantial premiums.

The number of shares to be fixed by the Articles of Association as to the qualification of a Director is 500.

The minimum subscription upon which the Directors may proceed to allotment is 40,000 Shares.

The cost of flotation will be borne by the Company, and the usual brokerage will be paid to the Company's Brokers on the shares allotted through them.

Application will be made to the Sydney Stock Exchange in due course for an official quotation.

Application for Shares should be made on the form accompanying this Prospectus and sent to the Company's Brokers or Bankers, together with remittance for amount payable on application.

If by reason of over-subscription no allotment is made, the Deposit will be returned in full, and where the number of Shares allotted is less than the number applied for, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards the amount due on allotment.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained from the Brokers or Bankers, or at the Offices of the Company.

(b) 25th July, 1913. Agreement: Arthur James Usher with Arthur Rickard.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

"Still on the quiet side," as far as the volume of business is concerned is the position this week of the real estate market. Yet there have been one or two sales of fairly good property reported. Messrs. Richardson and Wrench sold a city freehold this week for £9000. Messrs. Raine and Horne disposed of a property in the Eastern Suburbs for about the same amount, and Messrs. Piercy Ethell and Co. also disposed of a three-story warehouse, off William Henry-street, Ultimo, on leasehold land, for the sum of £6500. Messrs. Stanton and Son disposed of the residence and grounds of Dr. Mills, at Strathfield, for £5600, and one or two other good-sized properties have also changed hands, but as the contracts are not complete the details cannot be given.

The indoor sales this week were few in number. In fact, the only sale of note was that held by Messrs. Richardson and Wrench yesterday. Mr. Gregg had rather a small list to get through, but he met with success. He disposed of two dwellings in Stanley-street, city, for £610. For a residence in Upper Pitt-street, Kirribilli, £2500 was bid, and as this is near the reserve and several are making inquiries, it is almost safe to say that the property will be disposed of privately. For three houses at Redfern £900 was bid, and a similar price was offered for two houses in Phillip-street, Enmore. Five shops and some land at Balmain did not bring forth any competition, and similar results befel a cottage property at Greenwich.

The same firm has this week disposed of a leasehold property in Ocean-street, Woollahra, for £810, also ten acres of land in the parish of Manly Cove, and close to Deewhy, for £205. An allotment in the Chesterfield Estate, Epping, they sold at 35s foot; a block in the Waitara Estate, Waitara, sold at 26s foot. Land in the Miranda township brought 15s foot. A block in Arthur-street, Woodford was sold at 30s foot, and 2 lots on the Signal Hill Estate, Epping, at 14s foot.

Messrs. Stanton and Son this week sold a cottage residence in Alt-street, Haberfield for £1065; a cottage, known as Denmore, at Ashfield, for £680; a cottage at Rosebery Model Suburb, for £860; and a block of 50ft to Prospect-road, Summer Hill, at £2 5s per foot. This week Messrs. B. B. Tuohy and Co. sold four pairs of semi-detached cottages in Sutherland-street, Neutral Bay, for £2725.

Among the sales effected this week by Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. is a cottage residence in Johnston-street, Chatswood, at £1215; a cottage residence in Roseville, £1550; a block of land, Pymble, £750; and a block at Chatswood, for £200. Also a gentleman's residence at Greenwich for £2300.

Messrs. Clarke and Solomon this week sold quite a number of properties, including several residences at North Sydney at prices from £700 to £1400.

Saturday subdivision sales will soon make their appearance again. The season will open on the first Saturday in next month, and, judging from the bookings, it looks as if there was a busy time ahead amongst the auctioneers. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will open the ball on the first Saturday in September, and the firm will conduct a sale each Saturday in that month.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench have a sale this afternoon, at Beecroft—a very fine subdivision, right opposite the railway station. Beecroft has an elevation of 445ft above the sea level, and anywhere on this line the doctors have always recommended the district as one suitable for delicate people requiring a dry mountain air. The estate to be submitted this afternoon is the Wandeen Estate. It includes Wandeen Cottage and grounds. There are 14 very fine lots on the plan, and the cottage, a large modernly equipped home of 10 or 12 rooms, will be sold with about 1½ acres of land around it. As this property is right at the railway station, and is surrounded by first-class homes, it ought to command a ready sale.

Messrs. John Bridge and Co., Ltd., Circular Quay, Sydney, report having just sold direct for Mr. J. W. C. Langhorne, his well-known Oreel station, alongside the Collarenebri railway line, consisting of about 31,000 acres secured lands and 5000 acres of leases, together with the noted station flock of 11,000 sheep, 190 cattle, and 50 horses, on a walk in, walk out cash basis. The purchaser is Mr. C. B. Crowley, for whom the same firm sold Telleraga station, Moree, some little time back. This makes 70,000 acres of Oreel that John Bridge and Co., Ltd., have sold, the other 40,000 acres being purchased by the late Mr. W. F. Buchanan. Oreel is among the best fattening, wool-growing, and breeding properties, in the State.

PROGRESS OF THE SUBURBS.

SYDNEY TO HURSTVILLE.

Sydney to Hurstville forms the suburban section of a railway which links up the great South Coast district with the metropolis, and brings within measurable distance of the city the great mining, agricultural, and fishing industries of some of the richest and most picturesque country in New South Wales, commonly called the "Garden of the South."

Prior to the advent of the railway the country between Sydney and Hurstville was little known to the average citizen. It was the home of the drover, and the grazing ground for cattle which had come from the South Coast. There were a few market gardens stretched across the rich fertile lands lying on the side of the main Wollongong-road in a district known as West Botany. A cottage here and there on the roadside, the bold Forester's Hotel, where the drovers put up and watered their cattle in the ponds at the rear, the sound of the timber-getter's axe ringing out in the dense bush which formed the background of this great country, were all the indications of life and prosperity that the Illawarra suburbs could boast of 40 years ago. A trip to Sydney meant quite a journey in those days when the railway was unknown, and each settler had his own vehicle or used shanks' pony as far as the Cook's River dam, where, from Jacobs' Hotel, a coach made periodical trips into the city. There were many early grantees of land in the Illawarra district, and among them was Townson, who held 1920 acres, embracing nearly the whole of Hurstville and Kogarah. In the 'Sixties and 'Seventies much of this land was used for grazing and timber getting. The cattle came by road from the great farming districts of the South Coast. They crossed the Woniora River at the old road near Heathcote, which was surveyed by Sir Thomas Mitchell, and is still in a fair state of preservation, considering that nothing has been done to it for so many years. A feature about this crossing is that it marked exactly the tidal influence of the river. On the lower side was salt water, and above it the fresh. The crossing was a natural ledge of rock, and at the bottom of an immense gorge. There was indeed an air of grandeur about the surroundings. When the cattle and the teamsters came to George's River they were forded across at a spot near where the second punt now runs.

Municipal life in the Illawarra suburbs was practically unknown until 1871, when the present Rockdale municipality, then called West Botany, was incorporated. The same year St. Peters municipality was brought into existence. They were both extensive boroughs, covering immense areas of land, from which little revenue was received in the way of rates, which in those days were based on the annual value principle. It was 16 years later before any other Illawarra municipality made its appearance. In the meantime St. Peters and West Botany struggled along bravely. St. Peters had the advantage. It was an old and somewhat aristocratic district, and among its oldest residents were such men as Messrs. Metcalfe and Talbot, the woolbroker. Dr. Tucker's mental asylum was a well-known building on the Cook's River-road. The Reilly and Chalder families were also prominent in the district. Dr. Tucker was elected first Mayor of St. Peters.

West Botany, with its wide areas and scattered houses and gardens, had its headquarters at Arncliffe. St. Peters municipality is still in existence, but West Botany has disappeared. We have now in its place the flourishing municipality of Rockdale, with other equally well-to-do municipalities surrounding it.

Late in the 'Sixties an Illawarra railway was first talked of, but years rolled by before the movement took definite shape. Ministries came and went, lines of route were proposed and rejected before a final decision was come to in the matter. The line south of Hurstville, which spans rivers and skirts great mountains, and travels by the ocean beach, was one of the most costly lines ever constructed in New South Wales, and not only did it prove costly in construction, but owing to the steep grades the working expenses have eaten up much of the profits. But in respect to the suburban sections, Sydney to Hurstville—the first section opened—this can hardly be said. Indeed, Wednesday, October 15, 1884, was a day of great rejoicing. The suburban section of the line was officially opened on that date with a double line from Sydney to Hurstville, a distance of eight miles. Practically a generation had passed away since there had been any metropolitan rejoicings over railway extensions near Sydney. When the first sod was turned in the Cleveland Paddocks in the 'Fifties Sydney was but a small place, and even when the opening to Parramatta was celebrated a year or two later it was not much larger, for the tide of immigration had turned to Melbourne, whither the golden magnet was drawing all who were moveable and from the 'Fifties after the opening to Parramatta, right on to 1884, railway extensions in the colony were marked by rural celebrations, and the citizens had to go into the country to take any share in them. Thus it was that after a lapse of more than a quarter of a century the metropolitan people were again called upon to rejoice over the construction of another outlet from the closely-packed city. It cannot be forgotten, however, that the Illawarra line was not designed as a suburban line, its primary object was to benefit the people in the South Coast, but as the route lay to the southwards the line in quitting the city incidentally opened up a new suburban district, and yet if it were not for Illawarra there would have been no line from Sydney to Hurstville and George's River, perhaps for years to come. The agitation began in the country, and the metropolitan influence was only looked on to give it greater impetus, and as the "Sydney Morning Herald" pointed out in its leader on the morning of the opening of the line to Hurstville, "It ought not to be forgotten that it is to Illawarra interests and energy that this line is due."

Thus the railway was set going, and there is no doubt the opening of the line to Hurstville was the making of that district. Up to this period land values were small, settlement was slow, and generally there was an air of pioneering on all sides. But the railway changed all this. The line had not been open a week before subdivision sales took place in all directions. It happened to be in the land boom period, and the people almost ran riot over the purchase of land in the new and attractive Illawarra district, which gave promise of such a magnificent future. As an instance of the rush for land, it might be mentioned that on the Saturday following the opening ceremony Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves held a sale right at the Hurstville station of what was known as West's Paddock. There was a very large attendance, and buyers were conveyed to the ground by special trains. The allotments average from £4 to £10 per foot, but one block brought £25 per foot. When Mr. Batt totalled his sale-book he found that he had sold £18,000 worth, and seeing that he had already sold an estate in the same district that morning for £65,000, he was naturally pleased with himself. The same Saturday afternoon several other auctioneers held sales along the new line. Mess Richardson and Wrench were at Rockdale station offering the Lydham Hill estate. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman had a sale the same day of the Hurstville Heights estate, on the Forest-road, and this sale included the disposal of the villa on the estate formerly occupied by Mr. Milsop. Messrs. Watkin and Watkin were selling right at the Kogarah station in what is to-day the business centre of a fairly large township. At each subdivision sale the attendance was large, prices were high, and the demand for land in those new and delightful suburbs was great, and each succeeding Saturday revealed the determination of the public to enter into what afterwards proved to be rash speculation. But then the 'Eighties was a period of prosperity for the Illawarra suburbs. Municipal life asserted itself soon after the opening of the line. The old West Botany Municipality changed to that of Rockdale. In 1886, two years after the opening of the railway, the Kogarah Municipality was incorporated, and a year later the borough of Hurstville was brought into existence. Hurstville then included Bexley as one of its wards, but in 1900 the Bexley people separated, and formed a municipality of their own. The district was then divided into five distinct municipalities—St. Peters, Rockdale, Kogarah, Hurstville, and Bexley—and the whole covered an area of 32½ square miles. Hurstville Council first met in a room in Treacey's grocer's shop, Mr. Milsop being the Mayor. But finally the council secured the old council-chambers, which the aldermen are to-day vacating for larger and more modern premises.

The Kogarah Council first met in a room on the railway station, under the Mayorship of Mr. E. Hogben. The whole district continued to prosper, and land values rose, but when the banks closed, and droughts made their appearance, and New South Wales passed through a period of depression, the Illawarra suburbs got such a set-back that it has only been within the last few years that they have recovered. Land values in the early 'Nineties fell; estates were wound up, and land changed hands at a very low figure compared with the ruling prices at the opening of the railway line in 1884. Progress became very slow, and to add to the troubles of the people living on that line the Railway Commissioners refused to give Hurstville more than an hourly service of trains, while, at the same time, from Sydney to Parramatta had the lines duplicated, and a fast and slow service introduced. Under this scheme of Mr. Eddy's the Western Suburbs naturally made great progress, while the Illawarra suburbs were kept back. But there has been a wonderful change within the last five years on the Illawarra line. The district once more has assumed the progressive attitude, and to-day population is spreading in all directions. Land values have risen in some cases to what they were in the boom period, and in business centres to considerably above the 1884 figures; so that, despite the long period of depression, the Illawarra suburbs have grown from very small dimensions in the 'Eighties in five large and important municipalities; grown from a few settlers in 1884 to a population of 55,500 people. Of this population 18,000 are located at Rockdale, a municipality with an annual municipal income of £16,000, and within its acreage of nine square miles there is property to-day which is valued at £1,875,691. The highest price of land is in the business centre, and it is valued at £40 per foot. During the last four years there has been added to Rockdale an average of 300 houses per year. Adjoining Rockdale is Kogarah, with a population of 11,000, and a yearly municipal income of £16,000. This municipality covers an area of nine square miles, and the property within its bounds is valued at £1,066,290. Like its neighbour, Rockdale, Kogarah has been adding to its buildings over 300 premises every year. Last year the number was 287. Next we have Hurstville, with its population of nearly 11,000, and a yearly income of £7248. This borough also covers nine square miles, and within the last four years the property of Hurstville has nearly doubled itself, an average of over 300 houses having been built each year. In the business centre land has risen of late to as high as £20 per foot. There are now about 2000 houses in Hurstville. Bexley, the off-shoot of Hurstville since its incorporation in 1900, has made very steady progress, and to-day Bexley carries a population of 7000. The annual income to the council is £7000, and the value of property within the four square miles comprising the municipal area is £770,000. Bexley is on a slope, and it is approached from any of the stations between Arncliffe and Hurstville, and also by a tram running from the Arncliffe station. Then we have the old-established St. Peters, with its population to-day of 8600, and its municipal income for the year of £2369. St. Peters has only an acreage of 1½ square miles, but within that area there is property of the total value of £656,886. Thus the Illawarra suburbs to-day, irrespective of Erskineville, which is really part of Newtown, carry a total population of 55,515, enjoys a municipal revenue of £49,617, has an acreage of 32½ square miles, and land within that area of the value of £1,861,812; while the buildings and land combined are worth £5,185,78s. That is the development of the Illawarra suburbs in 40 years, for in the wild bush of Hurstville and Kogarah 45 years ago, land was selling at £3 per acre. To-day the same price is paid per foot for most of the property. The railway did much to bring this about, but of the railway more is expected. The people have now a half-hourly service of trains. For years the service was an hourly one. The district suffered. The half-hourly service has done much to help the district along. In consequence it is growing by leaps and bounds, but the present railway service is, after all, inadequate to serve the people. Nothing less will satisfy the wants of the district in the matter of railway communication than the duplication of the line to Hurstville, and a fast and slow service of trains instituted. It was such a service that made the line from Sydney to Parramatta, and it is that alone which will make the Illawarra suburbs the residential area that they ought to be.

(Before Judge Docker and a jury.)

Mr. H. Harris Crown Prosecutor.

PRISONERS SENTENCED.

Frederick Davis was found guilty of having stolen a portmanteau, clothing, and other articles, the property of Charles Dodd, from the steamer Rakaia on August 4. The accused was sentenced to three months' hard labour.

Muriel Flockhart was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment with light labour, in the State Reformatory, Long Bay, for having stolen a camera from the house of Herbert H. Axten, at Mosman, on March 25 last. Two similar sentences were passed on her for stealing a muff chain, the property of Amelia Ward, at Mosman, on February 20 last, and a brooch, the property of Kathleen Grace Olsen, at Mosman, on April 9. The three sentences were concurrent.

Mary Brown, for stealing a quantity of clothing and jewellery, the property of Edward Baker, from his home in Erskineville, on June 12, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment with light labour in the State Reformatory, Long Bay.

Herbert Lewis Jonas, 17, who had previously pleaded guilty to having obtained a quantity of clothing, the property of F. G. Curta, from Archibald James Browne, by false pretences, at Woollahra, on July 14 last, was sentenced to six months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol. On two other charges of having forged orders for some carpenters' tools, similar sentences were passed. All were concurrent.

James McLean, on charges of receiving stolen goods and stealing in a dwelling, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude on each charge. The sentences were made concurrent.

His Honor said that the accused was an habitual criminal, but he was not quite sure that he could legally declare him so.

James Wilson pleaded guilty to having stolen 178 test lenses, 231 eyeglass lenses, nine prism lenses, five spectacle frames, and other articles, the property of Ernest Biggs.

He was sentenced to three years' penal servitude, and remarked as he left the dock, "I thank your Honor for being so merciful to me."

Walter Carey, 35, who admitted having stolen a handbag, a quantity of jewellery, a purse, and 8s 3d in money, from the dwelling of Arthur Mairs, Sydney, was sentenced to two years' hard labour in Bathurst Gaol.

Wm. R. S. Neville, 34, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing in the dwelling-house of R. O. Cook, at North Sydney, an overcoat, an umbrella, a cap, and a scarf, on July 14 last, and was sentenced to two years' hard labour in Bathurst Gaol.

Francis Joseph Johnson, 18, and Alfred Waters, 18, both pleaded guilty to having stolen a quantity of goods from a railway van at Strathfield, the property of the Chief Railway Commissioner, on June 25.

Both had previous convictions against them. Johnson was sentenced to six months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol, and Waters to 18 months' hard labour in Bathurst Gaol.

Harry Johnson, 21, who pleaded guilty to having stolen a quantity of jewellery and money from the person of George Harold Crouch, 21, who was convicted of receiving the goods, was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol, Crouch also receiving the same sentence for his offence.

Henry Sutton pleaded guilty to having embezzled the sum of £92 13s 4d, the property of his employer, Otto Carl Suess, at Marrickville, on June 9, and was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol.

A SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Arthur Gibson, 17, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in Goulburn Gaol, for having a quantity of household utensils, the property of Archer S. Clive, in the house of Gilles Morton, on July 9. Sentence was suspended on the accused entering into recognisances to be of good behaviour for 12 months.

A CONVICTION AND AN ACQUITTAL.

George Bailey and Lawrence Cummings pleaded not guilty to charges of having broken into and entered the house of Louis Schaeffer, at Newtown, on June 24, and stolen a suit of clothes, jewellery, knives, forks, spoons, and other articles; and to having received the articles.

Mr. J. W. Abigail appeared for Cummings.

Bailey made a statement from the dock, and explained that he asked Cummings to pawn the suit of clothes found on him. The clothes were given to accused, he said, by a man up the street to dispose of.

Cummings corroborated Bailey's statement. Cummings was found not guilty on both counts. Bailey was found guilty of breaking and entering, and was remanded for sentence.

EMBEZZLER SENTENCED.

Mr. E. R. Abigail, who appeared for the defence, said that the accused had been married only 11 months. Bad companionship and gambling had been the cause of the trouble.

A FIRST OFFENDER.

George Stevens, 27, pleaded guilty to a charge of having stolen 26 bags of wheat, and was sentenced to six months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol, the sentence to be suspended under the First Offenders Act, on entering into recognisances to be of good behaviour for 12 months.

Mr. F. Stewart appeared for Stevens.

HORSE STEALING CHARGE FAILS.

On a charge of having stolen a horse at Marrickville on May 19, the property of Charles Robinson, William James Knight, 18, was found not guilty.

Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared for the accused.

PROTECTION OF NATIVES.

At the last meeting of the Association for the Protection of the Native Races of Australia and Polynesians, presided over by Mr. Bruce Smith, M.P., correspondence was received from the Swiss League for Native Protection, asking for co-operation in a scheme to establish in Switzerland an international bureau for information received from all the world's associations having similar aims. Arrangements were made to hold the annual general meeting of the association on August 25. The resignation of the hon. general secretary (Mr. G. F. Earp, M.L.C.), was received, and accepted with regret. Letters from the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific were read, acknowledging the receipt of important information sent to him in regard to the New Hebrides. The information referred to alleged the existence of a considerable amount of actual slavery in these islands. A letter was read from Mr. David Lindsay, setting forth his scheme to segregate the aborigines of the Northern Territory on Melville Island. This question is to be dealt with at an early date.

TRADES AND LABOUR.

HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS.

After many conferences, an agreement for three years, dating from July 1, 1913, governing wages and conditions of about 130 employees, has been arrived at between the Hospital and Asylum Employees' Union and the managing committee of the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital. The hours of labour are fixed at 48 per week, and overtime to be paid for at the rate of time and a half. Alternate public holidays are to be allowed on full pay, or equal time off allowed in lieu thereof. Annual leave is fixed at 12 days. Uniforms are to be provided free of cost. Preference is given to unionists. The following are exempt from the provisions of the agreement:—Members of the British Medical Association, of the Australian Medical Association, University students (medical), members of the nursing staff, masseurs, and masseuses, the secretary of the hospital, his deputy, or assistant.

COLD STORAGE SETTLEMENT.

Evidence having been given before the Cold Storage Wages Board (Mr. A. W. d'Apice chairman) in respect to the amount of overtime worked, particularly on Saturday afternoons, by members of the Cold Storage Employees' Union in and about the refrigerating establishments, a scheme of settlement was conditionally agreed upon last week. Under this the men worked on Saturday last. The terms of settlement were agreed to by the Fresh Food and Ice Company, Ltd., and the remainder of the employers were given up till Thursday to fall into line. Inspector Kirby, representing the Minister (who made the reference to the board), presided over a conference at the M.U. Hall, Castlereagh-street, on Thursday afternoon, which finally settled matters. The agreement, which is to hold good until November 15, 1914, sets out that there is to be no work done after 1 p.m. on August 9, on Saturday afternoons except as required for dealing with rabbits, butter, and produce, produce intended for export, produce intended for storage, or by reason of a breakdown in machinery. The union has not to make any further request or demand during the currency of the agreement, and has to supply competent labour as required. At Sandown a sufficient number of men has to remain at work on Saturday afternoons to meet requirements.

ABERDEEN WORKS.

A new agreement, between the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union and the Australian Chilling and Freezing Company, Ltd., has been drawn up governing the wages and conditions of employees at the Aberdeen works. Mr. R. C. M'Adam, manager, represented the company, and Messrs. O. Waters, H. MacNamara, and T. W. Furse, the union. The agreement increases the pay for sheep killed and dressed by 2s 6d per hundred (from 27s 6d to 30s) as from August 15. Other conditions are in accordance with the award of the butchering (wholesale) industry.

FEDERATED PAINTERS.

The executive committee of the Federated House and Ship Painters, Paperhangers, and Decorators' Employees' Association of Australasia, which met at the Trades Hall this week and expelled the New South Wales union, also passed a resolution protesting against the no-preference policy of the Cook Ministry. The conference was attended by the following: Mr. W. J. Wallace (Queensland), president; Mr. T. Hart (Victoria), vice-president; Mr. T. B. Merry (South Australia), treasurer; Mr. T. J. Foat (Queensland), trustee; and the general secretary, Mr. F. J. Meyers, of Melbourne.

ORGANISING SCHEME.

A resolution passed by the Labour Council, on the motion of Mr. W. L. Duncan (United Clerks' Union), states that "the prevailing degree of disorganisation from the trades union standpoint, in the great majority of industries and callings, makes the appointment of an organiser, by council, a matter of urgent necessity." The executive is to devise ways and means for the financing of such organiser.

A ballot for the election of an organising committee for the Labour Council has resulted in the return of the following:—Mr. H. Boyd (boilermakers), Mrs. Kennedy (cardboard box and paper), Messrs. T. M'Queen (storemen), J. F. O'Reilly (hairdressers), A. Primrose (bookbinders), and A. Schreiley (furniture trades).

THE RAILWAYS.

PRAISE FOR MR. JOHNSON.

TAMWORTH, Friday.

After Mr. Johnson, Chief Railway Commissioner, had listened to several local matters brought under his notice by a deputation at Duri, one of the farmers referred to Mr. Johnson's term of office drawing to a close, and suggested that he stick to his guns for another term, and not allow certain critics to hunt him. It was already reported that the commercial travellers were with him, and a good percentage of the countrymen were also for him.

This brought the reply: Do I look like a hunted man." However, Mr. Johnson said it was very nice to hear a thing of that kind. He believed he did not have an enemy. He hoped they would have a prosperous season.

QUIRINDI, Friday.

The Chief Commissioner passed through today. A deputation, headed by the Mayor, Alderman Thomas, made several requests. The Commissioner said he was hampered for want of money, but would consider them. Mr. Johnston was most courteous. A hope was expressed that he would be appointed to another term. Confidence was expressed in the management of the railways. In thanking the deputation the Chief Commissioner said he believed the pipe of peace would yet be produced.

TIPPING A PUBLIC ORATOR.

Dr. Fry, the Dean of Lincoln, who has been given a "tip" of sixpence by some tourists whom he took round the Cathedral, could find plenty of amusing precedents. The eccentric Duke of Portland, who figured in the Druce case, is said frequently to have been mistaken for a gardener by visitors to Welbeck, and given half-crowns, which he invariably retained with a chuckle. Perhaps the most piquant precedent was that of the Rev. William Crowe, a former Public Orator of Oxford University, who was wont to walk from his Wiltshire vicarage to Oxford clad in greasy leather breeches, and carrying his coat in a bundle at the end of a stick. He was once mistaken for a tramp, and given a shilling, but, having a large family and small stipend, he pocketed the affront. Crowe had a neat wit, and replied to a friend who asked how he was going to bring up his numerous offspring on such scanty resources: "God feedeth the young ravens, and He will also, I trust, provide for the young Crowes."

THE RELIGIOUS OUTLOOK.

Canon Alexander completed recently at St. Paul's Cathedral a course of sermons on Christianity and modern thought, his subject being the creative power of faith and the influence of environment on religious belief. He is reported to have said that theology, while retaining her hold on all that was essential in the great Christian ideas from one age to another, modified the form of her message in the progress of religious thought, and shifted her emphasis from one aspect of truth to another, in order to meet and satisfy the needs of various times. Art, literature, religion were all influenced by contemporary circumstances. To-day the thing most to be guarded against was the hardening touch of habit and custom, the curse of familiarity. The chief task of the spiritual life was to hold fast or to recover that "first rapture" which truth and goodness awakened in an unspoiled heart; and the primary need of religion, in times when its teachings had become so familiar as to lose much of their supreme loveliness, was to relearn the alphabet of Christianity. Men needed to have their senses purified that they might realise, in a frivolous and superficial society, the adorable beauty of goodness and the degradation of sin, and might be recalled to the simple commonplaces on which all religion must rest—the Fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of Man, and the imperativeness of duty and worship. The unclouded eye of faith could still discern divine Presences on this earth; but for others no mighty works could be done because of their unbelief.

A PECULIARITY ABOUT THE RECENT EPIDEMIC.

A noticeable feature about the recent epidemic, in fact every epidemic, is the large proportion of excessively fat folks affected. This is scarce to be wondered at, for when the secretions of the thyroid and other gland are inadequate the oxidation process is slower than normal and the individual is one standard weight. This over-fatness then is in itself a sign of ill-health, predisposing the body to catching any complaint that may for the time be going about, and accounts for the large number of over fat women who rarely enjoy good health. Every fat woman should guard herself against epidemics and ill-health of any sort by reducing her weight at the earliest possible moment. This can easily be accomplished by taking a short course of "Formettes," the time tried and tested remedy for obesity. Formettes are herbal little tablets that will reduce little or much without exercising or dieting, and which will achieve results quite as remarkable as they will be pleasing. Formettes are sold by all Chemists and Drapers at 5/3 per carton. Agents: Anthony Hordern and Sons; Washington Soul, Pattinson and Co., Chemists; Wholesale, Elliott Bros.; or direct from S. H. Henshall, Chemist, 240 Clarendon-street, South Melbourne.—Advt.

WHAT WEATHER FOR AN OUTING!
We have the Spring setting in fast, and after the mild Winter and the bountiful rains what sort of a spring ought it to be! Now is a good time to have a good look at the
which is without doubt one of the very best around this fair city.
The beautiful outlook over the water, the delightful, clear air, and the wide Boulevard-made streets, put it in a class by itself. If you travel around all the suburbs within four or five miles of the city you will find nothing to compare with it. There is a class of cottage going up all over the Estate which tends to guarantee the neighbourhood, and the whole district is practically modern.
If you want a really select home site, you cannot afford to overlook the
DOBROYD POINT ESTATE.
Take the tram to the Haberfield Terminus, and go due north towards the water.

THE LESSON OF THE SCARE.

Many people will think that it requires an optimist to discover very much benefit in connection with the present, or, should we say, recent, smallpox scare.

It has, however, taught one lesson which should be of the greatest benefit to the community. It has taught the benefit of making one's home in healthy, sunlit suburbs. It has impressed us with the urgency of getting away from the close-in, thickly-populated districts, where germs flourish and microbes multiply. It has brought before us the necessity of invoking nature's safeguards against disease, and consequently fortifying our own and our children's systems against the ravages of pestilence.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

A perusal of the daily papers shows at a glance that the densely-populated confines of districts such as Alexandria, Surry Hills, and Redfern—where houses are jammed together, and back yards made depositories for garbage and rubbish of all sorts—have borne the brunt of the outbreak, whilst the outer suburbs have gone absolutely free, or have contributed but one or two cases to the roll of hundreds. Those cases were just contacts in every instance, and do not reflect in any way on the healthfulness of the localities.

MAKE AN EFFORT NOW.

To transplant your wife and family away from the unhealthy areas to the clean, pure air of the suburbs. Take them to a home of their own, and make the first step by purchasing the site on Our Easy Terms. It is ever so much better and cheaper in the long run.

THE FIGHT.

For some time past the public mind has been occupied with the possibilities of to-night's great fight between Mehegan and Wells. This, we are told, will mark an epoch in Australian ring history, and as such deserves the attention it has attracted.

There is, however, another fight, which is of far more importance to the average man, and one which should claim his attention—not on exceptional occasions such as this—but which should occupy his mind every day and all days. It is the fight for an existence.

The odds are against the average man nowadays. High rents—high cost of living, and ever-increasing expenses, each constitutes a "punch" that is calculated to make him "take the count," and the only successful "counter" is to OWN YOUR OWN HOME.

This gives the "knock-out" to High Rent, "sidesteps" the increased cost of living, and puts increasing expenses in a condition that entitles you to an easy "win on points." Train awhile on our EASY TERMS, and you will soon get the "condition" necessary to enable you to "stay the distance," and emerging an "easy winner" to handle the "thick end of the purse."

First of all, get your own homesite. Just a pound down and ten shillings monthly will enable you to take your pick of any of these fine homesite properties, and once you get fairly into your stride there will be no looking back.

CARLTON.
It is no distance to Sydney from Carlton. Just about a quarter of an hour by frequent train service. Then from Carlton Station to our Homesites is seven minutes, so the complete journey from your business home can comfortably be accomplished in the half-hour. Carlton Homesites Estate slopes gently away from the Railway. From a great part of it splendid and unbroken views of Botany Bay can be obtained. The roads are ballasted. All around is thickly built upon, and before long the same conditions will exist on this property. Lots from 11s per foot.

MANLY.
Gordon Heights Estate is situated on both sides of the proposed tram route, to connect the Manly-Spit and Brookvale lines. It occupies an elevated position, and commands glorious views of Curl Curl Lagoon, Ocean Beach, Manly, Queenscliffe, and the picturesque Brookvale District, and is just a nice walk from either of the tram lines. The soil in most instances is very suitable for gardening purposes. Allotments average 50 feet by about 120 feet. Prices from 7s foot.

RYDE.
Reservoir Estate is the pick of the District, being only ten minutes from the tram terminus, and being situated on Ryde Heights, adjoining the Reservoir, it has really splendid views over a large tract of country, which includes charming glimpses of the Parramatta. The property has frontages to the Blaxland and North roads, and is subdivided by well-made ballasted roads.
LOTS 50 x 140, FROM 13s FOOT.

AUBURN.
Heart of Auburn Estate occupies the very best residential part of the suburb, and is an investment that will show the very best returns possible. It is under ten minutes from the station, in a select locality, and conducting for the greater part of the level building blocks. City water and gas are available. Splendid views can be obtained right out over the flat plains of the Granville and Clyde District.
The lots average 40 x 120 to 130 feet, and front well-made roads. 13s a foot.

TOOHEY AND TOOHEY,
REAL ESTATE AND FINANCIAL AGENTS, TOOHEY'S CORNER, 124 AVENUE-ROAD, MOSMAN, ARE TALKING AGAIN,

AND ARE ADDRESSING THEIR OBSERVATIONS TO OWNERS OF PROPERTY.

TOOHEY AND TOOHEY, are anxious to secure more houses, cottages, and LAND FOR SALE and TO LET, in ALL SUBURBS NORTH of the Harbour, and suburbs on the North Shore Line come within this category. It is costing us "SOME" to make these appeals to owners, but TOOHEY AND TOOHEY are RESOLUTELY DETERMINED that OWNERS shall hearken to our cries.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY'S appeal may appear as a voice in the wilderness, but it is an appeal from a WELL-EQUIPPED, ENERGETIC, CAPABLE, and STABLE FIRM, TO OWNERS, to consider their OWN INTERESTS. TOOHEY AND TOOHEY are considering YOUR INTERESTS TOO, but TOOHEY AND TOOHEY NEVER become sufficiently enthusiastic about your interests to entirely lose sight of OUR OWN interests. We are NOT philanthropists—WE ARE OUT FOR KEEPS, and FAME and FORTUNE, and we can help owners, and also purchasers.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY DO NOT expect the public to transact their business with us because we have curly hair—or under any like pretence. TOOHEY AND TOOHEY invite you to deal WITH US actuated by considerations of value, and Agents—like other people, usually charge for their work, and in this connection TOOHEY AND TOOHEY are much like the average Agent, but TOOHEY AND TOOHEY are in a unique POSITION to AFFORD "SPECIAL VALUE" to clients, as we have previously indicated in these columns.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY cannot too STRONGLY EMPHASISE the fact that we SPECIALISE IN RENT COLLECTING. TOOHEY AND TOOHEY wish owners to pay adequate regard to their own interests. TOOHEY AND TOOHEY SAY—DO NOT CONSIDER sentiment, when judging of the manner in which men deal with your Financial Affairs.

STABILITY, PROMPTITUDE. EXPERIENCE, AND CAPACITY ARE OUR CHIEF CHARACTERISTICS.

and these FOUR important qualifications must count "SOME" with men who are obliged to have THEIR MONEY HANDLED BY OTHER MEN.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY ask you to pay GREATER REGARD to the world-wide and honoured commandment: "MAN, MIND THYSELF." BE CERTAIN to secure the BEST VALUE obtainable when paying SOVEREIGNS for the service. REMEMBER you are not playing "the game" with Marbles, as you did many years ago. Bear in mind that the "OTHER FELLOW"—YOUR AGENT, is playing "the game" WITH YOUR SOVEREIGNS, and that he does NOT ALWAYS play the game fairly. When he does NOT pay you over "YOUR OWN MONEY" PROMPTLY, he is NOT playing "the game"—he is fudging.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY cordially invite you to realise the marvellous comfort and consolation you would experience, if, when consuming your plate of tasty Ham and Eggs for Breakfast, on the FIRST DAY of EACH MONTH, BESIDE your plate, you had your AGENT'S CHEQUE covering the PAST MONTH'S RENT COLLECTIONS. WOULD IT NOT BE GLORIOUS? What a thrill of comfort, contentment, and security, would run through your whole composition. AND TO DEAL WITH US, IS TO EXPERIENCE THAT LOVELY FEELING—NOT FOR ONE MONTH, BUT FOR EVERY MONTH. Afford us the chance to "make good," and realisation will be yours.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY guarantee this, and TOOHEY AND TOOHEY'S word is their bond. These are the principles which lead us to Fame and Fortune in the Southern Capital, and TOOHEY AND TOOHEY never discontinue a system, which has proved to be "the real McKay."
To be successful in our business, means that WE MUST SECURE the IMPLICIT confidence of our clients, and TOOHEY AND TOOHEY know no BETTER METHOD than the strict observance of PROMPTITUDE, REGULARITY, and A SQUARE DEAL.
If the reader knows something better, please advise TOOHEY AND TOOHEY, as we are always prepared to learn.
TOOHEY AND TOOHEY are so accustomed for many long, pleasant, and prosperous years in our Melbourne business, to enjoy the IMPLICIT CONFIDENCE of our Clients, that business WITHOUT that confidence, is something TOOHEY AND TOOHEY do NOT CATER FOR, and WILL NOT COUNTENANCE. TOOHEY AND TOOHEY FINANCE PURCHASERS. We will NOT see a man lose a BARGAIN for the sake of a few POUNDS. WE WILL HELP him on the EASIEST of EASY TERMS. Our Bankers—The Royal Bank of Australia, Ltd., Wynyard-street, Sydney—will gladly vouch for our stability and our methods. They know us very well, and they will "back" us. We do NOT "monkey" with other people's money. If we wish to "monkey" with money, we "monkey" with OUR OWN—NOT YOURS.

MACHINERY.

WE'RE AT IT AGAIN.

PUTTING IN A GOOD WORD FOR SPEED AND EFFICIENCY.

We can't avoid it. Nor can you. This question of high speed in machinery is too important to let slide. It must be studied if you would hold your own in the business race.

If we could only get you face to face we would be able to demonstrate very quickly how the speed factor counts. We could show you how it gets more work out of every man and every day. We could prove its greater productive capacity and show that the extra profits it makes possible more than compensate for the outlay.

We would, in short, show you the HOW, the WHY, and the BECAUSE of high-speed machine tools. A little talk on this subject will do you good. Get into touch with our expert, and learn how our easy terms make purchase a "No-worry" proceeding.

DRUMMOND'S LATHES ARE EFFICIENT AND FAST.

They bear out all we say about high speed. They're the kind of lathes that will bring more grist to your mill. Just read the brief description of a few styles:—

The 8½in Lathe—Centre back geared, self-acting, sliding, boring, and screw-cutting, suitable for precise work and inventor's model work.

The 4in Lathe—A new design for model makers who require a tool capable of very varied and accurate work. Highest grade workmanship throughout.

The 5in Lathe—Designed for motor and motor car repairing. Specially adapted for reboring twin cylinders.

The 7½in and 8in Lathe—High speed tools, fully designed up to the capacity of modern steels. It does the heaviest work with wonderful accuracy.

Another tool-making firm that you ought to know is the U. S. Electrical Tool Co. They make first-rate drills and grinders. You can carry these tools about and draw power from any electric light connection. In strength of construction, ease of use, and adaptability to work you'd not find their equal after a long search.

Besides these we carry a fine range of different machine tools—practically any type of tool you need. Tell us your needs and we'll go into details.

High-speed Machine Tools You Can Depend on All the Time.

Lathes,
Drilling Machines,
Punching Machines,
Shearing Machines,
Milling Machines,
Hack Saw Machines,
Shaping Machines,
Blowers,
Power Hammers,
Morse Twist Drills,
And a full selection of all Small Tools.

THE PULLEY THAT PLEASES.

BY THE PULLEY PEOPLE.

When you look into a mill and see the old-fashioned iron or steel pulley in use you can safely say—"Antiquated."

When you see the Reeves Split Wood Pulley you can say, "This fellow knows."

What is there to know? Reeves can be shafted or unshafted at a moment's notice. To do this other pulleys are not disturbed. They can be adjusted to any size shaft quite readily.

Reeves Pulleys please because they last better, work better, take less power to run them, and cost less. Buy at the Agents' and save money.

FARM AND STATION.

CONCERNING THE CROW.

Although the crow has an evil reputation, and is regarded as the very incarnation of cruelty and cunning, it is one of the most jovial and even-tempered birds in the bush. If it is a bird of ill-omen, like the Raven of Poe's soaring imagination, it certainly seems to be very happy and care-free in the role. Of course, some people might suggest that that is merely evidence of the inherent wickedness of the crow, since it seems to be ever cheerful while the victims of its depredations mourn. The truth, of course, is that the crow simply obeys its natural instincts, and has no more consciousness of doing wrong, or of giving cause for unpopularity, than has the inoffensive native bear. In the matter of intelligence, the crow is placed by ornithologists at the head of the feathered species. The right to this position is justified by many well-known tricks and devices in defence and attack, and in successfully prosecuting the struggle for existence. There is one species of very human cleverness, however, which distinguishes the black marauder, and for which it has not, as far as the writer knows, ever received full credit. This is its habit of following in the wake of other predatory birds and taking advantage of the stir created to raid nests at leisure and without any risk of reprisal.

A crow does not, for instance, care to directly and openly attack the nest of a butcherbird. The butcherbird is a fearless and pugnacious creature and extremely skilled in attack. Its capacity to inflict injury on even such a large bird as the crow is out of all proportion to its size. From long experience the crow tribe has realised this fact, and also evolved a scheme for exploiting it. When an eagle approaches the nest of a butcherbird containing young ones, both birds will go forth to give the formidable invader battle. Commonly enough, they will meet and encounter the eagle a considerable distance from the nest. The crows have evidently noted this, and take advantage of the temporary absence of the butcherbirds to raid the nest and carry off the young. These raids on unprotected nests are not merely accident; they are designed. It is quite a common thing in the bush to see a crow or two quietly trailing an eagle as that bird sails majestically high over the tree tops in search of prey below. In these cases the crow keeps well in the background, and only appears for active business when the eagle has created a diversion, and the attacking butcherbirds have revealed the locality of their nest by going forth to give battle to the king of the air. Not a few people have been perplexed by the fact that such a gallant and pugnacious bird as the butcherbird should so frequently suffer the loss of eggs or young out in the wilds where human raiders do not penetrate. The truth is that the birds are the victims of their own readiness to go out and fight—and the resourcefulness of the crow.

Like the fox, the black marauder of the air has his friends and his enemies. By many the bird is regarded as an unmitigated pest and curse; by others he is looked upon as a useful member of feathered society. Such an authority as Mr. O. R. Falkiner, of Boonoke, for instance, as already stated in the "Herald," is of opinion that the bird should be protected. As showing how sharp may be the conflict of opinion regarding this bird, Mr. R. Prowse, of the Gundagai district (who has had ample opportunity for studying the crow), refuses to accept the theory of Mr. Falkiner. Mr. Prowse contends that "Crows go in for fresh food and leave stuff in which the blowfly has made its deposits." In making a sweeping statement of this kind, Mr. Prowse practically proclaims the fact that he is not as intimately, or as soundly, acquainted with the natural history and the habits of the crow as is Mr. Falkiner. It is quite true that crows eat fresh meat—they will even strip it from the living body, or snap it in the form of an eye or a tongue from a sheep or a lamb that is down and unable to defend itself. But it does not follow because of this that they prey on nothing but fresh food. The truth is that no matter can be too much decomposed for the taste of these birds. Another Murrumbidgee pastoralist (Mr. White, of Merribindinyah) believes that, while we cannot have too many birds of any other species, the crow should not be tolerated. He holds that the bird is a worse curse than the fly pest. "You can deal with the blowfly," he says, "but the crow!" Mr. Manning, of Merringreen, West Wyalong, looks upon the crow as an unmitigated nuisance:—"Any good that the bird may do as an insect-eater is ten times more than counterbalanced by the destruction he causes to the eggs and the young of the ibis and other really useful birds. During the year the Condobolin P.P. Board paid for the heads of 5000 crows. It is well known that a sheep pecked by a crow rarely recovers. So much so that we always kill any sheep that has been cast and injured in any way by a crow. If we do not do this the sheep will die later on, and we lose the skin. Recently the stock inspector at Forbes had a culture made from the blood of sheep that had been attacked by crows, and it was found to be infected with anthrax. In consequence of this the Forbes board decided to pay a bonus on crows."

There is no doubt that the crow is a very difficult bird to deal with as an enemy. Its high order of intelligence gives it an advantage not possessed by any other bird in this respect. There is also no question that, again like the fox, the crow works havoc among the eggs and the young of all manner of useful birds. In the writer's opinion—based on many years of observation—the most valuable of all the insect-eaters from the standpoint of the farmer and grazier is the ibis. A bird which closely rivals the ibis in this respect is the wood-swallow, which swarms into Riverina in countless thousands for the spring and the summer, when insect pests may assume tremendous proportions. Both of these birds are regular victims, in the breeding season, of the crow. Vast numbers of the eggs and the young ones of the different species of wood-swallow are taken by crows in the course of a season, and there is also ample evidence that the birds prey largely upon the ibis too. Ten thousand crows in one pastoral district would (at a conservative estimate even) probably account for the destruction of half a million eggs and young of useful birds in that district in the course of the year. As the crow also does great harm among lambs, it may be reasonably affirmed that, despite the service he may render as an insect-eater and an enemy of the blow-fly (assuming that he does as much in that direction as is claimed), the bird is not worthy of his "keep" in a country where sheep constitute one of the greatest of the primary industries.

THE WOOL TRADE.

AWAITING THE AUCTIONS.

A quiet period prevails in wool circles so far as actual sales are concerned. Wool, however, is coming forward in fair volume from the early shearing districts, the west, Riverina, and the north-west; giving signs of the activity that will be in evidence three weeks hence. Since the last auctions a fair proportion of the passed-in lots have been placed, in most cases at an advance on the auction bids; and there is some inquiry for local fellmongered parcels at the rates ruling at the last auctions. Generally, however, there is a disposition to await the opening of the regular selling season, and not force the pace at the present time. There is not the same anxiety or speculation as to the character of the clip likely to be shorn during the current season as last year; and as it is evident there will be some leeway made up the buying side of the trade can view the approach of the current weekly selling season with greater confidence, so far as supplies, as well as quality, are concerned, than was possible 12 months ago. The financial stringency also tends to confine operations for the time being. When, however, the season opens, and wool becomes available in quantity early, doubtless even those now disincline to move will feel the pressure of circumstances, and take advantage of the situation. The clouds in the Balkans are not likely to pall over Europe indefinitely, the passing of the United States Wool Tariff Bill cannot be obstructed much longer, and the financial stringency that has accompanied these depressing factors will probably become less acute.

Fortunately the clip promises to be a good one, and although some of the western wools at the last sales were not attractive, and of doubtful yield, the wools generally this season will be sound and well grown, but carrying more burr and seed. If the sheep now passing through the fat stock market, and furnishing supplies to the fellmongers for skin-wools, may be taken as a fair criterion, the wools this season will come up to some of the previous very satisfactory, if not high, standards. A larger proportion of merinos has been in evidence of late, and although crossbreds in the autumn and early winter months loomed up almost on a level with merinos, that feature has not been maintained of late. Doubtless there is a tendency for crossbred to be continually on the increase, through breeding lambs, and even sheep, for export. Concurrently with that, however, is the tendency for the big merino sheep and wool growers to push further out, where there are still considerable areas of land capable of maintaining large flocks. The trans-continental railway lines—the one now under construction east-west and the proposal north-south—will be the means of making suitable lands accessible, as well as the development that must naturally be looked for in Western Australia.

It is as well to point out these possibilities at a time when the crossbred is so considerably on the increase. In the Textile number of the London "Times" of June 27 last, one of the articles referring to merino sheep and wool says:—"Twenty years ago it looked as if merino sheep were destined to oust all other breeds of sheep from the greatest pastures of the earth, but the opinions of that day were wrong, and the honours are to be shared by an English breed. There are many English breeds, but there is one more than all others that has played, and is playing, a part in the world history of wool at the present time. This is the Leicester division of the long-woolled English sheep. In speaking of its development, Dr. Bowman says it originated with a Mr. Bakewell, who obtained it by judicious crossing of various sheep, which he had selected, with the best specimens of the old Leicester. Among the various strains we may be pretty sure that some of the celebrated Lincoln breed would find a place. For the Lincoln sheep stands first of all long woolled varieties, not only on account of the length and style of its wool, but also on account of the weight of the fleeces. Whatever part Lincoln played in the Bakewell breed, we know that Leicester and Lincoln sheep have since been so much intermixed that it would be impossible to say how far the flocks of Lincoln, Norfolk, Cambridge, and Yorkshire are derived from one or the other breed. It is, as a matter of fact immaterial to the present question. The interest lies in the fact that sheep of the new Leicester breed were sent out to Australia and New Zealand. In both countries the introduction of the new strain of blood met with immediate success, but it was in New Zealand that the effect was to be most phenomenal."

There can be no doubt of the effect as stated, for most of the crossbreds and comebacks are of the Lincoln Leicester cross. The article referred to proceeds by saying, "The interbreeding of Leicester and merino sheep produced animals that gave heavy fleeces of long, silky wool. They gave also excellent mutton, and as the carcases were 50 per cent. heavier than the pure merino sheep, they were obviously a good investment from the first. As long as the carcase could only be used for colonial consumption, the value of the mutton had no great bearing on the economic situation; and in 1876, out of a total of 780,000 bales of wool sent home from Australia, only 102,000 were crossbred. But when once cold storage made the export of frozen mutton possible, the weight of a sheep had as much to do with its value as had the value of its fleece, and from that date the "crossbred" descendants of Leicester sheep have increased to such an extent that of 800,000 bales sold in London in 1910, 396,000 were catalogued as crossbreds. It is a curious fact that a discovery such as that of cold transport should so greatly affect the quantity and quality of wool offered for sale in this country, but it is no less an economic fact that bears on both production and consumption, and indirectly affects the very nature of the clothes we wear."

A noticeable and commendable feature in connection with the change in sheep-breeding and wool-growing, especially since the advent of the farmer or small grazier, as compared with the large pastoralist, is the maintenance of a good standard. There is a proportion of medium to undersized merinos bred, and some poor crossbreds, but only to a small extent, and it was gratifying that in the 50,000 odd sheep and lambs penned in the Homebush market on Thursday last only an exceedingly small percentage were undersized or poorly bred. An odd pen of the Vermont strain, with its wrinkly pelt, was to be seen, and occasionally some small merinos from the tablelands are in evidence, but generally the sheep repeat a high standard of breeding, yielding a merino wool of good quality. In another part of the textile review referred to this is recognised by the following statement:—"Taking average values per lb of wool in London over a series of years as a standard, Australian wools have realised the highest prices during recent seasons in comparison with wools from other countries. This is a reflection of the scientific methods in the colony which has not only achieved the distinction of producing the best wool, but has attained the position of the leading wool producing country of the world."

A LONDON OUTLOOK.

Summarising the position in London at the beginning of last month Henry Dawson and Co. said that high bank rate and the wearisome and interminable political difficulties of the Balkan question have had a deterrent effect on trade in all commercial circles. It has been surprising that the raw material has so long and so strongly withstood these adverse influences without any serious shrinkage in values, especially when it is taken into account that in some centres, notably in Yorkshire, there have been considerable stocks to carry without any strong buying movement since the last series. Fortunately, all the principal European centres, with the exception of Saxony, report a maintenance of consumption, and mills still continue to be well employed. Most of these are, of course, engaged on old orders, and there is now some anxiety to see new business forthcoming. Manufacturers generally have found it difficult to enforce their advanced quotations, but it is felt that the verdict of the London market will do much to release orders which have been kept back pending the establishment of a firm basis.

The statistical position is unchanged, and every week will now make the strength of that position more apparent and more potent. It can only be counterbalanced or weakened by a falling off in consumption, and of course these high prices have a tendency to restrain and to check new business, but so far as can be gathered the diminution of consumption, except in America, is not serious enough to be noteworthy. The supplies for the year are now well known. In merinos there is nothing to weaken the position at this series, and should any volume of new business be forthcoming, the available stocks in combing wools would be very inadequate. Fortunately the Queensland new clip is being marketed, and last week some 40,000 bales were sold in Brisbane, and will help to relieve the situation in September.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

There is very little private inquiry in Melbourne, and the only business reported is the sale by private treaty of a few bales of crutchings to the local mills. According to previous reports it appeared unlikely that any auctions would be held in the southern capital till sometime next month; now it is announced that small sales will take place on Wednesday next, 13th inst. The regular weekly selling season has been fixed to open on Tuesday, October 7. As shearing has now commenced in Riverina it is expected that sufficient wool will be in store in Melbourne within three or four weeks' time to enable the trade there to form some idea of this season's clip from that part of this State.

Wool is steadily arriving in store for the Brisbane sales on August 26, 27, and 28, when large and attractive catalogues in both greasy and scoured will be submitted; central and northern clips being well represented. These auctions will precede the opening of the weekly series in Sydney. In the meantime there is very little business passing in the northern centre.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

There has been a very fair increase in the receipts of wool by both rail and boat during the week, compared to the corresponding period last year; and auguring well, if the weather continues favourable for shearing, for substantial offerings at the weekly series commencing on September 1 next. BRADFORD TOPS.

According to our cable of yesterday's date the Bradford top market was quiet, and prices were unchanged.

On the corresponding date last year a holiday tone prevailed in the Bradford market, the turnover was within very moderate dimensions, and prices for all qualities were very firm. The course of prices compares as follows:—

Messrs. Wenz and Co., Rheims, reviewing the position on June 30th last, said with regard to tops that quietness had again been the main feature of the previous fortnight, consumers strictly confining their purchases to the most urgent requirements. No marked changes in prices had been registered, and yet concessions had to be granted to conclude business. Noils continued difficult of sale, prices being stationary. Supplies in the combing mills were lighter than usual at that time of the year. The Mazamet market was dull, owners in general being disposed to wait for new business. Stocks in long fleece washed merino wools were insignificant. Crossbreds continued neglected. The demand for clean washed wool was less active. In view of the exaggerated pretensions of owners, the buyers of short wools stopped their purchases; the few offers on hand were a shade below the prices paid a fortnight previously.

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Shipments of wool have been on a fair scale during the week, seven vessels clearing the Sydney Customs for the United Kingdom and foreign ports with a total of 5594 bales as compared with eight vessels during the corresponding week last year aggregating 8984 bales. The vessels with quantities for the week and the total to date compared to the corresponding period last year are as follow:—

GOVERNMENT POULTRY EXPERT

MR. HADLINGTON'S APPOINTMENT.

The appointment of Mr. James Hadlington, of Seven Hills, to the position of Government Poultry Expert, to supervise poultry farms generally, is a very popular one, writes our Blacktown correspondent. Mr. Hadlington is a practical man, who years ago commenced poultry farming at Plumpton, and subsequently removed to Seven Hills, where he successfully established the Grantham Poultry Farm. His business in stud birds and eggs embraces the Commonwealth, New Zealand, Fiji, and South Sea Islands. His birds are winners every year at the Royal and other show rings. He has also established a large dressed table poultry trade.

CLIPPING THE TEST.

"South Coast" writes:—Sir,—You deserve the thanks of the butter producers of the State for your efforts in support of the proposed legislation to stop test clipping by factory managers. A uniform charge of 1½d per lb is made by factories in my locality to cover the cost of manufacture and marketing of butter, which works out somewhat as follows, with butter at 1s per lb:—Freight and cartage 1s 6d, commission 2s, box paper, salt, etc., 1s 10d, total 5s 4d; 56lb butter at 1½d 5s 10d, leaving 6d per box to pay wages, coal, machinery, renewals, bank interest, etc. With 40 suppliers (a fair average for a small factory), and 35 cans of cream a day, the output would be about 30 boxes of butter, affording an income of 15s a day, or £5 5s per week to pay the wages of two or three men, and all the above charges, and yet, at every annual meeting of such factories, the suppliers are told that they are getting paid for all the butter in their cream. "Supplier," in your issue of last Thursday, hits the nail on the head when he asks Mr. Kenny to furnish the amount of butter paid for to suppliers, as well as the amount sold during the past year's operations of his factory. If all the factory managers in the State were compelled to furnish the two sets of figures above referred to, for, say, the past five years (you can't get this information from any of their balance-sheets I have so far seen), you would find the result to be the best reply to all and sundry who are now so strongly opposing the proposed new legislation.

"Looking Forward" writes:—I have been a factory manager for the past five months (my first billet as a manager), and it is a great puzzle to me how so many of our butter factories can show a half-yearly profit of £200 to £400, when they are paying nearly top Sydney price to suppliers, and getting second-grade for more than half of their butter in Sydney. In the case of my factory at the end of each day's churning, after allowing 17½ per cent. to the suppliers, I frequently find that the total lbs. of butter fat due to suppliers exceeds what I churn, especially at this time of year. My moisture in butter averages between 13 per cent. and 15.5 per cent. The greater part of our butter is sold locally at top Sydney price, the factory deducting 1½d per lb. manufacturing charges when paying to suppliers, and in addition we get ¼d per lb. for prints. After writing off ½d per lb. on the total amount of our churnings to sinking fund, it leaves us nearly 1½d per lb. to pay for cost of manufacture, etc. Our running expenses compare, pro ratio, favourably with most of the factories in the district, and yet it requires skilful handling to even pay 5 per cent. on capital and 5 per cent. for depreciation. Seeing that I have only been a manager for a short time, perhaps I have not sufficiently grasped the "high finance" which it is quite necessary to have to secure the large aforesaid profits; still, no doubt this knowledge will come in time.

I read your article re margarine, and think that it is a blessing that the butter market has such a rival, as we can only fight it by improving the quality of our butter, as I prefer a pound of margarine to a pound of second-grade butter any day. If I may give my humble opinion, the domineering reason why Sydney is at present glutted with secondary butter, and always will be, is due to the lack of co-operative feeling between the managers. At present it is a bid for suppliers for factory output, not factory quality. Several suppliers have left my factory because I graded them second, and are now getting a first-grade price for it elsewhere. Does this conduce to future improvement in the quality? It's all very well to talk at the conference in Sydney, but that is no good, unless straight going is practised at the factory. The dairy inspector shakes the farmer up, and I think an inspector of managers is wanted to shake them up also, as I think it relieves the mind, at least it would mine, to publish compulsory returns and grade certificates. I am looking forward to seeing the grade notes of some of our big model butter factories. I have been through Ireland, Denmark, New Zealand, and it is only in New South Wales that one notices the lack of co-operation and unity between managers, and that, in my opinion, is why Australian butter has the lowest market value of any of the above four countries.

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY.

AUTUMN AND WINTER LAMBING.

RESULTS IN ADVANCE OF LAST YEAR.

The following particulars, as furnished by the Government Statistician, show the estimated results of the autumn and winter lambings, based on returns furnished by the acting chief inspector of stock. Owing to the unfavourable season during 1912, and the consequent decreases in all classes of stock, the number of ewes in the State at the end of 1912 exhibits a considerable falling-off as compared with returns of previous years. At the end of 1911 the ewes numbered 20,722,000, but for the reason just stated the number at the close of 1912 was 1,685,000 less. Despite this fact, the ewes put to the rams for the autumn and winter lambings were 541,000 in excess of the number mated in the previous year, due probably to the desire of owners to avail themselves of the high prices ruling for sheep and wool, and also to replenish their flocks, depleted by serious losses through drought. The present season has been far from favourable in many parts of the State, and owing to protracted dry weather and absence of suitable pasturage in some of the districts, the lambing results are not as satisfactory as could be desired. They are, however, much in advance of those of the previous year, and although the number of births is but three per cent. above those for 1912, the estimated losses represent only 10 per cent. as compared with 35 per cent. last year. The lambs born were 8,678,000, equal to 75 per cent. of the ewes, whilst the probable markings will reach 7,481,000, or 65 per cent. the droppings and markings being 757,000, and 3,385,000 respectively above similar estimates of the previous year.

In making up the returns the usual custom of grouping the various pastures protection districts in the principal statistical divisions of the State has been adhered to, and the following details are based on the reports received from the various inspectors of stock:—

* Includes ewes mated for summer lambs.

The above estimates compare favourably with those of the five preceding years.

At the close of 1912 there were approximately 19,037,000 ewes in the State, and of these 11,523,000; or 60 per cent., were mated with the rams for the autumn and winter lambings: 8,400,000 ewes were timed to lamb in the autumn, and 6,511,000 lambs were dropped, representing 77½ per cent., the markings being 5,723,000, or 68 per cent. The winter lambing was not so satisfactory, and 3,123,000 ewes gave birth to 2,167,000 lambs (69 per cent.), and the probable markings will not exceed 1,758,000, or 56 per cent. The conditions under which the lambing took place varied considerably throughout the State, and, when the returns are considered as a whole, it can be said that only average results have been obtained.

RURAL WORKERS.

TROUBLE NEXT SEASON PROPHESIED.

WANT CONFERENCE WITH EMPLOYERS.

The general secretary of the Dairy Farmers' Association of New South Wales, Mr. G. R. C. Davis, has received the following letter from Mr. E. Grayndler, general secretary Australian Workers' Union, which forecasts industrial trouble in the rural industries the coming season, unless an agreement is arrived at.

The executive council of the Australian Workers' Union have empowered me to invite your association to meet representatives of the Australian Workers' Union in a conference, to discuss, and, if possible, to settle the rates and conditions for the members of our union engaged in the rural industries. The members of the Rural Workers' Union have now been absorbed in the Australian Workers' Union, and the schedule of rates and conditions, as authorised by the members of and drawn up by the Rural Workers' Union, have been adopted by the annual conference of the Australian Workers' Union. In the event of your association agreeing to meet the Australian Workers' Union in conference, we would put forward the rates and conditions, as adopted at our conference, with the hope that the coming season may not be interrupted by industrial troubles, which will certainly be the case unless some satisfactory settlement is arrived at for our members in the rural industries.

Our desire is to meet in conference representatives of the various rural producers' associations from each State, and endeavour to arrive at a settlement of the rates and conditions for all the States, as is done by the Australian Workers' Union for the members of the union in the pastoral industry. I think that either Melbourne or Sydney would be convenient as a place of meeting for the proposed conference, but in that the Australian Workers' Union would be glad to study the convenience of the employers.

It is desirable that, if a conference is agreed to, it should be at an early date, and I would suggest for consideration that it be held not later than some suitable date during the first or second week in September. In order that we may know the wishes of your association, I shall be glad if your association will give early consideration and reply to the following:—

(1) Whether your association is willing to meet representatives of the Australian Workers' Union in conference?

(2) If a conference is agreed to, which of the places mentioned above is the most acceptable as the place of meeting, and whether a date in either the first or second week in September is convenient?

Mr. Davis has replied, stating he will bring the above letter under the notice of his executive officers at the earliest opportunity, and communicate further when the matter has had consideration.

THE PILLIGA SCRUB.

Yesterday a deputation of sawmillers from Pillaga Scrub was introduced to the Minister for Lands and Agriculture (Mr. Trefle) by Mr. Ashford, M.L.A., on behalf of Mr. Black, M.L.A. The deputation asked for amendments to the Forestry Regulations, particularly those making it incumbent upon cypress-pine getters to cut the timber 8in from the ground and to stack the tops.

Mr. Trefle agreed to remove the conditions requiring the stacking of tops, and to relax the "stump-height" conditions to read "that the stumps should be so high only as necessary to secure the value of commercial timber."

RATIONALIST ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Rationalist Association of New South Wales was held at the Queen's Hall last night. The association had before it a letter from the Free Speech League, asking for assistance at a meeting at the Town Hall on Wednesday, to protest against the hanging of the condemned man Wright. It was decided to sympathise with the objects of the meeting, and the secretary was deputed to represent the association.

The annual report of the first year of the association's existence showed that the membership was 82. The report made reference to the arrangement of a debate between representatives of the association and Christian churches. During the visit of Mr. Joseph M'Cabe, r. La Touche was approached to see if he would meet Mr. M'Cabe in debate. Dr. La Touche readily agreed, and it was decided to hold a two nights debate on the subjects—"That Jesus is Divine" and "That Theism is Unreasonable." However, the Dean of Sydney prevented the debate, to the disappointment of the principals. Finances showed a small debit of 9s 6d for the year.

The president then read a paper on "Peace and War."

Officers elected were:—President, Mr. D. G. Stead; vice-presidents, Messrs. P. M'Naught and G. T. Bill; treasurer, Mr. C. W. Salier; secretary, Mr. C. B. Smith; committee, Messrs. D. J. Gilligan, G. Waite, E. J. Hallman, H. C. Bell, W. J. Miles, and C. A. Lee.

SMALLPOX.

SIX MORE CASES IN SYDNEY.

SUSPICIOUS CASE ON THE MONGOLIA.

Six cases of smallpox were reported yesterday.

The patients came from Bondi Junction, Newtown, Surry Hills, Stanmore, Paddington, and the P. and O. steamer Mongolia.

All were removed to North Head quarantine station.

The vaccinations totalled 1965, including 400 from Parramatta, and other districts, 575 scholars of the denominational schools, 104 members of the staff of the Lands Department, and 77 from Manly. Over a thousand persons were vaccinated at Sydney Town Hall.

At North Head quarantine station there are 254 persons, 53 patients, and 201 convalescents. There were no releases yesterday.

Since the outbreak began 483 persons have been quarantined.

Early yesterday morning the quarantine authorities informed the Health Department that a suspected case of smallpox had been reported on board the P. and O. Company's steamer Mongolia, which was lying at the company's wharf, Circular Quay. An officer of the department was despatched to view the suspect, a young Englishman employed aboard the steamer as a baggage steward. After consultation the case was diagnosed as one of smallpox, and the man was immediately removed to North Head quarantine station. Work was suspended on the steamer, while the authorities thoroughly fumigated the quarters the man had occupied and all effects. The stevedores employed on the vessel were vaccinated immediately, and at 1 o'clock in the afternoon work aboard the vessel was resumed.

"As soon as the smallpox outbreak occurred in Sydney, several weeks ago," said Mr. Gordon Wesche to a Herald reporter, "I telegraphed the company's Fremantle agent, instructing him to have all members of our crews vaccinated. This instruction has been carried out since, and this particular steward was vaccinated on July 21, that is 22 days ago, while the Mongolia was travelling between Fremantle and Adelaide. The vessel will leave to-morrow (Saturday) at noon, and will be worked in quarantine at the various Australian ports of call. Passengers who have booked through to London will not be allowed to land at Australian ports, and interstate passengers will travel at the risk of being quarantined. As soon as the case was diagnosed as one of smallpox the quarters and effects of the man were fumigated thoroughly, and there is little risk of further cases occurring."

Dr. Reid, chief quarantine officer of New South Wales, said:—"The Mongolia will leave at the advertised time, but will proceed to London via Melbourne under quarantine rules. We have allowed the ship to leave because the whole of the crew were vaccinated before arriving in Sydney. In all probability the vessel will have to discharge in stream on arrival at Melbourne. Every precaution possible has been taken to prevent the disease spreading, and there is little likelihood of such an occurrence, as all the contacts were protected by vaccination."

One of the medical officers who examined the steward and diagnosed his case as one of smallpox, said:—"The case is a mild one, and different in some respects from any we have seen in Sydney during the present outbreak. He had a rash on his face, body, arms, and hands. He had been vaccinated recently—I am told 22 days ago, but I am of opinion that he was not successfully vaccinated."

Last evening the company received the following intimation from the quarantine authorities in Melbourne:—"If the case is declared smallpox it will be necessary for all passengers landing at Melbourne, Adelaide, and Perth to have been vaccinated 14 days prior to landing. Provided this is the case, they can land under surveillance."

Dr. Paton, president of the Board of Health, said: "So far as this department is concerned, the case is an extremely suspicious one. The officer of this department diagnosed it as such. It was the Federal officer who declared it to be one of smallpox. To-morrow morning three medical officers, one of them a Federal officer, will go to North Head to re-examine the man."

Dr. Paton added that he understood the man had been vaccinated 22 days ago, but could not state whether he was successfully vaccinated. It had been stated that he had been about 13 days in Sydney. During that time it was quite possible that he had contracted the disease. Smallpox sometimes showed up in 12 days.

The suspicious cases at Ulmarra are considered not to be cases of smallpox, and that reported at Coff's Harbour has been diagnosed as one of chickenpox.

IN THE COUNTRY.

BALRANALD, Friday.

Many residents have been vaccinated, but all public cases will have to be repeated, as the Government lymph was too weak to take.

INVERELL, Friday.

At the request of the Board of Health, local doctors have been written to by the municipal council asking if they were willing to attend the town hall as a depot for free vaccination. With the exception of Dr. Mooney all declined, stating that there was no necessity for this, as they were willing to vaccinate any poor people free. The Mayor accepted Dr. Mooney's offer, and the depot will be opened to-morrow.

TAREE, Friday.

A public vaccination depot has been opened at Manning River District Hospital.

ULMARRA, Friday.

The public vaccination depot was closed today owing to the small number applying for vaccination. There were only three vaccinations to-day. The total for the week was only about half a dozen.

WEE WAA, Friday.

The shire council has decided to open vaccination depots in the chief centres of the shire. Medical practitioners are to be paid 2s per vaccination.

QUEENSLAND AN AFFECTED AREA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The External Affairs Department to-day stated that a proclamation had been approved by the Executive Council declaring Queensland to be an affected area under the Quarantine Act. New South Wales had been similarly proclaimed some time ago.

MEDICAL FEES IN THE COUNTRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A statement in your issue of 5th inst., that fees for vaccination by Government medical officers have been suspended, has caused the impressions here that vaccination was free. As a matter of fact the Government medical officer here is charging 10s 6d each, which makes vaccination a luxury beyond the reach of the wage-earner with a large family. Perhaps the "suspended fees" arrangement only applies to Sydney; anyhow, it certainly does not hold good here.—Yours, etc.,

August 6. UNVACCINATED.

THE JUNIOR PUBLIC EXAMINATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The results, with the gratifications and disappointments of the junior public examinations, are well passed, but I should like to know how many teachers and parents there are who have a feeling of great doubt as to the strictly just corrections of the papers in the late examination. The tedious task of correcting papers is well known to most teachers, but in a public examination I consider that extra care should be given, and that each subject should either pass through the hands of the head examiner of that particular paper, or that the examiner should give a certain standard to his subordinates, so that each candidate receive the same degree of fairness. Surely if this was done, one would not hear of one candidate passing the compulsory arithmetic with two correct sums, and another failing with four correct; of another candidate passing in French who was only in the room a short time, doing very little, while the same candidate failed in the arithmetic, having eight correct sums and three others partly so. As the decision of the examiners is evidently final, there seems to be no way of redress for teachers or parents. I am, etc.

AN INTERESTED ONE.

BRITISH POLITICIANS

COMING TO AUSTRALIA.

THE ITINERARY ARRANGED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Definite arrangements have now been made by the joint hon secretaries, Mr. Massey Greene and Mr. Thomson, M's.P., for the approaching visit of the party of British politicians.

Mr. Greene states that he has been advised by cable that Lord and Lady Calthorpe, Lord Castlemaine, Lord Bligh, Mr. Sydney Goldman, M.P., and Mrs. Goldman will not be able to make the trip. In addition to those already mentioned as coming, the following will be included in the party:—Mr. Arthur Sherwell and Mrs. Sherwell, Viscount Hill, Sir Stephen and Lady Collin, Mr. L. S. and Mrs. Amery, Mr. J. and Mrs. Norton Griffiths, and Mr. Alfred Bird.

The party will arrive in Sydney on Tuesday, September 2. Immediately on arrival a civic luncheon will be held, and the afternoon will be spent in viewing the city. In the evening a dinner will be given at Parliament House. The following day the party will be split up into three sections. One will go to the Blue Mountains, and inspect the Lithgow small arms factory. Another will go to Hawkesbury College; and the other remain in Sydney and visit the University and Technical College, and lunch at Parliament House. A ball will be held at Government House in the evening. Next day the party will be divided into two sections. The itinerary of section A will be as follows:—September 4, Newcastle, inspect mine; September 5, Tenterfield and motor to Lismore, Byron Bay and Murwillumbah; September 6, proceed by steamer to Tweed Heads, and thence to Brisbane; September 7, 8, and 9, to be spent in Brisbane. On return to Sydney, Inverell, Moree, and Narrabri are to be visited, and Sydney is to be reached on September 11, when a harbour trip is arranged. On September 4 the other section will leave Sydney for Brisbane, where the section is once more devided, one part touring inland, while the remainder will work down the North Coast of New South Wales, visiting in turn Glen Innes, Grafton, Coff's Harbour, Bellingen, Kempsey, Port Macquarie, and Taree. On September 11 the party will reassemble in Sydney, and once more divided into two sections. One section will proceed to Melbourne via Queanbeyan, Duntroon, Canberra, Yass, Barren Jack, Goondah, Yanco, Junee, and Albury, arriving there on September 16, when it will be rejoined by the others, who, in the meantime, will have visited Tasmania. The other places to be taken in by the party are Adelaide, Broken Hill, Ballarat, Geelong, Casterton, Mount Gambier, Hamilton, Warrnambool, Black Spur, Murchison, Shepparton, Merrigum, Echuca, and Fremantle.

MACQUARIE ISLAND.

RELIEF FOR MAWSON STAFF.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

Mr. Massey has received a cable from Professor David thanking the Government for the measure of relief to the expedition at Macquarie Island. The Tutanekai will leave for Bluff on Tuesday or Wednesday. She will tranship the Rachel Cohen's stores, and will also take a number of sheep and a quantity of fruit.

Mr. Eitel, secretary of the expedition, stated last night that he had telegraphed to Mr. Massey, asking him whether it would be possible to arrange for the Hinemoa to take the stores from the Rachel Cohen down to Macquarie Island, as the members of the expedition there were almost starving. In less than 24 hours they had received the following message from Mr. Massey:—

"Hinemoa unsuitable. The Government steamer Tutanekai is expected at Wellington to-morrow. It would take some days to remove her cable equipment and prepare her for the trip. It would be Tuesday or Wednesday at least before she would be available. Would that be too late?"

In reply the following message was despatched: "Professor David, Administrator of the Expedition, is extremely gratified at your prompt and generous response in emergency. Tuesday or Wednesday next is quite suitable. An arranging for transhipment of stores from the Rachel Cohen, and also for the shipment at Bluff of 20 live sheep and fruit for the islanders."

Mr. Eitel further stated that Mr. A. J. Sawyer, the chief operator at the wireless station on Macquarie Island, had asked to be allowed to return by the Tutanekai. His request had been granted, and the expedition had arranged for his work to be carried on by Mr. C. A. Sandell, the assistant operator on the island.

BUILDERS' LABOURERS.

ARBITRATION CASE.

CONDITIONS IN VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The further hearing was continued to-day in the Arbitration Court, before Mr. Justice Higgins of the plaint in which The Australian Builders' Labourers' Federation is the claimant and the master builders in all the States, with the exception of Western Australia, respondents. The plaint has reference to rates of pay and conditions of work of labourers.

Richard Loughnan, a walking delegate of the Victorian brach of the Builders' Labourers' Federation, said the rates of wages at different times during the last 20 years had been 8s, 9s, and 10s a day.

Mr. Millard: What wages were paid in 1892?—About 6s a day. There was then a big slump in the building trade and men were working for anything they could get. I, with others, worked on a building at St. Vincent's Hospital at wages which came to 2½d per hour only.

The President: Were you doing work for charity?—No to get food for my wife and family. My object was to get something to live upon. I cannot say whether it was contract work. After a 10 weeks' strike in 1906 the Government interfered, and Mr. Justice Cussen fixed 1s an hour. The men worked at this rate till 1910, when, as a result of a compromise, 9/6 was obtained. Subsequently 10s was given. There would have been a fight over this, but when Mr. King O'Malley declared in favour of preference to unionists the masters gave in. It was now asked that the minimum wage be 11s a day. A hodcarrier who had a bit of grey hair about him had a much less chance of obtaining employment than a younger man, although he might be better able to do the work. Many hod men dyed their hair in order to appear younger in contractors' eyes. On the question of compensation for accidents, witness stated that none was received from employers. The men had to insure themselves. Sixpence a week was deducted from their wages for this. An injured man received half pay up to six months. That was unless he threatened legal proceedings. In a case of fatal accident £50 was paid to the next of kin. No insurance policy was ever seen by the men. He had tried in vain to obtain one.

The case stands part heard.

POISONED WITH STRYCHNINE.

LITTLE GIRL'S DEATH.

ARMIDALE, Friday.

The Coroner, Mr. G. Atkin, held an inquiry regarding the death of the infant daughter of Mr. Percy Parkinson, of Dumaresq, which took place on Thursday evening at Armidale Hospital, where the child was brought by motor in a dying condition, and collapsed on arrival. It appeared from the evidence that the little girl picked up a piece of bread which had been sprinkled with strychnine and placed in a crevice in a wall to kill mice and sucked it. The parents noticed her almost immediately, and applied every remedy in their power. The Coroner returned a verdict of death from the effects of poison. He commented on the seriousness of using poison in a house where there were children.

DEATH OF A VALUABLE RAM.

GOULBURN, Friday.

Mr. Maslin, of Carwoola station, near Bungendore, has lost a ram which he purchased in Sydney a few weeks ago, paying 560 guineas. After arrival it died, after being shorn, though it was rugged and carefully housed. The fleece weighed 26lb.

What do you give Baby for his Cold?

Foolish mothers dose their babies with home-made concoctions or something recommended by a neighbour, and, perhaps, upset the little stomach, and make the baby cross and uncomfortable by this mistaken economy. Wise mothers do not experiment with untried nostrums, but depend on a remedy which has been compiled from the scientific prescription of a famous physician, and is designed to cure without upsetting the digestive organs.

Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery is this remedy, and mothers may give it to their babies, secure in the knowledge that coughs and colds will no longer rack the little bodies. For Croup it has the most wonderful results. Whooping Cough is cut short by the use of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery. For all the family ills resulting from throat, chest, or lung complaint, the mother's resource is Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery.

Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery is the quickest, safest, and best-known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Pleurisy, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Chest Troubles. It is a remedy that can always be relied upon. Obtainable everywhere at 1/6 and 3/-.

A Mother's Letter.

"My little girl, Elsie, aged eight months, suffered with Whooping Cough and Bronchitis for some time," writes Mrs. B. B. McGregor, Usk-street, Oamaru, N.Z. "When she coughed, her face would go almost black, and she would fall with weakness. I have often picked her up, and have been afraid to look at her, thinking she was dead, and she would have great trouble in regaining her breath. I gave her numerous cough cures, but without the least effect; she was also under the Doctor's care, but still remained just as bad. I was visiting a friend, and I explained my little girl's state of health to her, and she advised me to give her Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery without delay. I bought a bottle on my way home, and gave her a dose according to directions. After the first couple of doses, I noticed a great improvement, and her cough was much easier, and in a week's time had disappeared, and also all signs of Bronchitis. You would never think she was the same child, she looks so well and strong, and I shall never be without having a bottle of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery in the house."

When Baby is ill, all the Household suffers.

Hushed voices and anxious faces replace the happy home life—all else seems unimportant until baby smiles again. The best mother is she who prevents this dreaded time by keeping baby well and healthy. Babies are great sufferers from little colds, which quickly turn to bad attacks of Croup, Bronchitis, and Pneumonia. Treat baby's cold at the first symptom with tiny doses of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery, see that he be properly clothed and fed, and such ailments need never be feared. Baby will go on growing all winter, impervious to winter's ills, and set an example of health and hilarity to the entire family.

DR. SHELDON'S NEW DISCOVERY FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

PAINTERS' QUARREL.

FEDERATION BRANCH FORMED.

When the master painters met in Sydney a few months ago in conference, complaint was made of the dearth of skilled labour in the painting and decorating trade. The New South Wales Painters' Union denied the statement that the unions' policy had been "for quantity in membership rather than for quality in workmanship."

Now, however, this union is charged by its own federation—the Federated House and Ship Painters, Paperhangers, and Decorators' Employees' Association of Australasia—with having suspended rule 4 of the constitution dealing with the qualification of membership. According to the general secretary, Mr. F. J. Myers, the federation had evidence before it at this week's meeting that the New South Wales Union has had its ranks swelled by incompetents.

"The New South Wales union has been in trouble since October, 1911," said Mr. Myers. "At the Melbourne conference in October, 1912, the New South Wales delegates were asked if they were prepared to comply with the rule, and pay back sustentation fees. They refused, and the conference went on without them.

"The executive thereupon issued three months' notice of suspension. Expulsion was not, however, resorted to until it could be seen how the new (branch) office-bearers would view the position. No change was made. We have therefore expelled the New South Wales union as from 12.30 p.m., on August 7.

"Upon the expulsion being made known a petition was presented to the executive containing 64 names of intending members of a branch that would abide by the rules of the federation. This petition was in accordance with rule 21 of the constitution, and a charter was granted by the executive for a new branch.

"A meeting of these intending members was held at the Queen's Hall on Thursday night, and was addressed by the executive officers. A branch was formed, with Mr. F. Palmer, of the Sydney Trades Hall, as secretary pro tem. Another meeting will be held in a fortnight's time for the purpose of electing office-bearers."

DEPUTATION TO MR. M'GOWEN.

A deputation from the Hotel and Caterers' Employees' Union waited upon the Minister for Labour yesterday, regarding the introduction of legislation to deal with registry offices. The bill previously mooted by Mr. Carmichael provided for the establishment of labour exchanges. The deputation asked that this provision be debated, as it was likely to lead to confusion. Mr. M'Gowen promised to consider the matter.

SALDANHA DAMAGED.

The Sydney Marine Underwriters and Salvage Association, Ltd., received a cablegram from London yesterday stating that the steamer Saldanha (4594 tons), which left here on June 14 last for South Africa, via Melbourne and Adelaide, had been slightly damaged during docking at Cape Town. The message also states that the surveyors recommend that temporary repairs be effected there.

H.M.A.S. AUSTRALIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—If the welcome is to be adequate to the occasion, is it not time that steps were being taken in Sydney to arrange for a fitting reception to Rear-Admiral Sir G. Patey, K.C.V.O., H.M.A.S. Australia and Sydney, which are due to arrive in Port Jackson direct from England during the first week in October, and also to the other ships of the Australian fleet now in commission, which, doubtless, will be with us in Sydney Harbour at the same time? Coinciding with this welcome a fitting farewell to His Excellency Admiral Sir G. King-Hall, K.C.B., than whom there is no better friend of Australia and the R.A.N. would be appropriate.

In such a welcome and leave-taking it is to be hoped that the Federal and State Governments will combine with the citizens of Sydney, and so mark worthily such a great occasion in our national life.

As a holiday (Eight Hour Day) happens to fall about the expected date of the arrival of the ships it would be well if the two events could be made to coincide, and so enable Sydney to give its own fleet unit as generous a welcome as it accorded to the American fleet some years ago.

I am, etc.,
GERALD R. CAMPBELL.

STATE ELECTIONS.

WILLOUGHBY SEAT.

NINE LIBERAL CANDIDATES.

Mr. C. G. Wade, the leader of the Opposition, being anxious that the best man should be selected from the nine intending candidates to contest the Willoughby electorate in the Liberal interest, has issued the following appeal to the members of the local branches of the Liberal League:—

"The enrolment for Willoughby selection is now closed, and I venture to make an appeal to members of the branches before they cast their vote for a candidate. The membership roll now exceeds three thousand, and there are nine candidates in the field. So far, this is a matter for congratulation. The enrolment is a fair reflex of the total body of Liberal supporters in the electorate. The number of candidates indicates a spirit of healthy competition. But these facts likewise constitute a grave danger. Political emulation may deteriorate into personal jealousies, and the formation of partisan sections; and the larger the area of voters this feeling is spread over the greater the risk of damage to the Liberal cause hereafter.

"I have heard from, or heard the views of, practically all the candidates. Each expresses a confident opinion that he, and he alone, can win. It is quite clear that eight out of nine have sadly misjudgd local opinion, and if their respective supporters are equally sanguine then I believe the result of the selection must come as a severe shock to great numbers. This disappointment may lead to resentment, and the successful candidate may be confronted not only with direct opponents amongst Labour Socialists, but with disunited sections among the Liberals. It rests with the electors to prevent such a possibility. I venture, therefore, to make an appeal to those enrolled to take a broad and comprehensive view of the position. There must be many general principles and matters of policy on which all the candidates, or many of them, hold the same view. Let the electors, therefore, choose the man who will be of most value to the party. It should not be a question of 'my candidate' or 'my man,' but the best man for the Liberal party. What is wanted is a person of some force of character, as well as platform ability. The seat can only be won by the man who is able to hold his own upon the platform, and win votes by his own personal efforts. Organisation is, of course, useful, but these qualities are also requisite for successful candidature.

"Let the electors, therefore, re-adjust their mental attitude, and as a matter of judgment fix their vote for the man who, all things considered, irrespective of the personal equation, is most likely to win and hold the seat.

"Finally, having settled on the candidates in their order of merit, give your preference votes, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and so on, in accordance with your view of the merit of each man. If this course is adopted it will be the best and most successful answer to the widespread charges of packing that are indulged in by our opponents."

IRONBARK.

ENORMOUS SUPPLIES.

A deputation of sawmillers from the Pilliga Scrub yesterday urged the Minister for Lands to declare the bulk of the area a State forest.

It was declared that there was enough ironbark in the scrub to relay all the western railway sleepers, and to provide the necessary timber for railway construction in the west for the next 50 years.

The deputation asked the Minister to appoint a Commission composed of a Lands officer, a Forestry officer, and an experienced local settler, to go through the scrub and report.

The Minister promised to consider the proposal, and urged the millowners to form an association that could speak for all of them.

THE A.J.C.

ANNUAL REPORT AND BALANCE-SHEET.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

LARGE INCREASE IN STAKES.

The report and balance-sheet of the Australian Jockey Club for the year ended July 31 has been issued, and will be submitted to the members at the annual meeting on the 20th inst., as under:—

"The committee in presenting its report for the year just closed is pleased to inform members that the club continues in a prosperous condition, the receipts from all sources being in excess of those of the previous year.

"The total amount of stakes distributed for the year amounted to £77,484, the added money being £62,750, as against £71,575 and £56,400 respectively for the year 1911-12.

"The amount of added money to be given during the present year is £70,750, an increase of £8000. Included in this amount is the sum of £500 previously provided for this season's Sires' Produce Stakes. A further sum of £500 is added for this race for 1915, making its added money £3000.

The increase above-mentioned has been distributed as follows:—

"Spring Meeting, 1913: Spring Stakes, from £1000 to £1500; Randwick Plate, from £1500 to £2000; Grantham Stakes, from £500 to £750; the two Hurdle Races and First Steeplechase, from £300 to £500 each; The Shorts, from £500 to £600; Dowling Steeplechase, from £400 to £500.

"December Meeting, 1913: Villiers Stakes, from £750 to £1000; Trial, Nursery, Holiday, and High-weight Handicaps, and Grand Stand Stakes, from £250 to £300 each.

"Summer Meeting, 1913: December Stakes, from £1000 to £1250; Summer Cup, from £1250 to £1500; Christmas, Flying, Nursery, and A.J.C. Handicaps, from £250 to £300 each.

Anniversary Meeting, 1914: Anniversary Handicap, from £800 to £1000; Trial and Centenary Stakes, from £250 to £300 each; Phillip Stakes (for two-year-olds, in place of Hurdle Race of £200), £300; First Nursery, January, Welter, Flying, Novice, and High-weight Handicaps, from £250 to £300 each.

"Autumn Meeting, 1914: Autumn Stakes from £1000 to £1500; A.J.C. Plate, from £1500 to £2000; Easter Stakes, from £500 to £750; Sires' Produce Stakes, from £2000 to £2500; First and Second Hurdle Races, and First Steeplechase, from £300 to £500 each; Flying Handicap, from £500 to £600; Second Steeplechase, from £400 to £500.

"Winter Meeting, 1914: First and Second Hurdle Races and First Steeplechase, from £300 to £500 each; Second Steeplechase, from £400 to £500; June Stakes, from £300 to £400; Novice, First and Second Nursery, Ellesmere, Flying, and Exeter Handicaps, from £200 to £250 each.

"It is with regret that the committee has to inform members that the alterations to the grandstand referred to in the last report will not, owing to non-delivery of steel to the contractors, and to continued wet weather, be completed in time for the Spring Meeting as was expected. The official stand alterations, which were decided upon during the year under review, will, it is expected, be quite finished and in use for the Spring Meeting, and will provide additional seating accommodation for at least 1200 persons.

"It is proposed to charge ten shillings for each person for the first two days of the Spring and Autumn meetings, and the Summer and New Year's Day meetings, and five shillings for each person for other days, for admission to the new portion of this stand. A limited number of non-members will be admitted to the old portion of this stand, on payment of the rate now in force.

"The lavatory building in the saddling paddock was completed and in use for the Autumn Meeting. The betting ring in the paddock was extended, and light, moveable stands provided for bookmakers. The innovation proved successful in relieving the congestion in the ring, and similar arrangements have been made in the St. Leger enclosure, and on the flat.

"A semaphore similar to the one in the paddock has been erected on the flat. The entries for the classic races, races for young stock, and Spring handicaps again show an increase, and members will be pleased to note that New Zealand owners are well represented. The six associations controlling racing in the country have done excellent work during the year just closed, and the committee desires again to place on record its appreciation of their efforts. In order to provide a uniform set of articles, a conference between delegates from the associations and the committee was held in Sydney on the 10th ult., with most satisfactory results.

"It has been decided to again increase the subsidies granted to the associations. The committee desires to impress on country clubs the expediency of becoming affiliated to the associations. In view of the success which has attended the employment of stipendiary stewards by clubs affiliated to the associations, the committee has decided that in future no race meeting will be registered unless an approved steward be employed.

"The Australian Rules of Racing, as well as the amended local rules, came into operation on the 12th November last, and so far have worked satisfactorily. Experience has shown the necessity of certain alterations to the former to meet the requirements of the several States, and these will be considered at a conference of delegates from the principal clubs to be held during Cup Meeting in Melbourne.

"Your committee recently brought into operation a rule to permit of apprentices obtaining allowances under certain conditions.

"The control of racing at Randwick by the stipendiary stewards commenced when the new rules came into force in November last, and has been quite satisfactory. To meet the wishes of members, it has been decided to allow ladies to occupy seats in the old portion of the official stand. For an additional payment of £2 2s per annum a member will be entitled to a ticket which will admit one lady to this stand on each day of racing. The number of these tickets will be limited to 200, which will be issued to members applying according to priority of application. In view of the steadily increasing number of members, it is intended, on the completion of the alterations to the grandstand, to reserve the whole of the members' stand for the use of members and ladies holding members' ladies' tickets.

"Metal badges for members, instead of leather tickets, have been adopted for the current season. The committee requests that these be worn so as to be readily seen, as the work of the attendants at the entrance gates and stands will be much facilitated thereby.

"There being no nominations for the committee, the retiring members will be re-elected."

ADRIAN KNOX, Chairman.

During the year the sum of £671 was paid out of the distressed jockeys' fund, which is in credit £7685 16s 1d.

MOTOR FATALITY.

WOMAN KILLED IN CAMPERDOWN.

The City Coroner (Mr. Hawkins) yesterday inquired into the circumstances of the death on July 30 of Elizabeth Sarsfield (39).

Mr. W. W. Monahan (instructed by Messrs. Saywell and Saywell) watched the proceedings on behalf of Bruce Saywell, motor driver. Mr. Hayes (Crown Solicitor's Office) represented the police.

Constable William Andrews stated that at about 8.20 p.m. on July 30 he saw in George-street, Camperdown, a motor car coming from the direction of the city. It was travelling at about 14 miles an hour. A large arc lamp near witness was not alight; it was very dark there. As the car passed by witness heard a crash. He turned quickly, to see the car running at a sharp angle towards the kerb. The rear wheels were passing over deceased's body. Saywell was the driver. With him in the car was a man named Partridge, who was drunk. The deceased was not under the influence of liquor.

Dr. Palmer said that at the post-mortem examination the organs of deceased were such as to suggest that she partook of alcohol to excess.

James Herbert Partridge, of Wahroonga, said that he and Saywell had been out to Coogee. He denied having been so drunk on the night of the accident that he could not see anything.

Senior-constable M'Atamney said that at the hospital Partridge was well under the influence of liquor. Saywell also had had alcohol, but he seemed to know what he was doing.

Bruce Wilson Saywell, of Burwood, the owner and driver of the car, said that he did not see the deceased in the road. She must have been lying down.

In recording a verdict of accidental death, the Coroner remarked that it seemed strange the driver should not have seen the woman in the road if she were standing up at the time of the accident.

HOUSES ROBBED.

Cases of petty house theft continue to be reported. On Thursday afternoon, the residence of Mr. Arthur Smith, in Lenore-street, Five Dock, was entered by the forcing of the kitchen window with an axe found in the yard. A gold chain and locket (valued at £6) were stolen. Mr. Leighton Barbour's home, College-street, Drummoyne, was also entered by a thief during the afternoon. The front door was forced open, and jewellery worth £7 stolen. Mrs. Phoebe O'Keefe in Pearl-street, Newtown, reports the loss of seven sovereigns and a lady's gold ring. These were taken from a wardrobe, the thief having entered by an open front door.

AUSTRALIA'S AMBASSADOR.

It seems only the other day that there was no one to speak for Australia in the outside world. Australians used to read of great gatherings and banquets at which Prime Ministers, Ambassadors, great soldiers, sailors, and scientists were present as the representatives of their country or their profession; and always in an honoured place on that list Australians noticed the name of the representative of Canada. The six Agents-General might or might not be present, either all together or separately, but there was no representative of Australia. To anyone who has been lately in London, and seen the established and recognised position which Sir George Reid has carved out for his office in the estimation of the British people, it is difficult to realise that he has done this work in little over three years. There are four States of the British Empire which have High Commissioners in London—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa; and it is no disparagement to the fine old pioneer who represents Canada to say that Sir George Reid, chiefly by the use of that same power of speech which made him his position in Australian politics, has placed himself without rival amongst his colleagues in London. It is no small thing to be listened to as Sir George Reid is listened to. Australians who have had the fortune to be present in some London hotel in the early hours of the morning at gatherings assembled after the theatres to say good-bye to some distinguished actor about to dip his hand into the lucky-bag at Sydney or Melbourne will not readily forget the value which those present placed upon the Australian High Commissioner as an after-dinner speaker. The men around those tables were men whose names would be as familiar in Australia or America as they were in London; one or two younger members of the British Ministry; more than one distinguished K.C., including some whose figures are familiar on the Opposition front bench; half a dozen wellknown novelists, a leading singer, several journalists; painters, sculptors, actors, architects; and, rarest specimen of all, a real English dramatist. It is the sort of function at which a "new chum" in the old country delights to be present—a sort of national collection of celebrities. The Australian visitor is not listening to the speeches, he is letting his eyes wander from face to face, trying to pick them out from half-remembered caricatures, photographing them for use in his mental picture gallery in the future, when they are some 12,000 miles away, and the morning's cables come to hand telling how one of them is threatening England with civil war, another has written the novel or painted the picture of the year. To make the Australian wanderer quite content, the management has provided him with a sort of catalogue of the exhibits—a list of the guests printed on the back of the menu card to guide them to their seats. He is only distracted from perusal of it by a snatch of conversation heard across the table—one cheerful stranger, with a curiously familiar face, telling a couple of his fellows to wait a while—they will get something worth listening to when Reid's turn comes. It is not till then that the Australian, who has come there to see some of the great people of England, finds that these distinguished persons are mostly waiting to listen to an Australian.

Sir George Reid has made too many speeches in his life to be able to say something new in every one of them. The Australian, as he listens to him, will see the whole of the distinguished company shaking its sides over stories that have delighted Woolloomooloo or the Protestant Hall time without number. It would be difficult to say how often the High Commissioner has told to English audiences the story of how he came to leave his native land of milk and honey—always taking particular care that it was never told twice in the same place. But how many Australians realise that although Sir George Reid has had to make innumerable speeches during the last three years, he has never once said too much? There is not one speech of his which Australians can recall in which the High Commissioner has said anything that aroused adverse comment in Australia. And this has not been due to any steering clear of touchy subjects. Sir George Reid is possessed of a high degree of tact; more, probably, than many Australians realise, because it is usually overlaid with a thick protective covering of humour. But English journalists, for example, have come to know well that it is useless endeavouring to extract a sensational interview from Sir George Reid, or to get him to trench upon dangerous subjects if he does not believe that the moment for doing so has arrived. But when, in the High Commissioner's opinion, an occasion has arrived on which the Australian view ought to be put before the public—for example, after the publication of Mr. Borden's idea of direct contribution to the British Navy, when the British public seemed to be losing sight of what Australia was doing—Sir George Reid has taken the step of putting our case in clear terms and carefully chosen language before the British people. He has once or twice spoken equally directly to the Australian Government, and, in one case at least, that straight speaking saved the country from a great industrial disaster. Apparently Australians will have to wait for some time longer before they have the chance of seeing him, but we are certain that whenever he does revisit this country they will seize upon the occasion for showing him their appreciation of his work. Sir George Reid has made the office of High Commissioner for Australia something nearer to the post of the Ambassador for the United States in London than to any other. It is a very eminent position to have won, and it is worth taking trouble to retain. We fear that Sir George Reid is being asked to maintain that position with altogether inadequate support from the country which expects him to represent it. The experience of Australia is likely to repeat that of the United States. If it does not pay its representative an allowance sufficient to enable him to take his part freely in the social life of the country to which he is sent, one of two things will happen. Either the position of Australia's High Commissioner will decline into that of the recognised poor relation, who is entertained but charitably absolved from the necessity of providing entertainment in return: or else the occupant of the office will have to be, like the late American Ambassador, a rich man. It is inconceivable that the choice, in the case of Australia, should come to be limited by the question of private means. For that reason we trust that an early opportunity will be taken to set the office of High Commissioner for Australia above this limitation.

EUROPE AND THE BALKANS.

With the experience of the past few months before us it would be absurd for anyone to express the hope that the signature of the treaty of Bucharest can be regarded as the end of the quarrels between the States themselves. We are now in a position to arrive at some estimate of the difficulties which confronted the statesmen of Bulgaria, Servia, and Greece in the many attempts which were made during the last ten years to form an alliance for the purpose of enabling some attack to be made on Turkey, the common enemy of them all. It is clear that the sense of sharing a grievance did very little to destroy the feeling of hostility with which each one has always regarded the other. The Turks were unfortunate in finding in their hour of danger each one of the States under the control of a man of singular ability and of sufficient capacity for leadership to make the best of an opportunity. Possibly even the Italian war might have been survived had it not been for the grievances of the Albanians, and the long-cherished ambition of Montenegro to acquire some territory less barren than her own. The war of liberation when it did come was obviously ineffectual either to impress on the States the importance of unity or to change the attitude of one of them to the other. Instead, it impressed on them a sense of the futility of the Concert of Europe which they had been learning from the series of attempts to supersede the Turk in the administration of Macedonia. The series of negotiations which were carried on both before and after the Turkish Revolution had taught the allies two lessons. They had learned that the Powers might be defied with impunity, and that where the ambitions of Austria and Russia were excited there was an end of any prospect of united action. The events which have followed the signature of the Treaty of London have seen the two leading States of the Balkans each exercising its ambitious for supremacy, and each sufficiently exalted by its victorious career to ignore or defy any threats of intervention. It is probably too early yet to say which of the States was responsible for beginning a fratricidal war. The evidence at present available would lead to the conclusion that King Ferdinand, in spite of the warnings of his Minister and the weakness of his troops, hoped to compel the Servians to accept his terms. But even if the letter alleged to have been found among the Bulgarian prisoners is genuine, there will still remain a doubt as to the ultimate responsibility for the attack. The interest and the policy of Austria have always been in the direction of checking the aggrandisement of the Servian kingdom. Under the former dynasty she was able to keep the country in the position of a vassal State by the methods which the French King applied to King Charles II. Under King Peter, Servia has asserted her independence both commercially and politically, with no little success. It is not an improbable supposition that Bulgaria was encouraged in her disastrous enterprise by the promise either of assistance or of a benevolent neutrality which would amount to almost the same thing. A victory for Bulgaria would have been a check to the progress of Russian influence in two directions. It would have suppressed, or at least weakened, the State which is a rallying point for the Slavs both in the Balkans and in Austria-Hungary. It would at the same time have been a successful defiance of the assertion by Russia of the right to command obedience throughout the Balkans which she has maintained since the conclusion of the war with Turkey. As long as Servia retains her new territory there is some justification for saying that Austria, and through her the Triple Alliance, is weakened by the four or five army corps which will be retained on the south-eastern frontier. The increased strength of Roumania adds nothing to the three Powers with whom she is supposed to be associated. Roumania is protected against attack from the south-east, and to that extent would be able to act with greater freedom in a war between Austria and Russia. But she was never really afraid of an attack from Bulgaria, whose ambitions always looked towards the south. She has now more troops at command than she had before the war. She has, in fact, nothing to offer which can compensate for the expulsion of the Turks who had come to be looked upon as a very powerful element in the forces of the Triple Alliance.

It is no doubt true that the defeat of the Turks has been used as an excuse for proposals which were contemplated long before the war began. If the German Chancellor could be believed without a reservation the victory of the allies would be responsible for the demand for larger armies and heavier taxation both in France and Germany. In fact, however, the German plans to which the French were an answer must have been developed for reasons which, though they were confirmed and strengthened by the war, had an origin quite independent of it. Even although the balance of power in the Balkans has been preserved, the war has deprived the Triple Alliance of a small portion of the Austrian army, and of any prospect of Turkish assistance. But if the war had never taken place the Triple Alliance would have been weakened relatively by the gradual increase in the strength of Russia. Russia is now able to fulfil and more than fulfil the promises she made in 1891, and which at the beginning of this century seemed to have lost all their effect. The savings of French peasants have enabled her to re-create her army and to re-establish the forts which command the Polish frontier. In one respect the Balkan war has been a god-send to the German Minister for War. It has furnished him with the text for a discourse which has carried with enthusiasm his demands for more men and more money. In contrast to the opposition which Frenchmen of many different opinions have shown to the three years' service bill the German people have consented readily to the sacrifices asked of them. M. Barthou had no more convincing argument to address to the deputies than the statement that in recent years German military expenditure had increased by 237 per cent., and French by only 9 per cent., and that in the near future and under the new system Germany would have a peace establishment of 870,000 men, and France one of 673,000. The most alarming feature of the present situation is indeed the revelation that the resources of France are strained to the utmost at a time when the feeling of one nation against the other is as bitter as it has ever been. The growth of better relations between Germany and England has not been accompanied by a lessening of the hostility of Germany towards France. The gravest danger to European peace is in the province of Burgundy, as it has been for so many hundred years. The treaty of Bucharest may lead to further recriminations between Russia and Austria, especially as Bulgaria still wishes to appeal to the Powers. But it is not likely that either Russia or Austria would venture into war as long as their respective allies remained sincere in their protestations of a desire for peace.

State Finances.—The Treasurer (Mr. Cann, M.L.A.) is indignant at what he calls the distortion of the figures for the year's balances given in the press. "I have published no such figures," he says, "as those which were made to appear as coming from me. The day after the financial year closed I stated that the deficiency on the year was £1,228,000, and nothing has occurred since that date which justifies any inflation of it. The statement in the press makes it appear that we do not know our own figures, or else that we have been wilfully concealing them. It would be an extraordinary state of things if we said £1,228,000 on July 1 and then six weeks later said the deficit was £400,000 more. Such a state of things would be an absolute disgrace to the department over which I preside. It is altogether untrue. I spoke in my place to the House last night and repudiated the statement foisted upon me. I thought that that repudiation would have got the same prominence as the alleged statement itself did. Unfortunately, it has not done so, and I am compelled to take this means of contradicting a statement that ought never to have been made.

State Ferries.—Although no definite pronouncement has been made on the subject, it is understood that the Harbour Trust Commissioners have reported adversely on the proposed State ferry scheme. Ministers will probably be informed that if a vehicle ferry service were run at a reduction on present rates, a loss would result.

The Rule of the Union.—Fifteen butchers, members of the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union, were dismissed on Wednesday by an employer in one of the western suburbs for not slicing the meat satisfactorily. The men were taken on again on Thursday evening. On Friday morning, however, they refused to work with the foreman. The employer told the foreman that he would have to go. "What for?" asked the foreman. "The men won't work with you," replied the employer, who added, "That's all I have against you." The foreman has now to look for another avenue of employment.

FEDERAL CAPITAL

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At a meeting of architects in Sydney last week it was resolved that the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) should be asked to submit the Federal capital design to a committee appointed by them before the work of building was finally commenced. When the matter was brought under his notice to-day Mr. Cook said that the whole question of the capital design was being considered, and he could not say at this stage what would be done later on. The Government had invited Mr. Griffin, who had submitted the prize design, to come to Australia, and fit his scheme to the contour of the country. He was already on the water, and it was impossible to say what action could be taken until Mr. Griffin had had an opportunity of looking into the design of the city on the actual site.

THE INEVITABLE.

FRIENDLESS BULGARIA.

INDIFFERENCE OF THE POWERS.

REVISING THE TREATY.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 7.

M. Venizelos, the Greek Premier, announced at the peace conference to-day that Greece and Bulgaria were in complete agreement in regard to the new frontier.

The conference then proclaimed an armistice sine die.

Delegates were appointed to prepare a treaty of peace, which it is hoped will be signed on Saturday.

ATHENS, Aug. 7.

It is officially announced that Kavala, an important port on the Aegean, about 80 miles east of Salonika, has been included in Greek territory.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

The roughly-drawn boundaries all favour Greece and Servia, to the detriment of Bulgaria.

The latter's delegates fought bravely to secure an equitable settlement in the face of the allies' insistence, coupled with the Roumanian pressure and the indifference of the Powers, especially Austria, from whom Bulgaria expected support.

At last, friendless, with the knife at her throat, Bulgaria bowed to the inevitable.

It is believed that a peace which does not take account of Bulgaria's ethnic interests will not last.

Russia and Austria have expressly reserved the right to secure a revision of the treaty in regard to Kavalda.

The Bulgarians are formally to submit their reservations to-day, but they are not likely to affect the juridical value of the treaty.

EUROPEAN PRESS VIEWS.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

Many newspapers are pessimistic about the prospects of peace lasting. They point out that the war has been left open for intrigue.

They consider, however, that there is but little hope of the Powers revising the treaty.

The French newspapers are jubilant at the conclusion of peace, and express the hope that the proposed revision of the treaty by the Powers will be abandoned.

They hold that the treaty as outlined establishes the balance of power and consolidates the European equilibrium.

The Austrian official newspapers consider that a revision of the treaty is essential, and they do not expect a lasting peace. If the Powers are unable to reach an agreement, then each Power will have a free hand to protect its own interests.

It is pointed out that Russia supports Austria's demand for a revision of the treaty.

The "Neue Freie Presse" and the "Zeit" consider that, if anything, the revision should be nothing more than a mere matter of form, because anything else may endanger European peace.

The leading German newspapers state that Bulgaria cannot rely on the Powers for a revision of the treaty. They do not believe that any Power will risk a disturbance of the quiet that has been obtained with such difficulty.

THE TURKISH PROBLEM.

SOFIA, Aug. 8.

Bulgaria has notified the Powers that she will demobilise immediately peace is signed, and she relies on the Powers to force Turkey to respect the Treaty of London.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 8.

The Ambassadors of the Powers have verbally demanded the observance of the Treaty of London, particularly in regard to the Enos-Midia line.

The Council of Ministers has discussed the demand, but has not yet arrived at any decision.

It is believed, however, that the reply of Turkey to the Powers will be a reaffirmation of the statement that her action in retaking Adrianople is justified.

WILD RIOTING.

VIOLENT ITALIAN STRIKERS.

TROOPS DEFIED.

MILAN, Aug. 8.

Serious strike riots have arisen out of the metal workers' demand for an increase of a farthing per hour.

A force of 150,000 strikers is defying the military, which is being hastily drafted from various cities.

Barricades have been thrown up in several streets, large stretches of the pavements being torn up for the purpose.

Many warehouses have been looted.

At the outset of the trouble there were many melees during which the strikers used stones, daggers, and revolvers against the police. As a result of these riots 40 police have been admitted to the hospital.

Up till the present 500 arrests have been effected.

BRITISH POLITICS.

THE SESSION END.

MEASURES ABANDONED.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

In the House of Commons last night the Prime Minister announced that the prorogation would take place on the 15th or 16th instant.

The short Education Bill would have to be dropped, and owing to the opposition to the measure it was impossible to proceed with the Sir Stuart Samuel Indemnity Bill this session.

In a letter addressed to Mr. P. H. Illingworth, Chief Liberal Whip, the Samuel Montagu Company stated that the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Bonar Law, had not accepted the firm's challenge to inspect its books in connection with its dealings in silver for the Indian Government. The company added that if there was to be any official opposition to the Sir Stuart Samuel Indemnity Bill it would prefer that the measure should be withdrawn.

MEXICO.

"INTOLERABLE SITUATION."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.

President Wilson, recognising that the Mexican situation is becoming more and more intolerable, has appointed Mr. John Lind as his personal representative to approach President Huerta, with the object of securing information as to the prospects of the suppression of the rebellion.

President Huerta, however, refuses to receive the United States envoy, and declares that he will ignore him if he arrives in Mexico.

PARIS MURDER TRIAL.

ROWDY COURT SCENES.

DISCARDED LOVER'S EVIDENCE.

PARIS, Aug. 8.

The trial of Madame Alice Crespy, author, on a charge of having murdered the Rev. Father Chassaing, was continued yesterday.

There were many swift exchanges of fierce words between counsel for the defence and for the prosecution, and between the accused and various witnesses.

Abbe Lichaud, in course of his evidence, stated that for over a year Abbe Chassaing had been weary of his liaison with the accused. One day he said: "How that woman plagues me!" He feared that she would do him some mischief.

Accused's dressmaker described her as "hysterical, crazy, and jealous." Accused had told her that there was nothing like a sensational love crime to "boom" a book.

A fierce dialogue ensued between the accused and the witness.

The accused broke down when her former poet lover declared in the witness-box that she was incapable of committing the crime with which she was charged.

During the hearing the police had frequently to intervene to suppress disorder in the court.

THE RAND.

LABOUR'S DEMANDS.

"AN IMMEDIATE DISSOLUTION."

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 8.

At a mass meeting under the auspices of the Labour party here last night a resolution was agreed to insisting that the demands of the Trades Federation should be conceded, and demanding the immediate dissolution of Parliament.

A MINISTER'S VIEW.

CAPETOWN, Aug. 8.

Sir D. P. de Villiers Graaf, Minister for Posts and Telegraphs, in a speech at Oudtshoorn last night, declared that the Government and people should unite to prevent South Africa reaching the level of a South American republic.

The concessions made by the mine-owners were valuable and reasonable, and agitators should not be allowed to take the law into their own hands.

The demand that had been made for the recall of Lord Gladstone because he had permitted the use of the troops in the suppression of the disorders in Johannesburg, he characterised as "an act of insolence."

INDIA.

CONTINUED PROSPERITY.

UNREST IN BENGAL.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

During the debate on the Indian Budget in the House of Commons last night Mr. E. S. Montagu, Parliamentary Secretary to the India Office, stated that the continued increase in revenue in India had been due largely to the increased railway profits.

The guiding principles of the Government's policy in India were co-operation and devolution. It was proposed to remove the native States' business from the Foreign Secretary, and to appoint a special secretary to handle it.

He admitted that there were disquieting features in Bengal, without disclosing their nature; but he denied that the attempt on the life of the Viceroy was the outcome of a wide national movement.

NAVAL DEFENCE.

THE CANADIAN POSITION.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.

The Government has decided to introduce a measure providing for the reform of the Senate during the next session of Parliament, the object being to prepare the way for the reintroduction of the Naval Bill, which the Senate recently rejected.

A cablegram has been received here, in which it is stated that Mr. James Allen, New Zealand Minister for Defence, has announced that the southern Dominion has decided in favour of the Imperial control of her fleet.

The news has been hailed with great gratification by the Conservative press.

CODY'S DEATH.

BIG MACHINE FAILS.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

SONS WITNESS ACCIDENT.

LONDON, Aug. 7, 12.20 p.m.

In regard to the hydro-aeroplane disaster at Fleet, Hampshire, which resulted in the death of Mr. S. F. Cody, the famous airman, and a passenger Mr. W. H. B. Evans, it appears that Mr. Cody's sons Leon and Frank witnessed the accident. Leon intended to accompany his father, but gave way at the last minute to Mr. Evans. The latter was a member of the Indian Civil Service, and was learning aviation.

THE FIRST FLIGHT.

The hydro-aeroplane was built to take part in the contest for the "Daily Mail's" £5000 prize race. Constant trials had been made with it for a month, and the first actual flight took place this morning. Up till the time of the accident the machine had covered 70 miles, and Mr. Cody was carrying passengers at the rate of five guineas each. He jocularly said, "I may as well make a little pocket-money."

The machine weighed a ton, and was driven by a 100-horse power engine. The wings spanned 60ft, and the length was 44ft.

TOO HEAVY FOR WINGS.

The accident happened at a height of about 250ft. It appeared as though the body proved too heavy for the wings. The whole framework seemed to turn inside out, like an umbrella in a gale, and the machine came crashing to the ground, and was broken to matchwood.

Eye-witnesses state that the hydro-aeroplane was travelling at the rate of about 59 miles an hour; then it seemed to wobble, and almost immediately went to pieces.'

CODY'S DESPERATE LEAP.

Mr. Cody flung himself from the machine before it reached the ground.

The disaster happened at a place where a party of Dr. Barnardo's boys were camping.

The horrified spectators on reaching the spot found Mr. Cody's neck had been broken, and they extracted Mr. Evans's body, which was badly mangled, from the debris. An examination proved that practically every bone in the bodies of both men had been broken.

"DAD! OH, DAD!"

When he saw the machine fall Leon Cody rushed across the plain, burst through the cordon of soldiers that had been drawn around the wreckage, and flung himself across his father's body, crying, "Dad! Oh, dad!"

Colonel Seely, Secretary of State for War, in a message of sympathy to Mrs. Cody, eulogised her husband's valuable services to the War Office.

The late Mr. Evans was captain of the Oxford cricket eleven in 1904.

MEDICAL CONGRESS.

MASSAGE IN THE ISLANDS.

INCREASE IN LUNACY.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

At yesterday's sitting of the Medical Congress, Professor W. H. R. Rivers, lecturer in Physiology of the Senses, Cambridge University, read a paper, in which he described the massage that was carried out by native practitioners in the Solomon Islands. He declared that the operations coincided with our own system, but the underlying ideas of the process had a magico-religious basis.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, Lord Chancellor's Visitor in Lunacy, in an address on "Lunacy since 1859," declared that the number of lunatics in Britain had increased 276 per cent., as against an increase in the population of 87 per cent. There was no good reason for such an increase in a vigorous and expanding race. "Notwithstanding the successful treatment of diseases hitherto contributing to lunacy, the accumulation of chronic lunacy rolls on, and the rate of recovery has fallen during the last half-century."

DUPERDUSSIN CASE.

ACCUSED'S STATEMENT.

PARIS, Aug. 8.

The hearing of the charge against M. Duperdussin, the well-known aeroplane manufacturer, of having obtained large sums of money by means of false pretences, was continued yesterday.

The accused told the magistrate that he had spent most of his money in developing the aeroplane industry.

He added that he had refused a large sum that had been offered him to sell his secrets to Germany.

MARCONI CONTRACT.

STRENUOUS OPPOSITION.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

In the House of Commons last night Lord Robert Cecil gave notice of a motion to the effect,—"That, in the absence of an independent report on the desirableness of the contract with the Marconi Company for the erection of wireless stations in the Imperial chain, the House is not prepared to approve of the agreement."

The Opposition intends to strenuously oppose the contract, and has issued an urgent whip in connection with this motion.

THE SUFFRAGISTS.

HUNGER STRIKER RELEASED.

LONDON, Aug. 7.

Mrs. Edith Rigby, wife of Dr. Charles Rigby, who recently confessed to being the author of the outrage in the Liverpool Stock Exchange and the burning of Sir William Lever's mansion, Rivington Hill, and was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, has been released on license, owing to her adoption of a hunger strike.

CIRCLING THE WORLD.

RECORD TRAVELLING FEAT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.

Mr. John Meares, a reporter on the staff of a New York newspaper, has arrived home, after travelling round the world in 35 days 21 hours 35 minutes, this being the record.

He travelled, via Paris, the Siberian railway, across the Pacific, and thence through British Columbia.

NEW SOUTH WALES LOAN.

LONDON, Aug. 7.

The "Westminster Gazette" says it is believed that the New South Wales loan of £1,500,000 is going off well, and that "the underwriters will probably get out."

The Treasurer (Mr. Cann) said yesterday that he expected the loan to go off well, and was, of course, very pleased with the result. The money market would probably be easier now in view of the practical cessation of hostilities in the Balkans. The success of the loan showed that the London money market had great confidence in this State.

H.M.S. NEW ZEALAND.

VICTORIA, Aug. 7.

The annual carnival was continued to-day, the crew of the cruiser-battleship New Zealand taking a prominent part.

A brilliant ball was given in the evening in honour of Captain Halsey and his officers. The Premier, Sir Richard M'Bride, the Lieutenant-Governor, and Rear-Admiral Reynolds, of the American fleet, were present.

THE SAVINGS BANKS

MR. COOK'S PROPOSAL.

DISCUSSED BY STATE MINISTERS.

The Premier and the Treasurer discussed with the "Herald" reporter yesterday the announcement that the Cook Government proposes to amend the Commonwealth Bank Act on lines suggested at the last Premiers' Conference. Mr. Holman said that he would be glad to discuss the matter with Mr. Cook when he made a definite pronouncement upon the subject. So far he had nothing official before him upon which he could base an expression of opinion. All he could say at this stage was that he was glad to be informed that Mr. Cook was anxious to meet the wishes of the States.

Mr. Cann, with the Premier's approval, made the following statement:—"Under the proposal submitted to the Premiers' Conference it would be possible to run the State Savings Bank services as at present without any dislocation of existing arrangements. Since the Federal Bank with its Savings Bank branches was established instead of avoiding duplication of work we have been multiplying branches in all directions.

"There are certain services which we maintain are essentially State services. For instance, we have got 'Advances to Settlers, and Closer Settlement Promotion.' We contemplate advances in connection with workmen's dwellings. The advances made through our Savings Bank to-day total over £2,090,000 and they are growing. All these are properly State functions. Advances to settlers and in connection with closer settlement promotion in some States are made from an agricultural bank. We make them through the Savings Bank here; but the chances are that if we did not we should make them through some department of State. The Governor of the Commonwealth Bank (Mr. Miller) has always argued that the Savings Bank should not be doing this class of work—that it is not legitimate Savings Bank work, but belongs to general banking.

"The main difficulty in the past has been that the Federal Bank has always wanted to take over our securities, that we have issued to the bank, at their market value as against their face value. When we got these securities we took advantage of a cheap money market, and we don't feel like sacrificing that advantage, especially as the State Bank does not want to realise on its securities. It would have meant a large additional annual cost to us had we done as the Federal Bank wanted us to do. But, of course, if the Commonwealth and State banks were in partnership on the lines of the Premiers' Conference these difficulties would disappear. Until Mr. Cook's intentions are made known, however, we cannot commit ourselves to any pronouncement of policy."

ASSEMBLY SCENES.

FIGHT IN LOBBY.

LABOUR MEMBER'S MISTAKE.

The adjournment of the Legislative Assembly at 3.20 yesterday morning was followed by a scene of rare excitement in the lobby just outside the Chamber.

Four members, two Labour and two Liberal members, took an active part in the scene. The whole thing would have passed off in a bloodless way only for an unfortunate mistake on the part of one of the youngest and newest men in the House, Mr. M'Girr, the Labour member representing Yass. At the time he appeared Mr. Hollis, the Labour member for Newtown, was speaking heatedly to Mr. Cohen, the Liberal member for Petersham, with them he had crossed swords just previously in a debate in which threats of physical violence had been uttered.

At the time Mr. Hollis was talking excitedly in front of Mr. Cohen the member for Petersham had his gloves on and his overcoat on his arm, preparatory to going home. Neither Mr. Hollis nor Mr. Cohen, who is a much younger man than the member for Newtown, were doing anything more than arguing the point, when Mr. M'Girr intervened, evidently on the erroneous assumption that there was a fight on. The blow he landed on Mr. Cohen's jaw was the first signal for actual hostilities. Inasmuch as Mr. Cohen had his hands down when Mr. M'Girr hit out at him, a fourth member, Mr. Moxham became sympathetically involved in the fracas. Mr. Moxham is active and wiry, and has the reputation of having been one of the best amateur boxers in his district.

Mr. Cohen dropped his coat, and proceeded to retaliate, and Mr. Moxham made a rush at the member for Yass, but before the combatants could do any further damage they were all separated.

The greatest excitement prevailed, and the shouting brought all and sundry upon the scene, Mr. Moxham being seen with his shirt sleeves rolled up. The two Ministerial members, had, meanwhile, been spirited away.

Peacemakers were, however, plentiful, and there was nobody disposed to act as bottle-holders. The Premier, Ministers, and other prominent members of the House did their best to restore tranquillity, but the crowd in the lobby did not melt away for some time after the passage-at-arms of members.

The scene undoubtedly had its genesis in the disorderly conduct that characterised the proceedings in committee on the bill mentioned. The deputy chairman of committees, Mr. Thrower, was not equal to the task of preserving order, though he several times raised his voice above the din and threatened to take the extreme course against certain members. Vulgar remarks were shouted across the floor, mimicry resembling caterwauling was repeatedly indulged in, and the uproar at times was suggestive of life in a tap-room. What followed in the lobby was by no means unexpected from the disorder that had prevailed in the Chamber.

MATHINNA MYSTERY.

MURDER OF A FARMER.

MATHINNA (Tas.), Friday.

The inquest concerning the death of William James Mullins was continued at Mathinna to-day, before the coroner, Mr. Holder, and a jury. Mullins disappeared from his home on June 20, and the only trace since found of him was a few fragments of bone and other remains in the ashes of a fire discovered in a lonely part of the bush about a fortnight later.

Herbert Russell Elliston, legal practitioner, of Fingal, said that Mullins was a client of his at the time of his death. He had no knowledge of any bad feeling existing between Mullins and Dan Jones.

Amy Elizabeth Jones, 14 years old, daughter of Daniel Jones, said she remembered the day William Mullins, junior, came to her parents' house to ask after his father. Her father and mother went to the garden to get vegetables about 10 o'clock that Friday morning, and witness was backwards and forwards from the house helping them. She got dinner ready, and then called her parents home from the creek. She could not see what her father was doing between 12 and 1 o'clock. After dinner her father sledged vegetables home, and then went ploughing. At 4 o'clock he came in for a cup of tea, and then went to shoot rabbits. They had tea about 6 o'clock, and some time afterwards her father and mother went out to look for ringtails. Young Mullins came to the back door and said to witness, "Have you seen my dad?" She said "No," and he went away. A few minutes afterwards her parents came home. Later her parents went out again after ringtails. When they came in witness heard her mother say to her father that it was 10 minutes past 12. She did not hear a gun between 10 o'clock and 1 o'clock on Friday. The dogs were barking after her parents went out for the second time. They were barking because her uncle's dogs were barking.

WHITE AUSTRALIA.

A UNION DILEMMA.

DESTROYING AN INDUSTRY.

FREMANTLE, Friday.

Delegates to the Fremantle Trades Hall were faced with a knotty problem at their last meeting. It was in respect of a motion tabled by the delegate from the Coastal Shipwright and Boatbuilders' Union,—"That permits should be granted to new pearling luggers, irrespective of the crews they would carry, until the year 1914."

When the Federal Government, in order to give practical effect to its White Australia policy, decided that pearling luggers should be manned by white crews, a storm of protest was raised by pearlers, and the Government decided that the regulations prohibiting the employment of Asiatic crews should not come into operation until December, 1914. No permits, however, for the employment of coloured crews on new luggers would be granted in the interim, and since 1910 very few luggers have been built. The regulations struck a severe blow to the lugger building industry, both at Fremantle and other parts of Australia, and although members of the Coastal Boat-builders' Union approve of the White Australia policy, they hold that a similar concession to that granted to the Pearlers' Association for extensions of permits to the year 1914 should have been extended to them. It was pointed out by some of the delegates that the carrying of the motion would practically amount to a repudiation of the White Australia policy, which was one of the foremost principles in the Labour party's platform.

The Coastal Boat-builders' delegate said that when the Federal Government decided to grant permits to pearlers to employ coloured labour up to 1914 they should also have given some consideration to the boat-builders. Since 1910 no permits to employ Asiatics on new luggers had been given, the result being that the lugger-building industry was now practically a dead-letter.

To show how seriously the industry had been interfered with, he pointed out that the cost of a lugger delivered to the agent at Fremantle was roughly £390; while it would cost about another £190 to deliver the boat at Broome. Between the years 1902 and 1910 something like 180 luggers were built at Fremantle, representing an outlay of considerably over £100,000. This amount had been practically divided amongst the workers of Fremantle in seven years, as during the 1904-5 season very little building was done, owing to depression in the pearling industry. Prior to 1902 200 luggers were built at Fremantle, at a total cost of £134,300. It would thus be seen that the lugger-building industry had returned almost a quarter of a million to the people of Fremantle up to 1910, when the new regulations came into force. During the past two years only one lugger had been built at Fremantle, and an industry which had formerly been worth about £14,000 a year was now worth nothing. He considered that they had not had a fair deal from the people in the eastern States. His union was in favour of permits being issued to new boats until 1914, which, after all, was only placing the builder on the same footing as the pearler, who had already been granted that concession.

One of the delegates pointed out that the application of the White Australia policy to the pearling industry would have meant the employment of from seven to eight thousand white people in the north-west of Australia. He was sorry to say, however, that white divers had not proved a success.

Other speakers pointed out that the question was a particularly delicate one, and while they sympathised with the Boat-builders' Union, they considered that the association would to a certain extent stultify itself by endorsing the motion. If the association could assist the Boat-builders' Union without doing violence to the White Australia policy delegates would be willing to do so.

Finally it was decided to refer the matter to a committee.

ROYAL COMMISSION

IN PEARLING INDUSTRY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The inquiries being made by the Royal Commission appointed by the last Federal Government in regard to the practicability of white labour being employed in connection with the pearling industry were further advanced to-day, when advantage was taken of the presence in Melbourne of an experienced diver named John Nowry, from whom evidence favourable to the employment of whites was taken.

The Commission adjourned sine die.

HOUSE BLOWN DOWN.

LILYDALE CASE.

A CHARGE OF MURDER.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

Walter Henry Merrifield, 38, a market gardener, was charged at the police court this morning, before Mr. F. G. Adrian, S.M., with the murder of Clarence Gilbert Kefford, at Lilydale, on June 4 last. Mr. D. G. Bathgate, of the Crown Law Office, prosecuted; and Mr. W. A. Walker, instructed by Mr. T. A. Braye, of Messrs. Braye and Cohen, appeared for the defence.

Detective James Gallagher, of Sydney, said that on July 30 last he was with Senior-Detective McHattie at Lilydale. He saw the accused in the garden. A few minutes later the three of them were in the kitchen of Merrifield's residence. A statement was then taken down from the accused. It stated that the accused went to bed about 9 o'clock on the night in question, and when he woke up at about 7 o'clock the next morning, he heard an explosion, and upon looking out, he saw that the building occupied by Kefford was blown to pieces. He then went out to look for Kefford. It had been arranged that a man named Pidgeon was to become a partner in the farm. Pidgeon and his wife were due to arrive on June 4. Kefford and accused had about 4½lb of gelignite, and about a week before Pidgeon arrived, they placed it in the dairy. "He must have caused it himself," the statement continued, "as there were only the two of us, and I never did it myself. In my opinion, Kefford caused the explosion, so that he could run the place by himself."

After the statement was made, Detective Gallagher told the accused that there was a difference between it and the one made to Constable MacKay. The accused replied that Constable MacKay had made a mistake. Witness then said to the accused that if the opinion given by the doctor was correct, then Kefford was in bed at the time of the explosion, and he certainly could not have caused the explosion. The accused, continued the witness, then became very nervous, hesitated for a while, and said, "I will tell the truth now; I am very sorry I caused this trouble." The accused then made the following statement:—

"I now, of my own free will, without any promise or inducement being held out to me, wish to tell the truth. On the morning of June 4 I thought that Kefford was in the barn repairing harness. I got the gelignite, a piece of fuse, and the detonator, and placed it under the house, and then lit the fuse, and went behind one of the buildings. Within a few minutes the explosion took place. I did it to frighten Kefford. I did not know he was in the room at the time. When I saw that he was dead, I became frightened, and that is why I have concealed the matter up till now."

In reply to Mr. Walker, witness said that during the five or ten minutes that elapsed between the making of the first and second statements, he went outside of the house to speak to Constable MacKay. Both of the statements partly contained answered questions.

After other evidence had been heard, the accused was committed for trial at the Circuit Court, to be held on September 30 next.

AN ERRATIC WINTER.

CHANGING CONDITIONS.

The opinion has been generally expressed lately that the present winter has been abnormal. The Commonwealth Weather Bureau supplies the following interesting facts and comparisons in this connection:—

The winter so far has been of a very erratic character, but more especially in the coastal districts. At Sydney the experiences with respect to moisture, wind, and temperature have been most diverse.

Taking June into consideration, the prevailing direction of the wind was west, but south was also very much in evidence, and, indeed, the direction generally was variable. The total number of miles of wind registered was 6484, or 746 miles less than the average. Rain played an important part in the weather conditions, 1123 points being registered in the month, or close on double the normal. The mean temperature was 53.6deg, or 0.7deg below the average; and both midday and early morning readings were also a little lower than is usual in June.

Now, the second month, July, evinced a strong tendency to dryness until the last week, when an easterly element replaced the prevailing westerly conditions, and heavy rain occurred, which brought the total to 756 points, or 290 points above the average. The total number of miles of wind was only 5291 miles, or 2064 less than the normal, and the prevailing direction was north-west, as against the usual westerly for this month. The mean temperature was 53.9deg, or 1.5deg warmer than usual for July. The midday readings were to a great extent responsible for this excess, being also 1.5deg higher than normal; but the early morning temperature was only 0.3deg higher, thus manifesting a marked inclination to normality for that period.

In the past 47 winters the general variability of this season is noted, and a summary of past experiences goes to prove that the seeming extraordinary character of the present winter is not without parallel, but, indeed, is only a recurrence of abnormality, which has very nearly been, if not, exceeded in all points during the past.

THE WHITE PLAGUE.

PREVENTION SCHEME.

STATE PREMIER ACTING.

The Premier had before him yesterday the report of the Advisory Board on the prevention of consumption.

Briefly the report recommends the establishment of a chain of throat and chest dispensaries throughout the State on the lines of those already operating at the Haymarket and Royal Prince Alfred Hospital; the establishment of sanatoriums for incipient and advanced cases; compulsory notification throughout the State (it already operates in the metropolis); assistance for families who may be temporarily deprived of their breadwinners through having to go into sanatoriums; and the education of school children on the danger of infection, and methods of prevention.

"I am submitting the proposals," said the Premier, "to the various departments concerned for advice as to how far they are practicable. The Education Department, for instance, will advise upon the question of instruction in the schools. This may take the form of lectures and special chapters in the school readers. Mr. Carmichael will be able to get the assistance of his medical staff in regard to this. Many of the proposals of the committee, if practicable, will need legislation. Others, for instance, an enlargement of the dispensary system, may be done by administrative action. Nothing will be done heedlessly or thoughtlessly. We are going to feel our way carefully and bring down a practical scheme."

THE DARDADINE TRAGEDY.

BODY IN A BARROW.

ACCUSED ARRESTED BY CIVILIANS.

PERTH, Friday.

The inquest on Peter Hansen, the victim of the Dardadine tragedy, was continued at Narrogin yesterday, and resulted in the committal of James O'Brien, who was present in custody, on a charge of wilful murder.

Carl Bredahl, settler, said he went to deceased's hut on the morning of July 25, but deceased was not about. Witness noticed a wheelbarrow track near the camp. He followed it some distance over a hill. He then noticed the wheelbarrow with something in it close to a clump of whitegum bushes. A man was sitting alongside the barrow with his back turned towards witness. On getting a better view witness noticed that the object in the barrow was a man's body, which he concluded was Hansen's. Witness then returned home and told his brother-in-law (J. Taylor) what he had seen. He drove back with Taylor and saw accused, James O'Brien, walking away from them at right angles. O'Brien was just going behind some whitegum suckers. He had evidently heard them coming, and was sneaking away into the bushes. Taylor called out: "Come out of that, Jim, and throw up your hands." He called twice, and then O'Brien came out with his hands up.

J. Taylor corroborated the latter portion of the previous witness's evidence, and said when he asked accused what he had done with Hansen accused replied, "he is down there on the barrow," pointing down the hill. Witness then covered accused with his rifle and made him walk ahead to Dardadine Siding, two miles distant, where he was given into the custody of the police. When taking accused to the siding, he said, "You took me by surprise. If I had known you were coming I would have potted the both of you."

Witness, continuing, said that on the way to the siding accused said he and deceased had had a row in camp. Deceased pushed him out, and in the scuffle the rifle went off, and accidentally shot him.

Medical evidence showed that death was due to shock and hemorrhage, caused by a bullet in the chest fired from a rifle at a much longer range than had been possible with two men struggling.

ONE PREMIER.

DISCIPLINE IN THE CABINET.

MR. HOLMAN'S POSITION.

There is no longer to be the reproach against the State Government that it is composed entirely of Premiers declaring various policies, in divers places, at different times. Mr. Holman is to be the one and only Premier, to all intents and purposes, as if he were the head of a Conservative Government.

The announcement does not imply another disagreement in the Cabinet. Ministers are a particularly happy family just now. It just means that Mr. Holman, as the head of the Ministry, has taken the stand that all announcements of policy should be made by the Premier. In this his colleagues cordially agree with him, and only under exceptional circumstances, and then with the Premier's concurrence, will other Ministers in future make pronouncements of policy.

The position was discussed with several Ministers yesterday, who said that unquestionably Mr. Holman was taking the right stand. Ministers, in fact, seem to be unanimous about the new order of things.

A STORE ROBBED.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The People's Stores in Gouger-street, were entered on Thursday evening, when about £200 worth of goods were taken. An entrance was gained by scaling a gate at the rear of the premises, and climbing to the verandah. The intruders then forced a door into the showroom on the upper story. The thieves selected valuable ostrich feathers, valued at £100. The safe was not tampered with, although it contained £200 in cash.

THE A.J.C.

A PROSPEROUS INSTITUTION.

The members of the Australian Jockey Club have good reason to be satisfied with the report and balance-sheet to be submitted for their adoption on the 20th inst., inasmuch as it reveals a state of prosperity which accentuates its position as the leading turf institution in Australasia.

The money distributed in stakes shows a great development. During the season 1911-12 the added money found by the club totalled £56,400; that for the season just closed amounted to £62,750; while the sum provided for the current year aggregates £70,750, an increase of £8000 in stakes alone.

Notwithstanding the fact that during the past season the sum of £21,690 16s 11d was spent in effecting improvements, all of which were paid for out of revenue, the year closed with a surplus of £16,356 15s 11d.

The assets of the club, exclusive of the Randwick racecourse, stands, and improvements constructed out of revenue, total £108,544 17s 8d, inclusive of money on fixed deposit, investments in Government stock, and cash in bank and in hand amounting to £96,860 17s 5d.

PETROL.

"AN INIQUITOUS SCHEME."

DR. WEIGALL'S PROTEST.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At the conclusion of a lecture on the history of the petroleum industry, given by Mr. H. W. Harrison, of the Vacuum Oil Company, at the Automobile Club to-night, the president (Dr. R. E. Weigall) said a most iniquitous suggestion by the New South Wales Minister for Public Works (Mr. Griffith) had been published that day. Mr. Griffith had said that he hoped to make a proposal to Cabinet for the establishment of a petrol monopoly, which would provide money for the maintenance of the roads. Dr. Weigall said the Government, if it took control of the sale of petrol, would be able to charge motor users whatever price it liked if the oil companies could be compelled to hand over their businesses. He failed, however, to understand how such a proposal could be seriously made. The Government would have to be strenuously fought. He did not see that any reduction would result from Government interference. The prices would rather rise.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The Premier was asked to-day if he was attracted by the proposal of Mr. Griffith, Minister for Works in New South Wales, to create a monopoly of petrol, and raise funds for the maintenance of roads. "I am not prepared to follow such a lead until I know something about it," he said emphatically.

INTERSTATE COMMISSION.

WORK STARTS NEXT WEEK.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

By the Sydney express to-day the newly-appointed chairman of the Interstate Commission (Mr. A. B. Piddington), K.C., arrived in Melbourne, in company with the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook), who joined the train at Wangaratta, so that he could talk over matters on the way down. The conference was subsequently continued in Mr. Cook's departmental office. Mr. Piddington, Mr. Swinburne, and Mr. Lockyer were formally introduced to each other during the afternoon, and they then met to have a preliminary chat with the Attorney-General.

Before leaving for Sydney the Prime Minister stated that it was probable the Commission would be sworn in on Monday, and work would be entered upon during the week.

The Prime Minister stated that there seemed to be some doubt as to the proper method of appointing the secretary to the commission. It would be a most important post, and only those who possess the highest qualifications would be considered when the question of making a selection arose. The Act was silent on the matter of the appointment of the secretary, and in view of that it seemed to have been intended that the Public Service Commissioner would be responsible for picking a suitable man. That being the case, he would also be required to fix the salary.

MOTOR CAR CAPSIZES.

BOWRAVILLE, Friday.

Father Van Riel, parish priest at Bellingen, had a narrow escape of being killed in a motor car accident. He, in company with Mr. Hadley, examiner of the Royal Academy of Music, was journeying from Nambucca Heads to Bowraville, when the wheel of the car, which was driven by the priest, skidded, and the car capsized, turning a complete sommersault. Mr. Hadley was thrown some distance, but was uninjured. Father Van Riel, however, fell under the car, portion of the vehicle resting on his chest. Mr. Hadley succeeded in raising the car sufficiently to enable the imprisoned man to crawl out, little the worse for the accident. The principal damage to the car was to the steering gear.

PANAMA EXHIBITION.

QUEENSLAND'S REFUSAL.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The Premier has definitely declined to pledge the State Government to any expenditure in connection with the proposed Panama Canal exhibition, to be held at San Francisco. Mr. Denham has informed the Prime Minister that he is not disposed to purchase articles for exhibition or provide public funds for the purpose. "We are not going to any expense in the matter," he said.

A MAORI SCENE.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

A peculiar occurrence is reported from a native village in the Wairarapa, arising from a post-mortem examination being held on the body of a Maori.

The Coroner, a doctor, and two police arrived at the time appointed for the operation and found two hundred men, women, and children drawn up to receive them.

Continuous wailing for the dead was kept up, and many of the native speakers urged the natives to prohibit the post-mortem. Eventually order was restored, and the post-mortem proceeded.

OIL IN PAPUA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Samples of the oil discovered in Papua by the Government search party were forwarded to the Department of External Affairs some weeks ago for analysis, and the results were stated to be highly encouraging, but the quantity of petroleum was not considered to be sufficiently large to provide accurate data. As a result the Minister for External Affairs (Mr. Glynn) gave instructions that a second sample should be secured, and in response to his message three gallons were delivered in Melbourne during the past few days. The oil has been sent on to the Government Analyst (Mr. Percy Wilkinson) for examination and report. This sample has been secured from the Vailala River district, where experiments are being carried on by Mr. F. Grevin.

The latest reports from Mr. C. H. Locke, who is engaged on research work in another portion of the territory, states that the borehole is now down 270ft, and it is shown that the lower strata is very much disturbed, and in constant motion. Mr. Locke in a letter to the Minister said that in some instances rocks as big as two clenched fists had been thrown up into the casing of the drill, and there was every indication that an oil geyser might be struck at any moment. Mr. Locke reported that his two assistants had suffered in health as a result of the tropical climate, and had been sent down to the coast.

A GREAT AIRMAN.

LATE S. F. CODY.

HIS EMINENT CAREER.

A NATIONAL LOSS.

"I have spent all my life in a hard struggle against long odds in the hope that hundreds of years hence the history of aviation will appear with my photograph among its pioneers."

This was the explanation given by Samuel Franklin Cody, the eminent aeronaut, who has met his death in such distressing circumstances, last year, of the motive which had prompted him to devote his life to the pursuit of flying through the air.

He was a remarkable man, this grey-bearded, wild-looking giant, who, although a naturalised British subject, since 1906, was nevertheless unmistakably an American in speech and gesture. Ridiculed as a "broncobuster" who was bamboozling the public with his kites, when he should have been buckjumping on the prairies; caricatured as a "Buffalo Bill" top-booted swashbuckler with a six-shooter in his hip-pocket, he nevertheless had the satisfaction of living to see the jeers and sneers turn to admiration and commendation. Those who looked upon him as a private adventurer with a screw loose in his brain, saw him appointed as an official of the British War Office, and the winner of prizes given by the War Council in competition with all the world.

There were many who saw at an early stage that this persistent crank had a mechanical bent of no mean order, but many a man might have been discouraged by the lack of support which he received. Cody possessed, however, two great qualities which enabled him to succeed. He had unlimited confidence in his own capacity to "make good," a confidence which was, in fact, well placed. But he also had an untiring zeal and indomitable perseverance, which stood the test of all the disappointments and failures which were inevitably associated with his early experiments. Cody had, too, an extraordinary physique, which apparently was able to stand an unlimited amount of fatigue. He could, for example, make taut all the wires of his machine by pulling them with his hands, a thing which few mechanics would attempt to do, much less succeed in accomplishing. It is unnecessary to say that he had courage, and at 52 years of age he was as venturesome and daring as ever. Here parenthetically it may be mentioned that Mrs. Cody, who was the first woman to have flown in England, always encouraged her husband in his risky work.

Cody was unique in the world of aeronautics, in that he combined the functions of inventor, designer, builder, and pilot.

UNCONVENTIONAL METHODS.

"The Colonel," the kiteflyer which he constructed at Farnborough, was soon replaced with the perfection of the internal combustion engine by the more ambitious machine which he afterwards invented. His genius and persistence at last enabled him to combine resistence, which would give full value in the air with high engine power. He had the fortitude to escape the hypnotism of the rotary engine, and the pluck to put 120 horse-power into his machine and drive it at full pressure. Although not a manufacturer in the conventional sense, his machines were built in a manner second to none in point of durability and safety, a point about them, being the extensive use of bamboo. On a machine, which gives an excellent view all round, he scarcely troubled about protecting himself at all from the wind, whilst the evolutions he would perform close to the ground, turning with one wing-tip nearly touching, were such as nobody else had dared attempt. In the air he would do most extraordinary things, maintaining ordinarily an altitude of from 2500 to 3000 feet, whilst to prove the stability of his machine he would order one of his employees to stand out on the wings, several yards away from him, and hold on to the struts, so that the machine was loaded quite on one side; yet he would fly as safely as though it carried an ordinary burden.

In the "Daily Mail" £10,000 competition in 1911, the winning machines were met at every stopping point by an army of mechanics, whilst relays of fast motor-cars were in waiting in case anything was necessary between depots. Cody had none of this assistance. He carried all his repository tools in his pocket, and when his machine required repair, he came down and tinkered it himself with such material as he carried or that could be procured from the local blacksmith.

Cody had other falls, but he survived them all. He took the oath of naturalisation in dramatic circumstances in Doncaster in 1906, a week after he had met with an accident, and before he had wholly recovered from the wounds of a fall at Aldershot. Cody cared nothing for criticism, and though he was boisterously self-confident, he was content to work quietly, and without publicity for years, until his end was consummated.

THE WAR OFFICE PRIZES.

It is almost a year (August 30 to be exact) since Mr. Cody won the two prizes offered by the British War Office. To many the result came as a great surprise, for he was awarded the full sum in prize money (£5000), that it was open to any one machine to win. The Cody biplane won the first prize of £4000 in the competition open to the world, and £1000 as the first prize in the competition open to aeroplanes made wholly in the United Kingdom, except the engines.

Criticism was directed against the type of machine which won the prizes, but nothing could detract from the merit of its performance. It was stated that, although the Cody biplane had been successful, it would not be adopted as a model by the military authorities. The management of such a machine in mid-air, though shown to be easy in the hands of the inventor, just as was the original control of the Wright biplane in the hand of Wilbur and Orville Wright, was, however, not according to familiar principles. Life, it was contended, is too short to learn other than ordinary methods of driving motor-cars or aeroplanes, a point which has been recognised by the French military authorities in deciding that standardised methods of control must be fitted to all types of machines used in the Service.

Although subjected to transport tests, the machine was not specially constructed with this object in view, Cody contending that his biplane was designed to travel through the air, and it was the best way to transport it under all conditions. "He has had the sense," wrote one of his critics, "to build a machine on such a scale that he does not have to cut down the weight of his engine, with the result that he has an enormous margin of power, while his instinct for mechanics has enabled him to design a chassis which will withstand amazing shocks. In his methods of deed, in the beginning one of his methods of getting into flight was to charge a hillock, bumping against it so hard that he got bounced into the air, and went on flying. The merit of his performance lies in the fact that he is neither an engineer nor a scientist, but merely a man with an amazing instinct for mechanics and a natural eye for what is and is not right. In fact, he is at once a genius and one of the most remarkable personalities engaged in the flying movement. Hence, the originality of his methods, and also the difficulty of communicating his knowledge to others. He does not, for example, know what lift per square foot of wing surface he is getting out of his machine, for at the trials I heard him ask an engineer for the information; but he does know how to get as good a lift out of an aerocurve as anybody who can talk theory till further orders. His wing curve, too, is like nobody else's; but concerning its efficiency, there is no room for doubt."

WORK AT ARMY MANOEUVRES.

It will be remembered that the British army manoeuvres last year came to an abrupt termination in consequence of the startling success of the aeronauts, who acted as intelligence officers. Both opposing forces knew almost everything there was to know about the disposition and movements of the other. Mr. Cody was largely responsible for this result. After flying from the manoeuvres aviation camp at Hardwick, Cambridge, in his prize biplane to the London Aerodrome, a distance of 50 miles, in half an hour, Mr. Cody discussed the work accomplished at the manoeuvres. By means of the aeroplanes used, he said, each commander was able to find out exactly what the other commanders' forces were doing and their position. In his opinion, the aeroplane had thrown warfare back by a thousand years, when fighting was practically hand to hand. These conditions would remain until a fighting aeroplane had been evolved. The fighting aeroplane would necessarily be a large vessel, and probably it would be used in action very much as a battleship was used at the present day.

Asked with regard to the new gun which had, it was stated, been introduced, and was capable of firing a shot 900 yards upwards, Mr. Cody said that he had not studied the question, but he was prepared to say offhand that he would make an aeroplane go where neither that nor any other gun would hit it. Mr. Cody added that he was engaged in completing a perfectly automatically balanced machine, which would ;y in any wind up to 60 miles an hour.

After winning the War Office prizes Mr. Cody was accorded a public reception at Salisbury, and he referred with what will be regarded as justifiable pride to his efforts in aeronautics. He had spent all his life, he said, in a hard struggle against long odds in the hope that hundreds of years hence the history of aviation would appear with his photograph among its pioneers. He was not anxious for war to come, and he hoped that these implements for war would never be used. If, however, the day came and they were not well equipped with aircraft, as other nations would probably be, they would find themselves wanting, as had happened in the South African war. His successful aeroplane was built whilst he was in the service of the Government. Some people thought he was wasting the taxpayers' money, and he was told to go away and practise on his own account. The machine was that for which the Army Council now gave him the prize.

COMPULSORY TRAINING.

NEW ZEALAND ACT.

THE IMMIGRANTS WANTED.

LONDON, Aug. 7.

Mr. Thoms Mackenzie, High Commissioner for New Zealand, has sent a spirited letter to 68 newspapers replying to letters warning emigrants not to go to the Dominion owing to the system of compulsory training in operation there.

Mr. Mackenzie recalls the fact that the defence scheme has been approved at three general elections, and he points out that New Zealand is not far from Asia, whence trouble may come, and it would be improper to rely on Great Britain in an emergency.

He adds that more emigrants are applying than can be taken, and that New Zealand is well rid of those who are ready to create disturbances without having the manliness to help to defend the women and children.

PEACE TREATIES.

UNITED STATES AND SALVADOR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.

The United States' Government has agreed upon a convention with Salvador on similar lines to Mr. W. J. Bryan's abortive peace treaties with Great Britain and France.

Under the terms of the treaty a commission is to be appointed to examine any dispute that may arise between the two countries, and declare the facts before the world, leaving the world to judge which nation is right and which wrong.

Congress is likely to agree to the treaty.

LABOUR CAMPAIGN.

PREMIER AT CAMPSIE.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE CASE.

"CRY OF DISLOYALTY."

The members of the Holman Ministry have now entered upon a vigorous campaign in connection with the approaching State elections. Several days ago the Minister for Education (Mr. Carmichael) went away on the first of a series of week-end trips to the country. Last night the Premier addressed about 1000 people in the Campsie Hall in support of the candidature of Mr. Peters, M.L.A. for Canterbury. Mr. Holman spoke under the most trying conditions. In the first place, as he himself put it, he had just experienced a very fatiguing week, and was somewhat exhausted. The hall in which the meeting was held is a large one. A gas engine was working at full speed just at the rear of the platform, and the rain pelted down on to the galvanised iron roof almost the whole of the time the Premier was speaking.

"LICKSPITTLING AND SYCOPHANCY."

Mr. Holman commenced by referring to Mr. Peters as one of the most promising of the younger men of the Labour party. He asserted that the Opposition had failed to attack the Government on principle or policy. Mr. Wade and his followers had half a dozen favourite gags—that the Government had failed to hang one man, did hang another, let certain people out of gaol, or kept somebody else in. (Hear, hear.) The Opposition would not judge the Government on its policy—it picked out half a dozen small twopenny halfpenny questions. (Hear, hear.)

Referring to the Government House question he said that the Macquarie-street site should never have been kept as a residence for any gentleman, no matter how distinguished. It was now to be used, and should have been used all along, for the health and recreation of the people of the State. With no other fault to find the Opposition started the cuckoo cry of disloyalty. "We are," he went on, "loyal subjects of the King, and I contend that we can be just as loyal whilst we are helping to conserve the health, wealth, and strength of the people of the State, as by lickspittling and sycophancy around the Governor-General in Melbourne." (Applause.)

"FOR POLITICAL REASONS."

Mr. Holman was referring to the administration of the Justice Department when he was asked, "What about Phillips?" "The gentleman who asks that question should ask Mr. Wade," the Premier replied, "as the present leader of the Opposition was the head of the Government when Phillips was sentenced to death. Phillips was kept in suspense and torture for weeks, and what were we to do? I say that, in connection with the Phillips case, Mr. Wade and his party prostituted the administration of justice for purely political reasons."

INDUSTRIAL LEGISLATION.

Touching on industrial legislation, Mr. Holman said it was generally believed that the majority of the breaches of awards were committed by the employees. But that was not so. He had figures to prove that the total number of employers convicted for breaches of awards from June 11, 1912, to March 13, 1913, was 1030, and the number of breaches 891. The total number of employees convicted for breaches during the same period was 226, and the occasions on which employees had broken awards 20.

A voice: Perhaps you haven't put them all in.

The Premier said that since the Act came into force every breach reported by the employers has been followed up. (Hear, hear.) Since arbitration was introduced in New South Wales the wages of the workers had increased by £20,000,000 yearly. (Hear, hear.)

Speaking of increased cost of living, Mr. Holman declared that it was a world-wide question. One way in which an endeavour could be made to reduce the cost of living was to fight the rings and combines that were oppressing the people. But the increased house rents were due to purely local causes. The Government had made an honest attempt to house the workers of the State by erecting cottages at Daceyville.

A voice: How much do you want for them?

The Premier replied that a workman could get a decent cottage at Daceyville for 13s 6d a week. The same man would have to pay 15s a week for a tumble-down cottage in a slum area. The Minister for Works had been bitterly attacked for his temerity in trenching upon the sacred monopoly of Sydney's brick ring. Yet it had to be remembered that the Government was now getting bricks from its own brickworks for 30s a thousand, instead of paying 45s a thousand to the brick monopoly. The Government intended to start other Daceyvilles, not only in Sydney, but in large country towns. In that way the people would be able to obtain sound, decent houses and not be at the mercy of the landlord. (Hear, hear.)

"I ask you," said Mr. Holman, in conclusion, "to judge between the Labour party and its opponents on broad questions of principle. The mission of the Labour party is to uplift the masses, and it will never swerve from that ideal." (Loud applause.)

MILITARY ARMS.

The military authorities are calling upon all persons having in their possession rifles, bayonets, accoutrements, or other naval or military articles without the lawful authority of the Department of Defence, to deliver them up, under pain of prosecution, to the senior ordnance officer, Sydney, or to send them, when reasonable freight will be paid on delivery.

DARING THEFT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A daring robbery was committed in Little Napier-street, Fitzroy, this afternoon. T. J. Hogan, a traveller for a jewellery firm, left a bag containing jewellery valued at £150 in a jinker while he was transacting business with a customer. A man suddenly rushed to the back of the vehicle, seized the bag, and made off. Hogan went in pursuit, but the thief escaped.

NAVAL COLLEGE.

NOWRA, Friday.

Mr. Kelly, honorary Minister, returned to Nowra this afternoon after a visit to the Naval College construction works at Jervis Bay. He was entertained by a number of townsmen. Mr. Kelly stated that the original plans of the Naval College would be carried out, but some modification towards economy would be made in certain of the construction works.

CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE THIRD GAME.

VINER'S BRILLIANT WIN.

BELLINGEN, Friday.

After a couple of well-played draws, the third game was decided to-day, and resulted in Viner scoring first blood. Crakanthorp, as second player, selected the French Defence, the closeness of which is quite foreign to his aggressive open-board play. Viner avoided the "get-rich-quick" attack— P to K 5—and contented himself with quiet development. The second player saw an opportunity of winning a Pawn at the ninth. The Pawn, however, proved to be a "Greek gift," for Viner was enabled to quickly combine his forces with fatal effect on the ill-protected Black King.

The champion is not one who hankers after brilliancy, but, when the situation justifies it, he can provide his "little bit of Morphy." He offered the sacrifice of a Kt, as shown on our diagram, and a few moves later gave up the exchange to maintain his grip of the game.

Mr. Crakanthorp defended bravely, but he never recovered from his time-losing Pawn capture at the ninth move. The game, which appears below, with notes, will be found to be full of interesting points:—

NOTES.

(a) Q Kt to B 3 is generally played.

(b) Black wins a pawn at the expense of valuable time. This capture (Q takes Kt P) is nearly always turned down by sound players.

(c) The right move; threatening P to Kt 5 winning.

(d) White's next few moves are object lessons in game development. Contrast the two positions. White has Q, R, B, and Kt in active play, against which Black has to battle with Q and Kt.

(e) A fine combination.

(f) Better than taking with the pawn, to which White would answer with 21 R to Kt 5 ch — K to R 1, 22 R takes P.

(g) Playing the high game.

(h) From this point to the end White plays faultlessly, and never gives his opponent a chance of escaping from the toils.

The score now stands: Viner 1, Crakanthorp 0, drawn 2. The first three drawn games do not affect the score in any way. After that, however, each draw is counted as ½ a point to each player. The player obtaining the first seven points (a win counting as 1) will be declared the winner. Should the score be 6 or 6½ games all, then 9 points to be scored by the winner. The playing days are Monday to Friday inclusive, in each week. Dr. Lancaster, of Kempsey, is acting as referee.

CITY HEALTH OFFICER.

The suggested appointment by the City Council itself of a health officer distinct from the present arrangement under which the Board of Health appoints one of its staff to attend to the health requirements of the city is not, the Lord Mayor explained yesterday, intended in any way as a reflection on the selection by the Government of Dr. Purdy for the position in accordance with the existing practice.

"The health committee," he stated, "simply considered that the time had arrived when the city, owing to its progress and development, should have its own health officer, who would be under the direct control of the council, and that the dual control hitherto in operation should, as far as possible, be reduced in the interests of citizens.

COAL TROUBLE.

A PROPOSED DEPUTATION.

MINISTER'S ACTION

SUDDEN CALL TO PROPRIETORS

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

When a deputation, consisting of representatives of the northern miners, waited upon Mr. M'Gowen, Minister for Labour and Industry, yesterday, and placed before him their views of the disputes at Stockton, Borehole, Lambton B, and Pelaw-Main collieries, he promised to ask the proprietors to see him to-day. A number of urgent telegrams have been sent between Mr. J. B. Holme, the Industrial Registrar, and Mr. A. R. Cant, secretary to the Colliery Proprietors' Defence Association at Newcastle, but, owing principally to the proprietors being unable to comply with the requests from the Industrial Registrar, and partly to the delays which have taken place in Sydney, the northern colliery proprietors have been unable to send a deputation to Sydney. It is judged, from the information contained in the telegrams, that the Minister has now taken a certain course, without the proprietors having any say in the matter.

The first telegram was sent by the proprietors yesterday to the Minister for Labour and Industry. It read:—"Would respectfully request you to make no pronouncement to deputation from Miners' Federation until you hear proprietors' views also.—Cant."

The following reply did not reach the Proprietors' Association office till after 6 o'clock last night:—"With reference to subject matter of your wire to-day, Minister will be prepared to receive a deputation representing proprietors' interests at 3.30 o'clock to-morrow (Friday), before taking certain action at present under consideration. — (Signed) Holme."

As the proprietors could not communicate with their representatives in various parts of the district, as well as in Sydney, to permit of them being in Sydney by 3.30 p.m. the following day, a reply was sent by the Proprietors' Association as follows:—"Your telegram just received. Impossible for deputation to be in Sydney to-day. Could Minister meet deputation to-morrow at 11.30?—(Signed) Cant."

Mr. Holme then sent a telegram, which reached the proprietors' office at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It read: "As it is essential that the Minister should be in a position to act to-day, he will receive your deputation at 7.30 o'clock this evening. Please reply whether deputation can attend at that hour. (Signed) Holme."

That reply only permitted the proprietors' association to arrange for their representatives to catch a train for Sydney within an hour's time, and meet the Minister at 7.30 p.m. As that arrangement was almost impossible to carry out, the following telegram was sent: "Your message received at 2 o'clock. Your intimation that the Minister will receive a deputation to-night is unreasonable. You cannot expect us to get the proprietors together to join the train in a few minutes. We can meet Minister at 11.30 o'clock to-morrow. Please reply. (Signed) Cant."

At 5.30 o'clock this afternoon another telegram was received from Sydney, reading: "Your telegram of to-day received. Minister will now take action contemplated by him. He will also receive proprietors' deputation at 11.30 o'clock to-morrow. (Signed) Holme."

In order to enable the deputation to arrive in Sydney by 11.30 o'clock to-morrow morning, it would be necessary for the proprietors' representatives to travel at the latest by to-morrow's early morning train. The proprietors' offices in the town close by 5 o'clock, and the proprietors' association was faced with another almost impracticable appointment. They, therefore, telegraphed as follows: "Your wire received. Under circumstances, the proprietors must decline to wait upon the Minister. Am publishing our correspondence. (Signed) Cant."

PELAW-MAIN.

STATEMENT BY PROPRIETORS.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

"With reference to the statements by Mr. Watson (the president of the Colliery Employees' Federation), to which publicity has recently been given, I would like to mention one or two matters in reply thereto," said Mr. A. R. Cant (secretary of the Colliery Proprietors' Defence Association) to a 'Herald' reporter this afternoon.

"According to the 'Sydney Morning Herald' of the 7th inst., he alleges that one of the youths at the Pelaw Main colliery, had in addition to being proceeded against in the police court, been dismissed for using offensive language. This statement is absolutely incorrect. What happened was this: One of the wheelers had been guilty of using filthy language to one of the deputies. On Monday last the manager spoke to the wheeler in question, and as a result of his interview with him asked him to make his apologies to the deputy, as it was his first offence. This the wheeler did, and was allowed to resume work, and the matter ended. The wheeler was neither prosecuted nor dismissed. Perhaps it would be better for Mr. Watson, before making rash statements to be sure that he is fully acquainted with the facts.

"With regard to a report to the effect that the manager of the Pelaw-Main mine refused to allow two of the wheelers to go down the mine and make an inspection of the travelling road, I would like to say that whilst this is perfectly correct the manager intimated to the wheelers that he was quite prepared to allow the Government inspector and the employees' check inspector of mines to go down and report on the state of the travelling road. Since the new ventilating fan has been installed the district check-inspector has been at the mine, and has made a written report to the effect that the mine is in good order.

"In reference to Mr. Watson's remarks concerning the wages of the machine-men at the Pelaw Main colliery, and his anxiety to have a special tribunal appointed to deal with the matter in dispute in connection therewith, perhaps it will be interesting to those who are not aware of the facts to know that at the first meeting of the Wages Board, which was held on the 30th ult. when arrangements were being made to commence the hearing of evidence, that the advocate for the miners pressed the board to take the small coal question first, as a matter of extreme urgency, but notwithstanding this, when arrangements were being made to commence the proceedings on the following Monday, Mr. Lewis pointed out that that day was a Bank holiday. It was than arranged to make a start on Tuesday, the 5th inst. Only one witness was available for that morning, whose evidence was concluded about 12 o'clock, and the same thing happened in the afternoon, the board having to adjourn about 3 o'clock. On Wednesday morning, before 10 o'clock, Mr. Lewis asked the chairman of the board if he would adjourn the sitting until 2 o'clock, as the miners' Delegate Board was holding a special meeting. This application was granted, and in the afternoon the board only sat until 4 o'clock, instead of 4.30, owing to lack of witnesses. A start was made again on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, and at 1 o'clock Mr. Lewis asked for the adjournment until Monday next. Therefore, out of a possible 25 hours the board only sat 9½ hours, and, as Mr. Lewis has intimated that he will finish his case on Tuesday next, it will be seen that this could have been accomplished this week had there been no delay. The reason for the delay is inexplicable, and, as the small coal question had already been the subject of inquiry before the late joint committee, coupled with the alleged urgency of the matter, the Miners' Federation should have been ready to go right on with the case before the Wages Board. In face of this delay, Mr. Watson is reported to have asked the Government to appoint special tribunals to deal with the Pelaw Main, Lambton B, and Stockton-Borehole disputes, in order that the inquiry into the small coal question before the Wages Board might not be interfered with, and in this application he refers to the wages earned by the machinemen at the Pelaw Main colliery.

"The pay sheets of the Pelaw Main colliery disclose the fact that for the six months ended on June 30 last, the average daily wage earned by the machinemen was 15s 10½d net, and for the following pay, which ended on July 5 last, the average per day was 13s 4d. On July 19 it was 17s 6½d and for the present pay 15s 8d. Mr. Watson says that the trouble at Pelaw Main with regard to machinemen's wages is the result of some of the men earning less than 12s 4d per day. One of the cases referred to is that of Miller and Miller, a pair of machinemen working in the No. 3 west district of the mine, whose average earnings each were 11s 0½ per day for the pay ended July 19, but, strangely enough, the other three parties working in exactly the same district earned 14s 7½d, 13s 4½d, and 16s 9d respectively per day. The machinemen who worked the previous quarter in Miller and Miller's place for the last pay of that quarter averaged over 16s per day. For the following pay ended the 2nd instant, Miller and Miller's average is 12s 10d per day, and the averages of the other three parties are 23s 2½d, 15s 5½d, and 17s 0½d respectively per day.

"Whilst on the subject of colliery disputes, can Mr. Watson explain why it is that since the Minmi men entered into an agreement with their employers nearly six months ago there has been no trouble at the mine? During this period the colliery has worked almost full time."

From October 12 to March 1 the Back Creek and Duckenfield collieries at Minmi worked 164 days out of a possible of 224 days, losing 60 days. The average earnings of the miners were 13s 11d and 15s 2d per day. Since the agreement has been entered into the pit has worked full time, with the exception of four days, and the average earnings have been 14s 6d and 16s. As the Minmi lodge has been expelled from the Colliery Employees' Federation the, have no longer the funds or levies to be paid to that federation."

MR. M'GOWEN AS MEDIATOR.

The Minister for Labour and Industry (Mr. J. S. T. M'Gowen) made the following statement last night in regard to the Northern Collieries difficulty:—

"On Wednesday I received a telegram from the Northern Colliery Employees' Association asking me if I would receive a deputation with regard to threatened trouble at the Pelaw Main colliery. I replied in the affirmative, and met four gentlemen, including the president of the association, yesterday afternoon. I learnt from them that such tension existed at the colliery because of the rates of machine men, shooters, and fillers, in deficiency places that a stoppage, involving some 800 men, would occur on Monday next.

"I satisfied myself at the interview that the dislocation could be averted if I, by the exercise of my statutory authority, referred the whole deficiency place question of the mine to the Board for the industry presided over by Mr. Justice Edmunds. It was plainly my duty to take that course, but I wished to give all the disputants an opportunity of proving some recognition of their duty to the community by making the same reference.

"The Employees' Association excused itself because of a resolution of the general body to the effect that no questions likely to delay the hearing of the small coal question should be referred by them to the board pending that hearing, and that such resolutions could not be modified within the time available, but it professed to be willing to accept the alternative of placing the dispute before a conciliation committee constituted under the Industrial Arbitration Act.

"I had just before hearing the deputation of Thursday received a telegram from the Proprietors' Association asking me not to move in the matter until I had heard it. I agreed to the request, and so informed the representatives of the employees when they were before me. I also caused a wire to be sent on Thursday to the Employers' Association notifying it that I would receive its deputation this afternoon.

"The secretary replied that the proprietors would be prepared to attend at 11.30 a.m. on Saturday morning. The situation was too critical to permit such a delay, and I caused a further wire to be sent to him this morning informing the association that I would receive its deputation at 7.30 this evening. This arrangement it declined by wire received by me after 6 o'clock to-night.

"I have now sent the proprietors the following telegram:—'Will proprietors agree to the constitution of a statutory conciliation committee. The action taken by the Minister this evening was to refer deficiency place dispute at Pelaw Main to board for industry. Minister is prepared to withdraw reference if parties will allow to be dealt with by conciliation committee.'

"What attitude Mr. John Brown, who is the proprietor immediately concerned will now adopt remains to be seen."

CIVIC BUSINESS.

ALDERMAN'S CHARGES AGAINST COUNCIL.

Some time ago Alderman Power, of Lane Cove, complained that the then chairman (Professor Peden) of the Greater Sydney commission would not allow him to offer evidence regarding the City Council's trading concerns. Last night the Commission sat at Parliament House, and Alderman Power was given the opportunity to say what he desired.

The Commission was presided over by the Lord Mayor (Alderman Cocks).

Alderman Power alleged that two plants were scrapped, arc lights were bought too dearly, and, generally, that there was bad business management. Arc lights that were to last 20 years only lasted six, and about three out of five of the lights were generally out. A large storage battery existed simply for the purpose of being filled during the day to boost the current at night. Other allegations were made.

To the Lord Mayor: He would not put his knowledge against that of the council's officers. His information was not based on reliable data.

Alderman O. E. Small, Mayor of Eastwood, said his council was unanimously opposed to the Greater Sydney scheme. Although opposed to the Greater Sydney scheme as at present proposed, he was not an opponent of a Greater Sydney as bounded by, say, Vaucluse on the South, round to Botany on the west, and Strathfield on the north, leaving out all municipalities and shires on the north of the harbour.

Alderman M'Elhone, of the City Council, completed evidence already given at an earlier sitting. Any scheme, he contended, should have control of public health, licensing of theatres, etc., auctioneers, motors, cabs, and vans. He considered that every tram car plying in the area should pay a tax of £1 per annum. The Tramway Department had never borne its fair proportion of taxation for the benefits derived from the use of the city streets. He drew attention to the English Act, which compelled the tramway authorities to keep 9ft 6in from the kerbline. There were only two satisfactory ways of dealing with main roads—(1) By means of a wheel tax; and (2) by means of tollbars. He was entirely against payment of aldermen.

CASUALTIES.

LITTLE GIRL WITH MATCHES.

Nora Camillus Callinan, 5, died from extensive burns in Sydney Hospital on August 2. At an inquest yesterday the City Coroner (Mr. Hawkins) found that the burns were accidentally received at her parents' residence, Market-street, Randwick, through her nightdress catching fire. The deceased was fond of playing with matches, and had taken some into the kitchen on the day of her death.

TAXI-CAB FATALITY.

The death in Sydney Hospital of William Mortimer, 69, formed the subject of an inquest at the City Coroner's Court yesterday. In evidence it was shown that at about 10.30 p.m. on July 24 the deceased was walking across Castlereagh-street, near Moore-street, when taxi-cab No. 263, driven by Stanley Elliott, approached, and its horn sounded. When the car was within 10 or 12 yards deceased stopped suddenly, and then stepped backward. Had he remained still, a witness opined, the taxi would have passed him. But he was struck in the back. The Coroner found that death, which was accidental, was accelerated by heart disease, following on the injuries sustained.

CHILD DRINKS TURPENTINE.

INVERELL, Friday.

Yesterday a child, aged 21 months, son of Mr. H. Blick, drank some turpentine from a cup which a house painter had been using, and died shortly afterwards.

A RABBITER INJURED.

GULGONG, Friday.

John Lyons, a rabbiter, was putting his horse into the cart, when the horse bolted, throwing Lyons down, dragging the cart over his chest, and breaking four ribs and injuring him internally. He was taken to the hospital.

BEACON TENDER DROWNED.

PERTH, Friday.

The body of Le Mesurier, a tender of beacon lights in the Swan, who has been missing for over a fortnight, was found in the river to-day near Applecross. Le Mesurier started out in a motor launch to overhaul the beacon lights. Subsequently the motor boat was found drifting empty. Le Mesurier's hat was found floating near the first beacon which had not been attended to. The presumption is that, in holding on to the beacon Le Mesurier was dragged overboard by the action of the current on his boat, and drowned.

On the day after leaving Sydney she met a strong north-easterly gale and a heavy beam sea. The weather was so thick that no observations were taken during the day. In spite of the weather conditions, the Niagara made splendid progress, and averaged 15.8 knots an hour. The weather was still stormy on the following day, and did not abate until shortly before the vessel arrived at Auckland. She was expected at Auckland at 11 p.m. on July 31, but did not arrive until early next morning.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The high pressure over the Tasman Sea has moved further north-eastward, and now extends from the North Island of New Zealand to Darwin, with its centre about Norfolk Island.

The Antarctic disturbance has moved northwards into the western portion of Queensland, but the disturbance, as a whole, has contracted slightly, and is not quite so energetic as on Thursday. The centre is still to the SW of Tasmania.

The high pressure, which was over Western Australia on Thursday, has gained considerably in energy, and is now centrally situated over the southern goldfields.

Fine weather should rule generally, with the exception of some showers in southern districts, while a cold change may be expected by Sunday.

Ocean Forecast.—North-west to South-west gales, and rough seas from the Bight eastward.

STATE PARLIAMENT.

A LATE SITTING.

The Legislative Assembly sat from 4.30 p.m. on Thursday till 3.20 a.m. yesterday. The Railway Appeal Board Bill was further considered in committee of the whole.

On clause 2, which makes provision for the appointment of a stipendiary or special magistrate as chairman, Mr. Hollis moved that the word "stipendiary" be struck out. The amendment was negatived by 34 to 18.

At the instance of the Treasurer, it was resolved that "police" be substituted for "special" magistrate.

Mr. Meagher moved that the chairman be appointed for a term of three years. This was carried.

When the report of the committee was presented, Mr. Crawford moved the recommittal so as to provide that the chairman of the board might be a barrister of not less than five years' standing. The motion for recommittal was negatived, and the report adopted, the third reading being made an order for Tuesday next.

PUBLIC TRUSTEE BILL.
DISCUSSION IN COMMITTEE.

The Public Trustee Bill, which had been restored to the paper at the committee stage it had reached the previous session, was further considered in committee.

It appeared, from a statement made by Mr. Cohen, that an understanding had been arrived at between the Government and the Opposition, that only the more or less formal machinery clauses should be dealt with at the sitting. It was pointed out by Mr. Cohen that the bill—an important one, trenching upon a domain now occupied by private enterprise—had been rushed through during last session without adequate discussion as to its principles. The bill was made up of provisions copied from Acts in various countries, and he contended that it was full of anomalies.

On the motion of the Premier, it was resolved that the Act be brought into operation on January 1 next.

Clauses 1 to 10 were passed, a technical amendment being made in clause 8.

Consideration of clauses 11 to 18, 22 to 44, and 46 to 53, which were regarded as controversial, was postponed.

Clauses 57, 60, and 62 were allowed to stand over. The remaining clauses were agreed to.

Progress was reported, and the House rose at 3.20 a.m.

NEWCASTLE.

COAL TRADE BRISK.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The coal trade was brisk this week. The total quantity for export was 117,868 tons, of which 68,868 tons were for the Commonwealth and New Zealand ports, and 48,973 tons for oversea ports.

HEAVY COAL SHIPMENT.

The steamer Knight of the Garter left the port to-day with a total quantity of 10,379 tons of coal for Valparaiso. The vessel was drawing 26ft 4in, which is 2in less than she would draw if loaded to her full capacity. Her agents state that if she had been loaded to the full she could have taken 100 tons more, but that was considered inadvisable, on account of the depth of water on the bar with the present tides. On December 7 last the same vessel cleared the Newcastle Customs with a total quantity of 10,429 tons coal. The tides at that time, however, were very high.

The loading operations commenced at 7.40 a.m. on Monday morning, and at 2.20 p.m. on Thursday the vessel received her last truck of coal. Although the quantity taken by the Knight of the Garter is very large, it is not a record, as on January 7 last the steamer Drachenfels cleared the Customs with 10,652 tons coal.

FINANCIAL.

RATIONALE OF PROBATE DUTIES.

MODIFIED BY INSURANCE.

A TAX ON CAPITAL.

Probate duties in their present form are of comparatively modern origin though their forbears, viz., inheritance taxes, were known to the Romans. In the beginning of the Empire these contributed a 20th part of their inheritance for the purpose of providing pensions for the soldiery. Later on in Feudal times the "heriot" was a tax imposed upon the overlord for the privilege of inheriting his lands. In some countries the equivalent of probate duties takes the form of charges on transfers. In England and in Australia the underlying conception of probate duties is that they are something paid for the privilege of having the will proved or the letters of administration granted. In democratic countries, too, there is a certain jealousy of large fortunes and a feeling that the burden falls lightly upon those who have never earned the money, or property, which is usually expressed in money value. There are, however, three outstanding objections on principle to probate duties, one being that they are a tax on capital and not on income. In our present social system every encouragement should be given to individuals to accumulate capital. Even the socialist must realise that capital is essential to the furtherance of socialistic enterprises. Our own State brickworks would have been impossible had not someone first saved the capital consumed in their construction. But when the Government collects probate duties it regards the proceeds not as capital as it should logically do, but as income, and disburses it on the ordinary expenditure of government. Instead of doing this it should continue to treat this money as capital, and get a permanent asset with it.

The second objection is that if they are unduly heavy, probate duties discourage thrift, which is the foundation of our national well-being. The third objection is that they are a temptation to evasion by way of gifts made a sufficient time before death to avoid the tax. This is, however, sometimes a risky proceeding as is shown in a South Australian case in which an old man about 90 years of age made a gift of all his property to his son, aged about 65. The son predeceased the father, who then had the pleasure of paying the tax in his own life-time with his own money. Of course, there is also the risk that King Lear ran:—

To have a thankless child.

Many years ago now Jeremy Bentham advocated the escheat of the whole of inheritances, or, rather, of the estates of certain deceased persons, to the Crown. His idea was that intestate succession should be abolished, except in the case of near relatives; this on the ground that if there was no expectation there would be no burden. He also claimed that even where there was a will, and the beneficiaries were merely grandparents, uncles, or aunts, the State should take half. On principle there would seem to be no great objection to this, if only the State would regard the proceeds as capital, and not as income.

In England recently Mr. Lloyd George propounded the idea that probate duties should be made a tax on the residuary legatee. In reply to a memorial from the council of the British Hospitals Associations, asking that bequests to hospitals should be freed from legacy duty, Mr. Lloyd George, while expressing his inability to accede to the request, made the suggestion that testators should shift the burden of the duty to the residuary legatee by directing that their hospital legacies should be paid free of duty. He has already been mildly rebuked for this conception of the incidence of the tax. The death duties (and this term comprises not only estate duty, but also legacy and succession duty) are a tax, not on the residuary or other legatees, but on the testator himself. He knows that they will be levied, and if he does not provide for them in his lifetime—well, he has simply so much the less to leave to his successors at his death. A better suggestion than that of the Chancellor of the Exchequer is, therefore, that a testator, instead of shifting the burden to the residuary legatee, should take it on himself by providing out of his annual income the necessary premium for a policy of life insurance to cover the duties, and thus be able to leave the whole of his existing capital, no matter how soon his death may occur, free of duty.

This method is also to be commended from the point of view that, were there no facilities for life insurance, the tax is, in effect, a gamble in which each individual is forced to participate. It is no gamble for the State, for, by the law of average, the yield of some £300,000 or so a year is secure, although there may be a slight annual fluctuation one way or the other, but for the individuals comprising the State the incidence of the tax is one of pure chance, seeing that in one case, owing to the untimely death of the successor to an estate, the duty may become leviable in its entirety on the same property twice in the same year, while in another case half a century or more may elapse before the property bequeathed again becomes subject to the duty. It would be hard to justify this lottery element involved in the tax were it not that it could be counteracted by means of insurance.

A whole life without profit policy is regarded as the most suitable form of insurance where the estate is sufficiently large to yield an income adequate for all needs, and the testator's object is to pass on the estate, as he received it, intact to his successors. In cases such as this the magnitude of the duties alone is usually sufficient to call attention to the pressing need for insurance if the estate is to be preserved from depreciation. In the case of an estate of £100,000, for instance, the minimum amount of duty would be about £10,000, and this could be provided by an annual outlay of about £260 at age of 40 or £375 at age 50 by way of premiums on a non-profit whole life policy.

There are also, however, the multitude of more moderate estates, where the matter is more often than not left to look after itself. The head of a family may be possessed of a certain amount of property which he proposes to leave to his wife and children, and which he is very desirous of seeing increased, and it may be that by living well within his means he is able to put by a sum each year out of his income for this purpose. Realising that the loss of his future earning power entailed by his early death would make all the difference to the comfort of those for whom he wishes to provide, he may have effected an assurance for provident purposes, but even this is usually based on all too modest valuation of his future capabilities, and the fact that an increase is desirable for the express purpose of providing for the duties is overlooked. In cases such as this a with profit policy is not without its advantages, seeing that the initial sum assured provides the duties on the property already held, while the annual increase by way of bonus provides the duties on the annual accretions to the estate.

In this State the following rates are now payable on the estate of a deceased person after the deduction of all debts:—Up to £1000 nil, above £1000 and up to £5000 2 per cent., then up to £6000 3 per cent., then increasing one-fifth per cent. for each thousand up to £10,000, for each £2000 up to £40,000, and for each £4000 up to £100,000, above £100,000 being at the rate of 10 per cent. Property left by the deceased to his widow or children is subject to half the foregoing rates if the total value of the estate after the deduction of all debts does not exceed £50,000.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

All round there was a better demand for oil yesterday, and sales to painters and distributers were frequent. Linseed oil, however, was easy, in spite of the London market having firmed up again to the quotation of the previous week as reported yesterday. An attempt was made to buy up the market, but it was not successful. Apparently the price at which oil was offered was not sufficiently tempting. Transactions included 2000 drums of Blundell, Spence's raw oil at 3/5½, which is 2d below what it could be landed on to-day's quotation for prompt shipment. Thistle oil was also up a halfpenny. The increase in the English quotation of pig lead strengthened considerably the local market in whitelead, and at the same time set afoot many inquiries for that article. About 11 tons of assorted kinds was obtained, Champion's at £37, and Walker Parker's at £35/10/. Stocks of turpentine were not so heavy, and the cutting observable last week was no longer in evidence. For Pinetree parcels were quoted at 2/9. Copra in bags was quoted at £26 to £27/2/6 per ton f.o.b export ship, according to grade.

A somewhat brighter business was also done in metal. Manufacturers' cables reported an advance of 1½d per box in the price of tin plates, and this was the cause of many inquiries for that article. Holders, however, were firm. Fair sales of wire black and galvanised, and of wire-netting were also made. Cement was steady at 14/6 for ordinary brands.

In chemical lines business showed a commencement for the summer trade in cream of tartar. Transactions included a sale of three tons. For ton lots /9¾ was quoted strong. Sales of citric acid were made at 1/10 for ton lots on spot. For lots to arrive importers refused to quote, as the market abroad showed a rising tendency. In distributing lots 2/ was asked. Rosin both on spot and to arrive was easy at late rates.

An active inquiry was noticed for tea, especially for export, and on this account a moderate business was done. Fair sales were made for home consumption, including one line of 150 packages of Ceylons up to /10. The market was strong for all classes, and there was more disposition to operate at the higher prices than was noticed in the earlier part of the week.

In branbags there was a lack of business because buyers considered that quotations by holders were too high. Up to yesterday no sales were made of spot lots at the holders' asking price of 6/3. Of shipments October to December there was a sale at 6/1 slings, but buyers in the majority of cases were content to offer not more than 6/ slings. For those months Calcutta quoted 6/0½ c.i.f. There were buyers of January to June shipments at 5/9 slings. This was on a Calcutta quotation of 5/11 c.i.f. In cornsacks sales were made of season's delivery at 6/8 net on rails. Calcutta quoted 6/5½ c.i.f. for August-September shipments, and 6/5¾ c.i.f. for September-October shipments. For spot lots the island trade was buying at 7/1½ to 7/2. Woolpacks were dull at 2/7 to 2/7½ for trade lots. Parcels were available at 2/6½.

LINSEED OIL PROSPECTS.

The cause of the weakness of linseed oil is the large shipments of linseed made by all countries compared with small shipments in the three previous years. These large shipments have been due principally to heavy exports from Argentina and North America. From India, Russia, and the Danubian States there has been a considerable decrease. According to a table published by "Beerbohm," shipments to Europe from January to June this year, and for the preceding 10 years, also shipments July to December during the years 1903-1912, and the spot price of Calcutta received on July 1, were:—

Year.	Total to June 30. Qrs.	Total shipments July to Dec. Qrs.	Total for the year. Qrs.	Spot price of Calcutta. July 1.
1912	3,037,500	2,727,500	5,765,000	60/
1911	2,790,000	2,262,000	5,052,000	67/3
1910	3,505,000	1,783,000	5,288,000	57/
1909	4,625,000	2,142,000	6,767,000	47/
1908	4,910,000	2,601,000	7,511,000	43/
1907	4,650,000	2,627,000	7,277,000	44/9
1906	2,926,500	2,819,000	5,745,000	40/9
1905	3,600,000	2,324,000	5,957,000	41/
1904	5,162,000	2,906,000	8,068,000	37/9
1903	3,732,500	2,679,500	6,412,000	36/9

It will be seen by the figures printed above that the exports in the first six months this year have been within 500,000qrs. of the total shipments for the whole of last year, and have been the largest on record. With regard to the exports during the second half of 1913, the probability is that they will amount to about 750,000 tons or, say, 4,000,000qrs. The Argentine has exported 720,000 tons, and the surplus still remaining will probably bring the total shipments for the year up to fully 1,000,000 tons, especially if prospects for the next crop continue favourable. India has only shipped 122,000 tons, and there is a good quantity still to come forward from the 1913 crop, apart from the large reserves remaining from the 1912 harvest. According to private estimates there were fully 100,000 tons old seed left in India at the commencement of the present season, but the extent of the shipments for the rest of this year will depend very much on the price obtainable. Canada has exported from the last crop 172,000 tons, of which 53,000 tons were shipped before January 1, and 119,000 tons this year. It is expected that there will be fully 200,000 tons more exported between July 1 and the end of the year, whilst if the next crop in North America prove to be a fairly good one, even this quantity may be exceeded. In Russia prospects are favourable for an average yield, and from this country and sundries, including China, probably nearly 100,000 tons will be shipped. Bearing these figures in mind, the reason why oil has fallen from 5/6 two years ago to 3/6 per gallon is plain.

THE FALL IN SPELTER.

The fall in spelter from £26/10/ to £20/10/ per ton is due, not to any decrease in consumption, which, if anything, is increasing slowly, but to the additions to production. That is the opinion of the "Financier," which points out that the position of affairs from the producers point of view is anything but satisfactory. Indeed, were not the industry in strong hands and under wonderfully complete control as regards marketing, the position would be somewhat alarming. The outlook raises the possibility of at least two alternatives, both of an unpleasant character. Assuming that the consumption, and consequently the demand, during the next few months remains virtually on the same scale as at present, it will mean that if production has still proceeded without check stocks will have reached most unmanageable and undesirable proportions. That, as a matter of course, will mean that prices will have fallen heavily, and that at least some of the important producers will have to close down for a while, or drastically reduce their output. The depression in prices has already brought down profits to a point which places some of the producing concerns in a tight corner, with quite a small margin of net gain. The question of whether the prices are to be permitted to fall until a cessation of production is absolutely forced as the only alternative to losing money, or whether an arrangement can be arrived at for simultaneously reducing the output all round so as to avoid a further accumulation of stocks, will have to be decided. One of the complications with respect to spelter is the transitional character of the processes which are now carried on. The operations differ more or less widely in almost every plant, even irrespective of the different descriptions of ore that is treated. It follows that the percentage of net profits earned are also widely different, and it would seem to be a matter of very considerable delicacy and difficulty to arrive at any general agreement which shall be applicable alike to technical variations and geographical differences.

BREADSTUFFS.

A DULL MARKET.

The wheat market was without life yesterday. There was practically no demand, all near commitments having been practically filled. In these circumstances, buyers would not pay more than 3/7½ at the utmost for f.a.q. wheat, although for hard western grain they would go another farthing. Sellers were offering f.a.q. grain freely at 3/7½. The quotation for growers' lots was unchanged, country prices in the stacks 3/2 to 3/3, equivalent prices ex trucks Sydney being 3/6½ to 3/7½. London was cabled as dull. Reports from Russia stated that the weather was less favourable. This, however, may have applied to only one district out of the immense wheat areas of that Empire. Business was done at Liverpool in a July parcel from South Australia at 36/4½ per quarter of 480lb.

Flour was quiet at the association quotation of £8/15/ for bakers' lots delivered.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 1794 tons of wheat and 134 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

CASE EGGS CHEAPER.

The quotation for case eggs was reduced fully 1d per dozen yesterday. Supplies were heavy, and agents were forced to give the concession in order to clear. River consignments were sold at from /10 to /10½, and railways at from /10½ to /11. A few small parcels of Brisbane eggs were available at /10½ and /11 per dozen. Arrivals per coaster included 160 cases from the Clarence, and 60 cases from the Richmond.

Advices from Melbourne indicated that the butter market in that centre was dull. There was some difficulty in securing freight space for Western Australia. Apart from the Kapunda, which was expected to take about 200 boxes on the 16th instant, there was no refrigerator space available before August 20. In the meantime the Victorian output was increasing. On spot stored butter was well in evidence. Choicest brands of fresh butter were firm at 118/ per cwt. delivered.

"I am afraid we will have to reduce the price of prime loaf cheese to /6½ per lb on Monday," said the salesman of one of the big companies. "Sales are exceptionally dull," he continued, "and we are at our wits' ends what to do with the stuff. Every cellar in 'the street' is 'chock-a-block.' To-day we are asking /7, but I have only booked a few small orders."

UP-TO-DATE MARKETING.

ACTION BY UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

It is announced that the United States Department of Agriculture will shortly commence a thorough study of what happens to produce from the time it leaves the producer until it reaches the consumer. A specialist on marketing perishable produce will investigate prices received by producers, cost of transportation and storage, change of ownership, accumulated charges, profits, and other elements. This specialist will then study conditions in various sections, to determine the feasibility of a market news service, dealing with perishable products, and also the best method of compiling statistics.

Other specialists will give attention to studying co-operative organisations of producers and consumers, including co-operative marketing associations of farmers and buyers, and co-operative stores. They will study special products, and will assist in the formation of new co-operative enterprises. An expert in co-operative accounts will assist such organisations to keep their books and records effectively, establish cost systems, and follow up methods of handling goods en route and on sale.

Co-operating with their investigators will be specialists in transportation, who will assist producers to secure proper freight rates. They will also attend to matters concerned with the speedy and cheap moving of produce to centres of wholesale and retail demands.

There was no change in potatoes. The Victorian steamer landed 1100 bags. Onions were fractionally easier. Prime Brown Spanish were to be had at from £7/15/ to £8 per ton. Fresh consignments totalling 200 bags were made available.

CHAFF FIRMER.

More than usual of the better class of wheaten chaff made its appearance at the Railway Markets yesterday, and its sale was responsible for some spirited bidding. Yesterday a fire occurred at the Women's Painters' Exhibition, at Lawson House, Clarence-street.

At about 3.20 p.m. a kerosene lamp was upset, immediately at the back of an oil-painting intended for decorative purposes. The picture is by Miss Ruby Winckler. The flames shot into the air, and caught the canvas. It was soon extinguished, but not before the centre of the picture was burnt.

The damaged fresco is insured for £198.

MINING.

MARKET SLIGHTLY MORE ACTIVE.

COPPER STOCKS IN DEMAND.

BARRIERS AND ARDLETHAN QUIET.

Taken full and by the cabled information received yesterday morning with regard to the London Stock Exchange and metal markets on Thursday, was of a fairly satisfactory character. True, the share quotations were not generally on the firm side, but the slight signs of weakness shown in a few instances were more than counterbalanced by firmer rates quoted in others.

Thus, whilst a fractional easiness was shown in the case of Broken Hill Proprietary, British Broken Hills (old), Broken Hill North, and Broken Hill Block 10, a decided improvement was shown, on the other hand, in the case of Mount Elliotts and Great Cobars, with a firmer note sounded in the case of Amalgamated Zinc, Zinc Corporation (both ordinary and preferential), and Hampden-Cloncurry. Mount Morgans and Mount Lyells held a firm position.

The firmness of the London market for copper stocks was attributed to a rise of 15/, bringing the price of the red metal to £68/2/6, whilst the advance of 12/1½ in Mount Elliotts is said to have been due to solid buying operations in Paris. Anyhow, the local market was largely concerned with copper stocks, and for once in a while that section dominated the position.

Thus, in the business recorded, Mount Lyells moved from 24/3 to 24/9; Mount Elliotts from £5/6/3 to £5/14/; and Hampdens from 42/7½ to 42/9; whilst Mount Morgans held a firm position, with sales at 71/1½, and Lloyd Copper at 5/4. A sale of Oxide Creek was reported at £11. There were buyers of Mount Oxide Options at £41/10/, an advance of £2 on the previous day's business, but sellers held firmly for £43.

As regards business, Barriers were slack, only two stocks being dealt in—British Broken Hill (old) at 40/, being a fraction easier, whilst Broken Hill Junction North was unaltered at 15/4½. Advanced offers for Broken Hill Souths (paid) failed to draw sellers, who quoted very wide, but the contributing scrip did not participate in this buoyancy.

Solid offers were also made for Amalgamated Zinc, Broken Hill Proprietary, Broken Hill Block 10, Zinc Corporation, and Sulphide Corporation, but business was blocked in some cases by sellers quoting wide, and in others by not declaring themselves.

In the gold division, Black Range West was supported at firm rates. The tin group was represented by firm sales in Tongkah Compound with Tongkah Harbour also commanding steady offers.

In the Ardlethan group, Carpathia (con.) commanded firm support, with the result that values firmed on the previous day's closing market. Ardlethan Options also sold steady, the same being the case with Wild Cherry.

Some quiet buying of Mount Oxide Options early in the afternoon at hardening rates, put operators on the qui vive, and it was then learned that the terms of the sale of the mine to a group of London financiers had been completed on satisfactory terms. The effect was to send the price of the shares from £39/10/ to £42/5/, and £42, on terms. Wallaroo and Moonta commanded firm support, with sales at 42/9. An equally solid market ruled in the case of Mount Morgan and Hampdens, whilst firm offers for Mount Elliotts failed to draw sellers.

With the exception of Ardlethan stocks, the other sections of the market were rather quiet.

MINING NOTES.

The Associated Gold Dredging Company reports a yield of 44oz of gold for a run of 127 hours.

The plant of the Araluen Redbank Company, in a run of 120 hours, obtained 45ozs 5dwts of gold, and that of the Araluen Central Company 9oz 3dwt in 118 hours.

The Bourke's Hill Tin Sluicing Company has declared a dividend of 6d per share, payable on August 26.

The Broken Hill Proprietary Company, Limited, has received a cable message, dated London, August 7, giving the following quotations:—Silver, 2/3½ (official quotation); lead £20/15/ (buyers' price); Company's shares, £1/14/9 (buyers' price); spelter, £20/10/ (buyers' price); and copper, £68/2/6 (buyers' price).

The shaft of the Tyrconnell gold mines has been sunk to 212ft. The water is heavy. The manager had opened out at 152ft, and commenced cross-cutting for the reef. The battery is finished, but a few details are still to be made before the plant is complete.

The Victorian gold yield for July was 36,900oz gross, or 34,639oz fine, valued at £147,137. Compared with yield for July of last year, there has been an increase of 759oz fine. The yield for the last seven months was 266,941oz gross, or 247,775oz fine, valued at £1,051,576. This shows a decrease of 14,250oz fine, compared with the quantity won during the corresponding period of 1912.

The manager of the Block 9 (Mineral Hill), Ltd., reports for fortnight ended August 2:—Sunk No. 1 east winze 20ft, total 88ft, lode at bottom 6ft wide, showing lead and copper carbonates with veins and bunches of red and black oxide of copper running through it. Assay taken across 5ft at 85ft deep gave lead 3.2 per cent., silver 6.53oz, gold nil, copper 12.73.

The Chillagoe, Limited, reports that the railway receipts for the month of July amount to £10,981, and for the four months of the financial year ending July 31 to £35,278. For the corresponding periods of the previous year the respective amounts were £8724 and £34,120.

MOUNT OXIDE COPPER MINE.

SOLD TO LONDON FINANCIERS.

COMPANY OF £500,000 TO BE FORMED.

It was learned from an authoritative source in the Sydney Stock Exchange yesterday, that negotiations have been completed on satisfactory terms for the sale of the Mount Oxide copper mine to a group of London financiers, consisting of the Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, the leading members of which are Mr. Edmund Davis, and Messrs. Lionel Robertson and Clark.

It was also learned that one of the Sydney directors of the Mount Oxide, Limited, is at present in Brisbane interviewing the Premier of that State, with a view of making arrangements for the extension of the Mount Cuthbert railway to the Mount Oxide copper mine. In connection with this work, it is said there will be a large debenture issue.

The negotiations with the London financiers provide for the formation of a company of 500,000 shares, with a capital of £500,000.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. J. E. Cocker, secretary, last evening received the following telegram from the manager of the Mount Oxide mine:—"152ft level: Crosscut west at 205ft exposes 3ft glance estimated at 45 per cent. value. Full width not exposed. Entirely new make underlying west."

MINING IN THE STATE.

BARMEDMAN, Friday.

The Carpathia Tin-mining Company battery was given a trial run to-day, and it is expected that next week active crushing operations will be in full swing.

B.H. BLOCK 10 MINE.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

On the Block 10 mine the development which is supposedly the following up of the Central mine occurrence at the No. 5 level is showing up well. The general manager, Mr. O. B. Ward, reported this afternoon that the south drive on the lode recently met with was extended 14ft through the lode, assaying over the full width of drive 3.1oz silver, 14.6 per cent. lead, and 10.2 per cent. zinc. The drive has been stripped to the hanging wall, exposing the full width of the lode 13ft between walls, assaying 3.4 oz silver, 12 per cent. lead, and 7.5 per cent. zinc.

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN MINES.

KALGOORLIE, Friday.

The July output of the Commodore was 889 tons for gold, valued at £940. The expenditure was £1140. The accumulated slimes amounted to 430 tons, assaying 12/6 per ton.

The Kalgurli Company treated 10,985 tons for gold valued at £22,100. The expenditure was £12,684.

The Ida H. treated 1428 tons gold, worth £4811. The expenditure was £3178.

ADELETHAN OPTIONS, LIMITED.

The managing director reports:—

Ardlethan Group.—Shaft sunk 45 feet by contract in tin-bearing kaolin of milling grade, when contractors ceased work at the order of the union presumably because 10 per cent. off progress payments was as usual deducted. Now employing same men on wages.

Lone Hand.—Crosscut from main shaft now out 26ft, proving the lode for 25ft and still in ore. Started to crosscut the ore body from the other shaft at 50ft. When these crosscuts are through the lode they will be sampled in sections. Another ore body has been located three chains north of the main shaft exposed for 8ft on the footwall, followed by a depth of 10ft carrying milling grade ore, the tin being finely disseminated throughout as in other deposits. This will also be sampled when more work is done.

Bygoo Group.—The rich ore in the bottom of the irregular shaft on Dumbrell's lease cut out. Started to follow two seams of high-grade ore found below the 7ft break, and after firing several times, these opened out into 3ft 6in of ore, nearly half of which is bagging grade, the balance milling ore. The new shaft west is down 20ft, exposing good grade milling ore, a small part of which is bagged. Other deposits of 2 per cent. to 5 per cent. have been located. Our present policy is to look for, work, and bag high-grade tinstone, of which we have some 700 bags and some tons awaiting bags.

Corner's Block.—Shaft sunk in ore 36ft, and have now started driving both ways to find out length and value of ore channel. On this property we have exposed, and at grass, a fairly large tonnage of 3 per cent. and 4 per cent. milling ore, and about 40 tons of 10 per cent. and 20 per cent. grade.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Metropolitan racegoers were catered for this afternoon at Rosehill, while those who prefer to go further afield can have the day's outing at Newcastle, where the local club opens its August reunion at Broadmeadow. The V.A.T.C. Steeplechase meeting will be brought to a close at Caulfield, and at Ascot the Queensland Turf Club's Winter meeting commences, while the Gawler Jockey Club provides a day's sport for South Australian racegoers.

The Victoria Park Racing Club has postponed its pony and galloway fixture of to-day until Monday next, owing to some alterations to drains, necessitated by the late rainfall.

The two days' meeting of the Newcastle Jockey's Club's August meeting opens to-day on the well-appointed Broadmeadow Racecourse, and metropolitan sportsmen intending to assist can reach the scene of operations in ample time by any of the trains starting from the Central Railway Station at 6.45, 7.55, and 9.10 a.m., while a special tram service runs between the Newcastle Railway Station and the racecourse gates. A highly interesting programme will be played out, and Sydney visitors can return the same evening by the trains leaving for the south at 5.20 and 6.50 p.m.

The next fixture of the Kembla Grange Racing Club is for the 19th inst., and the six events on the card carry in the aggregate £270 prize-money, of which £50 each endows the Kembla Handicap, Grange Stakes, Jumpers' Flat Race, and Lake Welter. Nominations must be lodged with the secretary, Mr. A. H. Hart, before 4 p.m. on Monday next.

The scratchings notified yesterday in connection with the Rosehill First August Meeting were Salarino, out of the Rosehill Handicap; Speedfast, Gibbergunyah, Webimble, and Angelique, out of all engagements; Iona out of the Hurdle Race; and Collaral out of the Maiden Handicap.

Wee Waa Oddfellows and Hospital Benefit Race Meeting, to be held on October 8, 9, and 10, has been granted registration by the A.J.C.

Career's Daughter was yesterday struck out of the A.J.C. Epsom Handicap and The Metropolitan.

Messrs. Wm. Inglis and Son announce that in addition to the brood mare Martinique and her untried sons, in the estate of the late Sir A. A. Apcar, the well-known Indian sportsman, they will offer for sale at their bazaar, Pitt-street, on Monday, at noon, the racehorses Lucille, Willie D., Pilot, Santa Fe, Admiral Lad, Noble Friar, and a couple of fillies by Moorefield.

The card for the Moorefield second August meeting is announced, and for the half-dozen items the sum of £600 prize-money has been provided, equally distributed. Entries close with the secretary, Mr. J. Lamrock, at 4 p.m. on Monday, the 18th instant.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphs that Lord Walla has been sold to Mr. N. Falkiner, and will in future be trained by James Scobie.

V.A.T.C. SCRATCHINGS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The following scratchings were recorded to-day for to-morrow's Caulfield races:—
Arkaringa Hurdle: Warwidgerie.
Knowsley Steeplechase: Priamer and Myers.

ROSEHILL RACING CLUB.

FIRST AUGUST MEETING.

ANTICIPATIONS.

The first August meeting of the Rosehill Racing Club provides what promises to be an interesting and pleasant outing for racegoers to-day, for there is every indication of favourable weather, and, with a large number of candidates for the big events of the spring out under silk, the racing cannot fail to engage more than ordinary attention. The late favourable weather has improved the going, which is reported to be first-class, and the surroundings display the advent of spring. The management has made due provision for the requirements of a large assemblage in both reserves. The transit arrangements by rail include special trains starting from the Central Railway Station at 11.22 a.m. (horses and attendants), 11.53 a.m., 12.7, 12.22, 12.40, 12.51, 12.56, 1.8, 1.20, and 1.27 p.m., the 11.53 a.m., 12.51 and 1.8 p.m. stopping at Strathfield to pick up passengers. Combined tickets for the grandstand enclosure on the St. Leger reserve can be purchased at the Central Booking Office, Challis House, Martin-place, before leaving the city, and thus avoid the crush at the Railway Station. The first race is timed to start at 2.10 p.m.

The sport commences with the Hurdle Race, in which Floating, Oxley, and Wadden may occupy the places. Null, Kirribilli, and Career's Daughter may get home as named in the Maiden Handicap; and Zinita, Careel, and Torula may pass the judge in that order for the Auburn Handicap. Blast, Pittsworth Gun, and Woolerina may divide the honours in the Highweight Handicap. Firm, Irish Figure, and Sequarious may fill the situations in the Rosehill Handicap; while Miss T., War Star, and Expedite may claim the attention of the judge in the Parramatta Mile.

The programme is appended:—

VICTORIA AMATEUR TURF CLUB.

AUSTRALIAN STEEPLECHASE MEETING.

ANTICIPATIONS.

The Australian Steeplechase Meeting of the Victoria Amateur Turf Club will be brought to a close at Caulfield this afternoon, and a very interesting bill of fare is down for discussion. The sport opens with the Arkaringa Hurdle Race, in which the places may go to Ballista, Hispan, and Reigle, while Wimmera, Yandilla King, and Yuranigh's Daughter may claim the attention of the judge for the Chatsworth Corinthian.

A good contest may be anticipated for the Australian Steeplechase. Bullawarra heads the list with 12st 11lb, and even with that steadying burden he may be trusted to run a great horse. Leah Kleshna, with 10lb less, reads more attractively, and she must be very hard to beat. United Kingdom should run well under 11st 1lb, and, on the same mark, Big Bob should have a say in the settlement of affairs. Vanguard and Clontaft have not been overrated at their respective weights, while of the others the prospects of The Miser and Statecraft seem the brightest. The most likely to be in the fighting line at the end of the long, tiring journey are Bullawarra, Leah Kleshna, United Kingdom, Big Bob, The Miser, and Statecraft, and the numbers may be hoisted for Leah Kleshna, The Miser, and United Kingdom, unless separated by Statecraft.

Captain White, Mala, and Pearl King may divide the honours in the Malakoff Stakes; the places in the Knowsley Steeplechase may be filled by Scrutineer, Zephuron, and Tinto, while Earl Godwin, Abdicator, and Lord Walla may pass the post as named for the St. Aubin Welter.

COURSING.

CHAMPION CUP MEETING.

In to-day's issue the secretary of the N.S.W. National Coursing Association advertises the programme for the champion cup meeting to be held at Woodstock Enclosure, Rooty Hill, on Thursday and Friday next.

Good entries have been received. The Bracelet Stakes for 32, all ages, that have not received more than £3 3s in any one stake is over-subscribed, as also is the Rooty Hill Stakes.

Mr. Lamb advises that he has had a good supply of well-trained hares on the enclosure, and, given fine weather, a successful meeting is assured.

A special train will leave Sydney each morning at 10 o'clock, returning from Rooty Hill at 5.5 p.m.

FOOTBALL.

INTERSTATE RUGBY.

N.S.W. v QUEENSLAND.

TO-DAY'S MATCH.

The last interstate fixture of the season will be played at the University Oval this afternoon. The visitors have been twice beaten in Sydney, but the local men put up two exceptionally brilliant performances. The State team defeated the visitors by 26 points to 6, and the second fifteen of New South Wales were victorious by 24 points to 12. The home side to-day will take the field without Dwyer, Jones, and Suttor, but the players who will replace them have shown such good form that the standard has not been reduced, and it is expected that the side will show equally as good football as that of last week.

The Queenslanders on the other hand have had five days in which to work up a combination, and, under the astute coaching of Mr. Austin Gralton, together with a knowledge of the other side's strong points, the margin in the scores should not be so big. The form displayed by the visitors last Saturday was not that which won their two matches at Brisbane, but strenuous efforts will be made to win to-day's contest. Eighteen of the Australian team selected to visit New Zealand will play in the match.

The teams are:—

QUEENSLAND.	N. S. WALES.

Carroll (Chart. Towers).	Cooney (Manly).
Three-quarters:

H. Flynn (Brisbane).	Walters (Glebe).

RUGBY LEAGUE.

TO-DAY'S BIG CLUB GAME.

Will Eastern Suburbs, with their thoroughly well-balanced side, enhance their already brilliant record at the expense of South Sydney, and thus make their position at the head of the competition table unassailable? This query has formed the topic of conversation in League circles the week past, and in looking for a solution the public should contribute a record gate at the Sydney Cricket Ground, so keen is the interest in the meeting of these old rivals in the penultimate round of the premiership. In the initial round South Sydney were soundly beaten by 12 points to nil; but in their present brilliant mood they command more respect than is reflected by these very convincing figures. Butler and his comrades look very favourably on their task of reversing the old scores this afternoon. Although great respect must be entertained for the prowess of the Eastern side, a close scrutiny of recent form shows that the South Sydney combination will put up a great fight. Messenger and his men should find their adversaries at their best, and that means a great difference from the form displayed in the previous encounter.

Though public interest will be largely centred on the "star" fixture of the day, the meeting between Newtown and Glebe at Erskineville Oval promises a good fast game. In the first round Newtown won by 7 points to 3. Western Suburbs and Annandale should provide a good even contest at Wentworth Park; both clubs are equal in points, at the bottom of the competition. In the previous meeting Western Suburbs conquered by 11 points to 6 and their forwards' aggressiveness should again prove successful. The remaining match is at North Sydney, where Balmain and the local team will meet. A draw was the only reward for their combined efforts in the opening round; but with Banikwell an absentee from the Balmain vanguard, the Northerners will probably get more of the ball.

Attention is drawn to the Rugby League's advertisement, calling tenders for the supply of premiership medals for the year. Last year the League paid nearly £300 for medals.

H. Horder and C. Challis have been chosen to replace A. Broomham and C. Fraser in the team for New Zealand. Other vacancies will be filled to-night.

Following is the list of the grade fixtures:—

First Grade.

Newtown v Glebe, Erskineville Oval, 3.15 (C. Hedley); Western Suburbs v Annandale, Wentworth Park, 3.15 (H. Millington); South Sydney v Eastern Suburbs, Cricket Ground, 3.15 (T. McMahon); North Sydney v Balmain, North Sydney Oval, 3.15 (E. Shaw).

Second Grade.

Grosvenor v Balmain, North Sydney Oval, 2 p.m. (S. Brown); South Sydney v Glebe, Erskineville Oval, 2 p.m. (L. Hansen).

Third Grade.

S. S. Federal v South Sydney, Sydney Cricket Ground No. 2, 2 p.m. (A. Ballerum); S. S. Kinkora v Eastern Suburbs, Sydney Cricket Ground No. 2, 3.15 (J. Buchanan).

President's Cup Competition Final.

Eastern Suburbs v South Sydney, Cricket Ground, 2 p.m. (A. Farrow).

AUSTRALIAN.

LEAGUE SEMI-FINAL.

The second round—semi-final games—of the League premiership matches will commence to-day, when Paddington and Newtown will meet at the Australian Football Ground. Of the two, Paddington has the better record of the season's games to date, but the side is not playing up to its early form, and the loss of R. Watts, both as player and captain, will probably be felt in to-day's contest. Newtown, on the other hand, have come on wonderfully and, though their combination is far from perfect, should prove a hard side to beat. The match should be a close and interesting one, and may prove to be the best of the series. Next Saturday Sydney and South Sydney play the second semi-final match, and the winner of that will meet the victor of to-day's engagement in the final for the season's honours.

League officials in Messrs. H. Beatson and F. Barber, will act as goal umpires in connection with to-day's match.

FINAL FOR THE SECOND-GRADE PREMIERSHIP.

Northern Districts and Paddington II. meet to-day at the Australian Football Ground in the premiership final. The match will be played as an early fixture to the League semi-final, and will start at 1.30 p.m.

Following are the fixtures:—

Paddington v Newtown (League semi-final), Australian Football Ground, 3.15 p.m. (Field Umpire, T. Richardson). Northern Districts v Paddington II. (second-grade premiership final), Australian Football Ground, 1.30 p.m. (G. W. Petrie, field umpire).

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

A GOOD DAY AT EPPING.

Quite a championship programme is set down for decision to-day at Epping, and, as the four teams engaged have an even chance of winning the premiership honours, the games should produce football of more than ordinary quality. The men are boxing at 9st 9lb, the English lightweight limit. Wells has never been seen in a contest here before, but he and Mehegan have already twice met. On each occasion matters were evenly contested, and whereas Mehegan won the first match on a foul, Wells won the second on points. Both men have been assiduously training for weeks, and the question whether Mehegan's superior strength will triumph over Wells' speed will be hard to decide. Mr. R. L. Baker will referee the contest.

The doors will be open at 6 o'clock, and the match will commence at 8.30.

Mr. L. S. Woolcott, solicitor, of 88 Pitt-street, Sydney, has been appointed a commissioner for affidavits of the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

AMUSEMENTS.

ADELINE GENEE SEASON.

Mlle. Adeline Genee is to appear with M. Alexander Volinin and the Imperial Russian Ballet next Saturday at Her Majesty's. The celebrated dancer will present her favourite ballet, "Coppelia." She will dance it in its entirety. Owing to the difficulty of certain parts, it is usual for dancers to curtail the ballet, but Mlle. Genee will not follow that example. "There is only one ballet to my mind," she says, "that has a story and a plot of its own. It is 'Coppelia;' but it requires the deepest art-devotion to bring out the plot in all its interest. I also do 'Coppelia' with a comic vein." Genee is said to perpetuate the best traditions of the eighteenth century classic school of dancing that flowered in the golden years of Taglioni, and her visit to Sydney should prove of the greatest interest. Famous exponents of the sister arts have visited Australia, but never previously has such a famous dancer appeared here. The programme is announced in full this morning, and indicates a rich entertainment. Besides "Coppelia," the music of which is by Delibes, Mlle. Genee will appear in "Les Sylphides," to the music of Chopin. In the ballets, she will be assisted by M. Volinin and Mlle. Schmolz, and the Imperial Russian Ballet. Several unique advertisements are also promised, and a complete operetta, "The Secret of Suzanne," by Wolf Ferrari. A grand opera orchestra of nearly 50 instrumentalists will accompany the distinguished artists. All booking arrangements are duly notified.

THE CLARA BUTT-RUMFORD CONCERTS.

The last appearance of Madame Clara Butt and F. W. Kennerley Rumford for some considerable time takes place in the Town Hall this evening, and a great audience will no doubt gather to bid them adieu. For the occasion an attractive programme has been arranged. Mme. Butt will sing "Che Faro," from "Orfeo," Gluck; "The Fairy Piper," Brewer; "Be Good," Leoni; and Elgar's new patriotic ballad, "The King's Way;" and Handel's "Largo" will be given as an extra number. Mr. Kennerley Rumford will sing "Thou'rt Passing Hence," Sullivan; Alfred Hill's popular Maori song, "Waiata Poi;" "Largo al Factotum," from the "Barber of Seville;" "How Deep the Slumber!" and Harold Traxton's "Kitty." Mr. William Murdoch will be heard in "Old Londonderry Air," arranged by Percy Grainger, Prelude B flat, Rachmaninow, Prelude "Cesar Franck." Mr. Mowat Carter will play "Polonaise Vieuxtemps," "Poeme" Fibich, Moto Perpetuo," Ries. Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce that some rows of seats at 7s 6d will be opened this morning in the body of the hall, as the galleries are nearly filled. Five hundred tickets at 2s 6d, and a similar number at 5s, will be sold at the doors to-night. The plan and tickets will be at Searle's this afternoon.

SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The Sydney Symphony Orchestra, under the conductorship of Mr. Joseph Bradley, will give its final concert of the 1913 season at the Town Hall this afternoon, at 3 o'clock. The programme to be presented will include the first performance in Sydney of Mr. Alfred Hill's Maori Rhapsody, Tchaikovsky's "Pathetique Symphony," and Sir Edward Elgar's overture, "Cockaigne," and will bring forward Mr. Laurence Godfrey Smith in the Rubinstein Concerto, and Miss Bertha Dickens, soprano, who will sing the aria from "Louise" (Charpentier), "Absence" (Berlioz), and "Songs My Mother Taught Me" (Dvorak). The plan is at Nicholson's.

BENEFIT TO MISS HARRIE IRELAND.

On Tuesday afternoon, at the Adelphi Theatre, kindly lent for the occasion by George Marlow, Ltd., whose entire staff will assist, a benefit entertainment will be given in honour of that favourite actress, Miss Harrie Ireland. A strongly attractive programme will introduce Mr. Fred Niblo in a laughable monologue, Miss Beatrice Holloway and Mr. Robert Greig in the new comedy sketch, "A Man's Way;" Miss Grace Palotta, Miss Blanche Browne, Miss Jessie Lonnen, Mr. Leslie Holland, and Mr. Jack Cannot in special items; the George Marlow Company, headed by Miss Ethel Buckley and Mr. Cyril Mackay, will stage act 2 of "At Cripple Creek;" Mr. William Anderson will send two special turns from "The Grafters" Company; while the Tivoli Theatre will be represented by the De Bruns and Mr. George Whitehead; and the National Amphitheatre by Miss Jessie Wilton and Peg and The Limit. Mr. Walter Baker will recite, and Mr. Sid Macdonald will swell the vocal items. Mr. George Willoughby is hon. organiser, and Mr. Ross B. Simpson hon. secretary of the matinee, the plan for which is at Paling's.

THE NORDICA FAREWELL CONCERTS.

It will be gratifying news to the many admirers of Madame Nordica to hear that the great operatic soprano has created quite a sensation in Melbourne. Press criticisms are especially enthusiastic. The plans made before her departure will permit of Nordica's return to Sydney on the 19th inst, and she will enter on her series of farewell concerts on August 20, continuing on the 23rd, 27th, and 30th. At the same time Mr. Fred Shipman has made special arrangements so that popular prices will prevail during the farewell season. The prima donna will, as formerly, be supported by Messrs. Paul Dufault, Franklin Holding, and Romayne Simmons. The box plans will open at Paling's on Friday next.

THEATRE ROYAL.

"A Butterfly on the Wheel" still maintains its close hold upon the affections of playgoers at the Theatre Royal, where the comedy passages in a scene which might be renamed "The Liars" cause uproarious laughter, followed in the next act by the emotional tension of the Divorce Court, in which Mr. Lewis Waller and Miss Madge Titheradge carry all before them. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" has been drawing large audiences on its brief revival at Her Majesty's Theatre, where, accordingly, no further change will be made. Mr. Fred Niblo will continue to appear in the bustling character of the "Crook" who took Battlesburg by storm until next Thursday evening, when the last performance of the laughable piece will be given.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"The Dancing Mistress" brings forward Miss Blanche Browne in the title role at the Criterion Theatre, where her duet, "Fly Away, Jack," with Mr. Leslie Holland, an adventurous airman, is encored nightly. Misses Grace Palotta, Jessie Lonnen, Olive Godwin, and Billie Barlow, Messrs. Jack Cannot, Frank Greene, and other favourite artists are in this picturesque piece, of which a matinee will be given on Wednesday.

PALACE THEATRE.

At the Palace Theatre, where there will be a final matinee of "The Speculators" on Wednesday next, the season of the new American Musical Burlesque Company is drawing to a close, and Mr. William Anderson announces the farewell for Friday evening next. Uproarious laughter attends the hunt for the missing scrip, and the latest songs, action-choruses, and ballets contribute to the success of the humorous entertainment.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

"Her Road to Ruin," the new melodrama by the author of "The Monk and the Woman," is drawing large audiences at the Adelphi Theatre, where Miss Ethel Buckley, Miss Nellie Ferguson, and Mr. Cyril Mackay, with Mr. C. R. Stanford as the Bishop, figure prominently in an exciting story, in which the downfall of the Bishop's lady secretary is traced to the machinations of his unprincipled nephew. A series of picturesque scenes illustrates the new play.

"THE NATIVE BORN."

"The Native Born," a new Australian play by "Albert Edmunds," which recently claimed a large measure of success in Melbourne, will have its initial production in Sydney on Saturday next, when the Bert Bailey Dramatic Company will reappear at the Palace Theatre after a most prosperous season in the sister State. "The Native Born" is set in the picturesque country of the Mount Kosciusko district, with an exciting scene enacted amidst the falling snow on the top of the mountain; and there are other fine stage effects. Mr. Bert Bailey will be seen in a unique character, that of Charlie Spinnifex, magician, hypnotist, and wonder worker. Mr. Guy Hastings, Miss Ada Oakley, Miss Lillias Adeson, Miss Laura Roberts, and other favourites will appear. Mr. Richard Bellairs has joined the combination. On Monday morning at 10 o'clock the box plan will be opened at Paling's.

LITTLE THEATRE.—"PUNCHINELLOS."

This evening the stage of the Little Theatre will be occupied by eight smart Punchinellos, under the direction of J. D. Pilcher. This new combination of artists in song, dance, and story will comprise Misses Bel Steele, Ida Newton, Ruby Guest, Nellie Murphey, Geraldine Morton, Messrs. Bert Barton, Reg. Harrison, Andrew Betts, Alec Black, and Bennett C. Mackenzie. They will present a clever and original entertainment, which should readily maintain the popularity of the picturesque playhouse, Mr. W. Noble in charge of the "front," as usual.

PRINCESS THEATRE.

The J. C. Bain Vaudeville Entertainers at the Princess Theatre continue to play to good houses, the standard of the entertainments having been above the average for some time. To-day at the matinee several new artists will be added to the bill, including Lazern (the mystic) and the Four Holmar (sensational acrobats). A change of programme will be given by Con Moreni, Pearl Livingstone, Arthur Tunchett, Two Sevfters, Martin Sisters, Harry Rocks, Ivan Marshall, Skinner and Ritson, Mark Erickson, Irene Smith, and George Sorlie.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

On Saturday next Spencer's Pictures, Ltd., will screen at the Lyceum Theatre for the first time in Australia a complete show film descriptive of the Paul J. Rainey hunt in East Africa. The series forms a complete record of the exhibition, which traversed the whole of the jungles of British East Africa in search of big game. The film possesses a unique educational value, as practically every kind of wild beast inhabiting the wilds of Africa is shown in its native haunts. The history of the expedition will be told by Mr. Forrest Doolittle, who arrived from New York on Saturday last by the R.M.S. Marama under engagement to the Spencer management. There will be a matinee of "Australia Calls" and the Kinetophone to-day.

WEST'S OLYMPIA.

At to-day's matinee and evening performances the last presentation of the sensational success entitled "Kelly from the Emerald Isle" will be given at the Olympia, Oxford-street. This picture attracted big houses throughout the week. On Monday, in addition to the usual new series of London's latest pictorial gems, there will be a startling animal photoplay entitled "Wamba, or the Child of the Jungle." This picture teems with animal life sensations, and has a strong human interest. De Groen's band will supply the incidental music.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

The Mawson expedition pictures have proved so attractive at the Crystal Palace Theatre that the management has resolved to extend the season, and they will be shown until Wednesday evening next. The views are excellent in every way, for they show practically every phase of the perilous trip. There is also an appropriate programme of musical items.

EMPRESS THEATRE.

Next week is billed as Vitagraph week at the Empress Theatre, where on Monday next will be shown a two-part drama entitled "Hearts of the First Empire." This is a story of the Napoleon period. The mid-week change will introduce John Bunny as a Pickwick. The scenes have been photographed on the spots made famous by Dickens.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

"The Battle of Paardeburg" will be the star picture of the new programme to be introduced at the Colonial Theatre on Monday next. This story is founded on the famous battle fought during the Boer War. There will be a strong supporting programme.

A dramatic picture entitled "Face to Face" will be the star picture of the new bill at the Lyric Theatre on Monday next. This will be supported by "The Haunted House," "Uncle Oscar's Flirtation," "Jean and Her Family," a Vitagraph educational feature, and "The India Rubber Comedian."

The current programme will be shown for the last time throughout to-day. The feature films of this bill are "The Panther's Prey," "For Her," and "The Irony of Fate," with a strong supporting programme.

THE GLACIARIUM.

At the Glaciarium to-night there will be a farewell to the interstate hockey team, and a match will be played between a selected combination and the next best. Professor Witte will also give one of his interesting demonstrations of fancy skating. The annual carnival, which will be entitled "The Last Days of Pompeii," will take place on August 21.

Do you know what it means to you to have brakes on all four wheels?

Less wear and tear on tyres; a gradual or sudden retardation, without that nasty chatter or jar; all tendency to skid or side-slip through applying the brakes obviated. No strain imposed on the axle or cardan shaft, or universal joints, as with an ordinary foot brake.

THE ARGYLL is the ONLY CAR FITTED with this Successful System of Braking.

THE SILENT "F.N."

ECONOMY PLUS RELIABILITY.

We could tell you the story of the "F.N.'s" many claims to your consideration, but the owners of these cars are so enthusiastic concerning their merits that we prefer to give you their version, based on the experiences met with after long and severe trials. Here are a few nutshell opinions culled from letters received from users of "F.N." cars:—

"After 30,000 miles, as good as the day we bought it." "Not one single stoppage through fault of engine or gear." "Economical as regards petrol, and light on tyres." "Hard to beat for reliability." "Entire satisfaction in every respect." "Staunch, and a good hill-climber."

10-14 H.P. 16-24 H.P.

4 YEARS WITHOUT A STOP.

The real test of a Motor Car is not what it will do this year or next year, but after three or four years' hard work. Here is a letter from a Motorist, who has been running his "F.N." car for four years, and is therefore an authority on the all-important subject of the "F.N.'s" reliability:—

12th January, 1913.

Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in recording my complete satisfaction with "F.N." Cars. I have been running a 14-16 h.p. for nearly four years, and have never had an involuntary engine-stop. The Car is staunch, a good hill-climber, as may be shown by the fact that just lately, after a hard run in the country of several days, she came up the New Victoria Pass with a good load of luggage, as well as two heavy passengers, on second gear. I find the car economical as regards petrol, and light on tyres. I have owned several makes of cars, and now hope I shall never be without an "F.N."—Yours faithfully.

"The S.C.A.T. Car, which I purchased from you some seven (7) months ago has given me every satisfaction, and has proved equal to many severe tests which it has been put to on the country roads of New South Wales. The distance covered by the Car in the seven months is seven (7) thousand miles. The Car, though only a 15-20, is a powerful hill-climber when loaded to its full capacity of five persons. Generally speaking, the Car is a very economical, honest, and efficient make."

WHEN YOUR AMERICAN BUILDS

something exceptionally good, something with an individuality all its own, he frequently fastens to it the name of a distinguished American. And, then, realising that this "something exceptionally good" must be worthy of the eminent name it bears, he imparts to every bit of it a high standard, and continues to keep it high, and to lavish all his thought and skill upon it, until it becomes, in its way, as eminent as the great name with which it is associated. Such is the history, in brief, of

THE FAMOUS "CADILLAC!"

This prince of American cars is named after the great explorer, Cadillac, who discovered the territory in which the city of Detroit is located. Detroit is the great centre of the motor car industry in the United States. There motor mechanics occupies the public mind in no small degree; it is talked of everywhere; notes are compared, and the spirit of emulation in car-building is widespread. And as a consequence when the American builds a car

HE BUILDS IT WELL!

So well, that there have been some 500 "Cadillacs" purchased in Australasia during the last ten years; and practically all of those originally purchased are still on the roads.

Eminent Comedian Fred. Niblo is an American. . . . He has just purchased from us a "Cadillac." . . . which is not without significance.

A postcard will bring full particulars to you.

IT IS COMMON TALK AMONG MOTORISTS THAT THE

popularity is due to their economy in tyres and naphtha. THIS IS ONLY HALF THE TRUTH. They certainly are the most economical cars to run. You get a bigger mileage from your naphtha and tyres than you would from any other make of Car.

BUT THE WHOLE TRUTH is that the STAR CAR ON STEEL WHEELS

IS AN ALL-BRITISH BUILT MACHINE. It is constructed from the best materials procurable under the most advantageous conditions by skilled engineers. It is machinery that uses the naphtha; the engineering skill that designs the car, and the workmanship that puts it together, all combined that accounts for the low cost of upkeep. One wrong note struck in the chord spoils the harmony of the music, one error in the construction of a Car spoils the car. OVERLAND QUALITY.

Forty prominent German Engineers, in an effort to find a weak spot, tore down an OVERLAND that had run over 50,000 miles. They could not find one single flaw on a single part. OVERLAND value has always puzzled and astounded the world, but when you take into consideration the economy of building 40,000 cars a year you have the answer. Many well-advertised factories do not turn out 1000 cars per year.

We want you to come and examine the OVERLAND, fitted with the latest SELF-STARTING and SELF-LIGHTING ELECTRIC EQUIPMENT.

WHEN PURCHASING A MOTOR CYCLE, WHAT DO YOU DEMAND?

What cardinal traits do you look for in the ideal Motor Cycle? You want simplicity—for simplicity ensures efficiency.

You want a machine that has been built to give wear—a Motor Cycle that will serve you every day for years. You want a Motor Cycle that has been built with care, and that stands for sound mechanical standards.

You want a Machine in which the Manufacturer has minimised trouble. In short, you want.

THE 3½-H.P. "SPEEDWELL" MOTOR CYCLE.

For, in this machine, you get all the above points combined in one. Improvements and innovations are apparent at every point. The construction includes only the costliest materials, methods, and equipment. The Engine—strong, rigid, troubleless—is better and combines more all-round efficiency than any other on the market.

In fact, from every point of view, the 3½ h.p. "Speedwell" Motor Cycle is ideal—the machine to fill every need.

Ponder over these statements—we are ready to back them up at any time, and to prove that what we say is true. Inspection invited. Booklets free.

WOLSELEY EXPERIENCE.

The manufacturers of WOLSELEY AUTO-CARS, VICKERS, SONS, AND MAXIM, have had nearly 100 years' experience in the building and invention of all classes of machinery, and have had the longest experience of any other motor car builders in the World. It is time and experience that tell; all the little faults are found out and remedied. The proper treatment of metals is the most important feature of any car; no one will deny the fact that VICKERS, SONS AND MAXIM have forgotten more about the treatment of metals than any other firm ever knew, and it is also a fact that many of the leading motor manufacturers advertise that they use VICKERS' metals in the most vital parts of their cars. A WOLSELEY CAR is as quiet on first, second, and third gear as it is on top gear. This can be said of no other car. Why? Because they have not had the experience, the machinery, or the factory to get these true results.

VICKERS, SONS, AND MAXIM are the builders of the greater part of the British, Japanese, Brazilian, and Chilian Navies.

One can quite understand that a firm of this magnitude, with its enormous capital and resources, would only require experience, and this is just what has put the WOLSELEY CAR in a class by itself, and made it 10 years ahead of any other car.

VICKERS' PATENT SELF-STARTER.

ALL WOLSELEY CARS are now fitted with VICKERS' PATENT SELF-STARTER, which is invaluable to the owner-driver, as it starts the engine at any time with ease from the driver's seat, even when cold, and inflates the tyres in a few seconds.

Write for booklet "A WOLSELEY IN THE MAKING," showing how the only car in the World is built from the molten metal to the last coat of varnish.

CLEMENT-BAYARD CARS.

The 8/9-h.p. Model, designed to meet the popular demand for light, low-priced cars, of PROVED QUALITY, now holds a position that is unassailable, as the following letter shows:—

"Sydney, July 23rd, 1913.

"Dear Sirs,—In reply to your inquiry respecting the 4-cyl. 8/9-h.p. Clement Bayard Runabout, purchased from you in September last, we have pleasure in stating that the car has proved to be a sound and reliable proposition. For a period of five months, a former traveller of ours had it in use on the Northern and North-Western Lines, and part of the Northern Rivers, during which time he covered approximately 8000 miles without a single mechanical stop. He informs us that it is a splendid hill-climber, he having crossed without difficulty every range of Mountains between Sydney and Glen Innes. Two of the tyres (750 x 85) supplied with the car lasted approximately 6000 miles, one about 7000 miles, and the remaining tyre was in use, and quite good, at the finish of the above trip. As you are aware, the car returned to Sydney in practically new condition, only a few slight repairs being necessary. Yours faithfully, McEUEN and CO."

In fact, these have proved so successful that the Manufacturers have now produced which can now be seen at our garage, together with the latest shipment of 8/9-h.p.'s, which contain many distinct improvements.

PERMANENTLY ERADICATED BY

RADIOLYSIS.

RADIOLYSIS is the latest scientific process for removing hair, and supersedes every other known process.

It is absolutely sure, failure is impossible, the root, follicle, etc., of every hair is destroyed, and there is no possibility of a regrowth. There is no after-effect, no scars, no indication that hair ever grew on the part treated.

THE MARTIN RADIOLYSIS CO., THE WORLD'S LEADING SPECIALISTS ON SUPERFLUOUS HAIR GROWTHS, etc., guarantee to eradicate any growth of superfluous hair undertaken, or to refund all fees paid. A booklet on RADIOLYSIS will be posted free to any address under sealed cover.

THE WORLD'S MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

testify to the fact that Valaze is a beautifier of the complexion—its preserver and restorer. It is a skin food, which revitalises the tissue and gives a smooth, flawless skin. Its use ensures against wrinkles, lines, and crowsfeet, skin blemishes, and ruin of the complexion by sun, wind, or cold. It keeps your skin beautiful, perfect, enviable.

Unaided by massage or rubbing—and only by mere contact with the skin—Valaze sinks down, down into the deeper layers of the skin, and stimulates, exhilarates, feeds, and beautifies it. The price of this invaluable preparation is 3/6 and 6/6 a jar. Postage 6d.

Because Valaze does not pose as a cure-all, Mme. Rubinstein recommends the following exclusive preparations:—Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore Cure, which banishes these disfigurements, cures a greasy, coarse skin, and assists in preserving a healthy complexion. Price, 2/10, posted.

Valaze Liquidine, a remarkable preparation, which, acting directly on the pores and freeing them from the waste matter which clogs them, prevents blackheads, pimples, redness, coarseness, and shine. Price, 5/ and 8/6. Postage 6d.

Mme. Rubinstein is the first Complexion Specialist to differentiate between the dry, moist, oily, shiny, and normal skin when advising the use of powder. She, therefore, supplies Valaze Complexion Powder for the dry, over-moist, and shiny skins, and Novena Poudre for dry and normal skins, each in three tints, 2/, 3/, and 5/ a box. Postage 3d.

Valaze Hair Tonic goes to the root of all hair troubles, restores the vital principle to the hair follicles, and produces luxuriant growth where the natural process is sluggish. Its antiseptic qualities are on a par with the power it possesses of preserving the hair and giving it softness and gloss. Price 3/6 a bottle. Postage 6d. This tonic is very easily, effectively, and economically applied by means of the Pneumatic Comb. Passing the Comb through the hair the fluid runs imperceptibly through the hollow teeth right down into the scalp, without at all disturbing the most elaborate coiffure. Price, 2/9 posted.

Mme. Rubinstein's book, "Beauty in the Making," will be sent to any address on receipt of 3d for postage. All Valaze preparations obtainable leading chemists, or direct from Helena Rubinstein Prop., Ltd., Dept. D., 158 Pitt-street, Sydney; or 274 Collins-street, Melbourne.

FACE MASSAGE,

if properly applied, improves the skin greatly by increasing the sluggish circulation, emptying out the occluded pores of harmful secretions, giving tone to the skin itself, through the agency of proper exercise, so commonly neglected; and finally builds up the lazy, tired, and unused, or wrongly used muscles of the face.

ONE TREATMENT WILL CONVINCE.

I give my personal attention to every lady, and each lady has a separate room.
